Sam Berman

Newton doctor starts acting career at 73

BOSTON — Dr. Sam S. Berman, now 73, is embarking on a second career - acting.

Appearing as Pa Fisher in George Kelly's comedy "The Show-Off," at the Lyric Stage, 54 Charles St., Boston, Berman is the author of "The Boston Police Diet and Weight Control Program."

This best-selling book, published in 1972, was the result of a nine-year weight control program Dr. Berman undertook with the Boston Police Department, during which 26,000 lbs. were lost by about 400 volunteer policemen.

So successful was this program that Dr. Berman traveled nationally to help implement it in police departments across America.

Show business is a natural avenue for a doctor, according to Berman. The former "family doctor" who has been living in Newton for 30 years, says: "A lot of doctors, particularly, are showmen. The old family doctor had to act to instill confidence in the patient and the family.'

After a career of healing the sick as "family doctor," extensive combat time in the Army's Medical Corp in World War II, work with Boston's Police Department on obesity and research on premature aging, Berman began acting with the New Wrinkle Theater this past year before his role in "The Show-Off."

"The Show-Off" is a sometimes neglected gem of American comedy. The comedy by George Kelly (Princess Grace's uncle) is the story of a loveable braggart named Aubrey Piper who brings merriment and chaos into the quiet Fisher household after he marries the youngest daughter. Berman plays the role of Pa Fisher, a witty curmudgeon who cannot, and will not, ever be comfortable with mad and merry Aubrey.

"The Show-Off" is playing at the Lyric Stage through June 21. Performances are Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 8 p.m. and Saturdays at 5 and 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 to $6.50 depending on the evening. Group and senior citizen discounts are available. For information and reservations phone 742-8703.

All police department personnel, active and retired, will be able to see "The Show-Off" on Wednesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m. and Saturdays at 5 p.m. with a special two for the price of one discount.

Ossinger trial ends in disarray

WEST NEWTON — A pre-trial conference is scheduled June 18 in the appeal of Diana Ossinger's conviction of larcency charges last week.

Ossinger, found guilty by Judge Stanley Jablonski last week in Newton District Court of 44 counts of larceny over $100 in the case of Mayor Theodore Mann's missing paycheck funds.

The trial came to an emotional conclusion last Thursday afternoon.

As District Atty. John Lawlor completed his closing argument against Ossinger, the defendant gasped, beginning an emotional outburst which grew in intensity through Judge Jablonski's find of "guilty" and ended with her vow to take revenge against Lawlor and Mann.

Ossinger received a three-year suspended sentence in the House of Correction and six years probation. She was also ordered by Jablonski to do 15 hours per week of public service work for two years and to make restitution to the extent determined possible by the probation department of the more that $24,000 she was found guilty of stealing from the mayor.

When Jablonski returned to the bench after a 25-minute recess and announced, "I find sufficient facts to find the defendant guilty on all counts," there was bedlam in the courtroom.

Several members of the partisan Ossinger crowd wept openly and Mrs. Ossinger's 19-year-old son, Donald, sobbed loudly and had to be restrained from going after Lawlor.

The defendant turned toward her son in the specatator's section and pleaded with him to stay calm saying, "I'll get even with them myself."

As Jablonski returned to his chambers to determine sentencing, a court guard ordered the courtroom cleared. Ossinger was overheard in the corridor outside the courtroom: "They've ruined me, they've ruined my mother, and they've ruined my son."

The case will go before a six-member jury in Cambridge court for an appeal.

Lawlor asked that Ossinger be given a one-year prison sentence with parole after six months, but the judge did not follow the suggestion in his sentencing.

Lawlor also urged the judge to order restitution and Ossinger shouted, "I am not going to pay back one cent I didn't steal."

Ossinger has maintained her innocence throughout the investigation and trial. She took the stand in her own defense and denied the crime, saying she never "cashed the mayor's payroll checks or altered the restrictive endorsement 'for deposit only'."

Mayor Mann, contacted at his office last Friday morning, said he viewed the trial's result with "mixed emotion."

"Judge Jablonski's decision speaks for itself," the mayor said. "I think it is fair to say that for my family, my wife and myself, this has been a terrible experience."

Connolly, Mann drop out of race

Then there were five.

What started as a 16-person scramble after U.S. Congressman Robert F. Drinan was forced by the Vatican to retire from politics has evolved into a four-way Democratic race and a single Republican hopeful.

When the state filing deadline came and went yesterday, and all the dust had settled, three more dropped from the field.

Withdrawing from the race yesterday were Democrats Herbert Connolly of Newton and Jon Rotenberg of Brookline.

Connolly immediately threw his support to Waltham Mayor Arthur J. Clark, who shares with Connolly a conservative view.

Newton Mayor Theodore Mann dropped out of the congressional race ,leaving Richard Jones of Harvard as the only Republican contender.

Mann said he prefers to concentrate on his job as Newton's mayor.

The mayor said he does not intend to endorse anyone at this time.

His early departure from the race apparently had little to do with party politics. Mann, a well-known Republican, said he doesn't know Jones.

Asked why he would abandon the field to several strong Democratic candidates, Mann said "I'm comfortable with the range of candidates, let's leave it at that."

The Democratic candidates are Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, State Rep. Barney Frank, who recently moved into the district, Newton State Rep. David Mofenson, and Robert Schaffer, a Fitchburg businessman.

Mann, Frank and Mofenson are all comfortable with Drinan's positions.

In a statement announcing his decision, Mann said "I have decided that the responsibilities of my present office and the challenges still awaiting me in it afford me the greatest opportunity to serve the people who have been so generous with their support over these many years.

"My candidacy, although it would offer a very reasonable option, would require that I devote substantial time away from my responsibities as Mayor," Mann said.

Mann will not only stay at City Hall but he says he has no interest in higher elected office.

Although only ten percent of the votes in the district are registered Republicans, Mann said polls taken several years ago by a group he could not remember showed him to be a strong contender. The polls he said pitted him against the incumbent and a number of potential challengers.

The mayor's decision assures Jones a place on the ballot, challenging the survivor of the Democratic primary.

Mann had the necessary 5000 certified signatures to have his name placed on the ballot but the signatures were not filed.

Mann has had occasional health problems in recent years and was called to testify last week in the trial of his former personal secretary who was found guilty of stealing $24,000 from Mann's pay checks over a period of several years.

Diana Ossinger, who Mann fired after discovering all his paychecks had not been deposited in his credit union account, has appealed the guilty finding to a jury trial.

The Democratic field pits Waltham's Clark against two more liberal candidates, Frank, formerly of the Back Bay but now living in Newton, and liberal Newton Rep. Mofenson. Newcomer Shaffer, who runs a speed reading course in Fitchburg, is, like Clark, more conservative than Frank or Mofenson.

Connolly and Clark apparently agreed that Connolly's continued presence in the campaign would only split the conservative vote. Now only Shaffer remains to draw on Clark's more natural constituency.

Mofenson and Frank, meanwhile, must continue their battle for liberal support.

Connolly announced his decision at a State House press con ference.

The candidates have until Friday to withdraw from the race.

$380,000 to fix Warren

NEWTON—Reconstruction of the section of Warren Junior High School damaged by fire in December will cost $380,000.

The Public Facilities Committee gave initial approval to the appropriation request from Building Commissioner Allan Fraser Wednesday night.

A cafeteria and auditorium will be constructed on the first floor. The second floor will not be rebuilt and will be used for storage space.

Permits could hamper low-income housing

NEWTON — Special permits will be required to construct multi-family housing in business districts the Board of Aldermen decided Monday.

The controversial zoning amendment offered by Alderman Ethel Sheehan has had an up and down existence in recent weeks.

Approved unanimously a month ago, the measure was reconsidered by Alderman Richard McGrath and defeated, then reconsidered again by Alderman Bruce Carmichael.

Monday the amendment was approved on a 17 to 5 vote. Sixteen votes were needed for passage.

Board President Matthew Jefferson's ruling that the second reconsideration was out of order was overturned by a 14-8 margin.

It has been argued that the amendment will make it more difficult to build low income housing in Business A and Business B Districts.

Proponents of the legislation claim the low income issue is a red herring; that the amendment is only designed to give the board greater control over developments.

The city has obtained low income units in the past under the so-called 10 percent ordinance that requires a housing developer to set aside 10 percent of the units for low income residents in exchange for a density bonus.

Land Use Chairman Terry Morris said there is little open space left for construction of housing and little chance to employ the 10 percent ordinance. He suggested the ordinance could be applied to housing in business districts through the Sheehan amendment.

He also argued that Newton's village system is unique and that the amendment will protect business districts.

There has been little effort to promote low income housing in the past five years, Alderman Dominic Taglienti said and housing units less than 1,250 square feet in business districts already require board approval.

Nonantum residents were frustrated by a lack of control over the recent construction of two apartment buildings near Adams Street, Alderman Joseph DePasquale said.

Alderman Paul Daley thinks the amendment is an across-the-board reaction to an attempt to construct four units in Oak Hill Park. Apartments are more desirable in a residential setting and use of business zoned land for housing won't bring the maximum financial return, Daley indicated.

Jefferson said there is a potential housing will not be built in business zones if Board of Aldermen approval is required.

With the Oak Hill Park proposal "all hell broke loose," Jefferson said and the Sheehan amendment the plan "would never see the light of day."

Mrs. Sheehan conceded the Oak Hill proposal was the impetus for the amendment, but not the only reason. Newton Centre, she said, could be exposed to the same type of development.

MBTA public hearing on fare increases here

NEWTON — A public hearing will be held by the MBTA Monday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m., Newton North High School auditorium, 360 Lowell Ave., Newtonville.

The MBTA is required to hold public hearings under the Urban Mass Transportation Act so that the public can comment on the proposed fare increases.

After the hearings, also scheduled to be held in several other locations next Monday, the MBTA will consider the effect on energy conservation and the economic, environmental and social impacts of the fare increases before they are implemented, as well as comments made at the hearings.

The proposed fare increases include provisions that all fares on rapid rail lines now at 25 cents be raised to 50 cents, now at 50 cents be raised to 75 cents, now at 75 cents be raised to $1.

Proposed round-trip fares on the Green Line are: 75 cents for Reservoir-Fenway, $1 for Riverside through Chestnut Hill, $1 between Zone 1 and Zone 2, $1.25 between Zone 1 and the subway, and $1.50 between Zone 2 and the subway.

Fares for older people, students, children, and the handicapped that are now reduced fares would stay at present levels.

The MBTA also proposes that an experimental program allowing prepaid pass holders to travel with one other person at no extra charge on Sundays.

Paul Gillis (second left) accepts a Certificate of Appreciation for service to senior citizens at the Newton Highlands Drop-in Center. With him are (from left): Steve Moskowitz, assistant director of human services; Judith Brier, center coordinator; and Howard Lipton, director of human service services for Newton.

We believe that today's economy shouldn't cost you the opportunity to purchase a car, attend college or make home improvements.

Earlier this year the Federal Government made it known that we Americans must be more prudent and cautious when using credit. Shawmut agrees totally. Credit must be used wisely by us, as bankers, and you, as consumers.

We also believe that credit for essential purchases must be available. This year, many of you must buy cars, pay tuition or make home improvements. At Shawmut we understand that. We want you to know that we're here with the funds you need to make these necessary purchases.

In today's economy, we're the one you'll stay with. Because, even in times like these, you're the one we'll stand by.

Newton Catholic graduation

NEWTON — Newton Catholic High School held commencement exercises for 51 graduating seniors May 30.

Valedictorian Maria Christina Farina, giving her address at the liturgical ceremony, expressed her belief in her classmates' abilities to incorporate into their daily lives the affection and knowledge they shared during the past four years.

She emphasized the need of making "every today a day worth treasuring," and challenged her classmates "to seek the bridge of friendship that leads to companionship, affection, understanding and gladness."

Salutatorian Eva M. Caira opened the program at Our Lady Help of Christian's Church by welcoming the seniors and their guests to the concelebrated mass. She thanked all for "sharing in this special moment in our lives. lives."

Class officers Celeste Tedesco, Linda Belli and Linda DiFonzo gave readings, and seniors Ellen Battista, Denise Buchanan, Lisa Daley and Richard Desmond participated in the offertory procession.

Following the valedictory address, School Administrator Rev. Robert Fichtner and Principal Sister Joan Duffy, presented the diplomas.

Senior Class President Dino Rossi made the concluding remarks, and a reception followed in the high school auditorium.

Concelebrants of the mass were Rev. Fitchner, Msgr. William Granville, Msgr. John McManmon, and Rev. Robert L. Connors, Rev. Francis LeBrun, Rev. Joseph Scorzello.

Perspectives

Strong moves by King on T

Gov. King has finally stepped into the developing MBTA crisis. It is none too soon, since he was on a collision course with the system itself, management and unions, as well as with the Advisory Board.

His legislative package calls for sweeping change that involves a state takeover of mass transit, while communities within the metropolitan orbit will be underwriting bus and trolley service linking them to the Hub. Fair enough. Less reliance on local property taxes to underwrite the T is a desirable objective.

Under the present setup, cities and towns pick up half the deficit annually, amounting to some $160 million at the last accounting. Many have been getting less and less for their money as Chairman Robert L. Foster and the Advisory Board engaged in constant warfare, with Foster following a path of curtailment when he didn't get budget requests approved.

Foster's hiring powers recently were reduced and now, under terms of the King proposal, he could be on his way out. Secretary of Transportation Barry Locke would become the MBTA top man, with a general manager to require approval from the Advisory Board. Foster's chances of gaining that would be virtually non-existent.

Foster's fate is not the important element, however. Of principal importance to the municipalities drawn into the system with promises of shared control has been diminishing influence over policy and growing deficits. . . .

Although gains were made in many areas of the big transit facility over the past year, including equipment maintenance, the replacement of carriers and progress toward extension, the major problems haven't been effectively addressed.

They involve management control and productivity of the personnel. Generous union contracts have evolved over the yars from an alliance with the Legislature resulting fom patronage. Fringe benefits and overtime contribute heavily to the cost of operations.

King's Task Force missed this target in its recommendations several weeks ago. The governor had support of the unions in his 1978 campaign and there had been an apparent reluctance to displease.

The picture seems to be changing. Along with his own proposals for remedial legislation, Gov. King gave full endorsement .to a bill entered by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation which would restore many of the management rights relinquished in past negotiations. Without a more equitable labor-management relationship, there can be no serious gains in MBTA fiscal matters.

Although preoccupied with corruption-related measures, the General Court has abundant reason to give MBTA legislation high priority before it ends the current session. Property tax relief should be uppermost in the minds of area lawmakers.

Reagan's opportunity

Commentary
by Arnold Sawislak

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Sen. Edward Kennedy fights President Carter all the way to the Democratic national convention in August, Ronald Reagan will have more than two months to establish himself as the centrist candidate in the 1980 election.

What Reagan does with the time before the start of the fall campaign could be his most vital strategic decision.

If he can seize the broad middle ground of opinion and convince voters that his opponent is playing left field, Reagan could be the first since Franklin D. Roosevelt to deny a second term to an elected incumbent president.

But the former California governor has a problem. He built and retained his popularity within the Republican Party as a conservative purist and the right wing of the party remains his power base.

If the Democrats can fix in the voters' minds that Reagan is a rigid ideologue of the right, it is likely that Jimmy Carter will become the man in the middle. And that is where most winners in American politics come from.

Early on, some observers thought Reagan's age would hurt him. He answered that by with an energetic and wide-ranging campaign from February through May.

There also was speculation that Reagan beat himself with his mouth. But such gaffes as telling a Polish joke in the ethnic Northeast and drawing a blank on parity in Kansas did him no major damage.

But Reagan never really had to deal with the ideology issue during the campaign for the nomination. Even though George Bush demonstrated that Reagan could be beaten by a perceived moderate in big states like Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Michigan, Republicans elsewhere did not see that as a serious flaw for the fall campaign. Reagan went into the race as the most conservative of the major GOP candidates and emerged the ame way.

It is almost certain that the Democrats will attack Reagan as a right wing extremist. A likely starting point would be Reagan's anti-government campaign rhetoric.

Reagan actually has stated his objections to government in terms of conflict with the old-fashioned values of Americanism — independence, enterprise, freedom. But he has left himself open to hostile interpretation by picturing government almost as an evil in itself. In fact, except for the defense establishment, he has not differentiated between good and the bad in the federal government.

That leaves an opening for the Democrats. They tell groups such as the elderly, the farmers, the blacks and the city dwellers that Reagan have avoided specifics because the programs and agencies that he wants to get rid of are the ones that benefit them.

It is true that Carter ran an "anti-Washington" campaign in 1976, but he was careful to talk about making government less burdensome and more efficient. He always made clear he wanted to houseclean in Washington, not abolish it.

That is where Reagan can use the time he has gained by sewing up the nomination in May. He now has the leisure to stake out positions that will make it difficult for the Democrats to push him into an extremist corner later. He could begin by declaring just what activities of government he would kill off, change or continue.

Reagan may have been able to make Republicans cheer with flamboyant broadsides against that old devil government, but the techniques that won the GOP nomination may not work as well when the prize is the presidency. If the governor doesn't think so, he can ask Barry Goldwater. adv pms tues june 3

Black magic at White House

Commentary
by J.J. Smith

There's more than an element of black magic at the White House as President Jimmy Carter continues to goof with new levels of incompetence, yet seemingly retains a strong hold on the majority of those voting in his party's primaries. How else explain Jimmy Carter's dominance in the Democratic primaries over Teddy Kennedy? Here is a president who presides over an Administration in ruins. This is a "leader" who has produced the highest interest rates in American history, who has virtually quadrupled the inflation rate and has steered the nation into a recession. His track record on foreign policy defies analysis — neither friend nor foe has a reliable yardstick by which to guage the political signals emanating from Washington.

The economy is in deplorable shape. The Democrats may well lose the United States Senate. The president failed in Cuba when he was outfaced on the question of the Soviet brigade. He failed on Iran. He failed in the Afghanistan crisis. And he goofed on the Cuban refugees (first welcoming them and then rejecting them . Any president's foreign policy requires a thread of consistency — Jimmy Carter's has the strength and rigor of a wet strand of spaghetti.

As this is written, President Carter virtually has a lock on the Democratic presidential nomination. Barring a Kennedy miracle revival in the big June 3 primaries, the race for the Democratic nomination is all but over. But there are many convinced Carter will be re-elected president, too.

How come? Should the majority of America's voters take to the psychiatrist's couch? Do we have a death wish for the future of this great nation? Are we masochists at heart, most of us, and wriggle with delight at the political tortures inflicted on us by Jimmy Carter? Why else do we vote for him?

What we have seen is a president who six months ago was nowhere in the polls. Today he rolls to victory after victory; his support rather than eroding seems to grow in primary after primary on the bedrock of his mistakes. Voters support him against the Soviet Union, against Iran, against Cuba — overlooking totally that it was Carter's own incompetence that thrust these crises upon us.

This man who promised he would never lie to us bends and mutilates the truth with a boldness and chutzpah unparalleled in modern times. And he gets away with it'. He solemnly enunciates a policy, reverses it. And he gets away with it'. He presides over the disastrous effort to rescue the loses eight American lives' and somehow convinces hostages in Iran' his fellow Americans that he is blameless. Worse yet — chutzpah of chutzpah — a few days ago he welcomed home the crew of the USS Nimitz, the aircraft carrier that launched the abortive Iranian rescue mission, and told those sailors that they had helped save the lives of the American hostages in Tehran'.

This outrageous distortion of the facts seemingly was swallowed whole by the naive, or masochistic, American public. Have we reached a stage as a nation that we are so desperate for good news or for foreign policy "victories" that we will accept something as truth merely because our bornagain president tells us it is so? Save our hostages lives, indeed'.

Epitaph for Bush bid

Commentary by Robert Walters

WASHINGTON (NEA) - If an epitaph now must be written for George Bush's bid for the presidency, let it be noted that he campaigned with a measure of distinction, honor and integrity seldom seen in politics.

The Bush campaign was a class act in a vaudeville show crowded with performers who couldn't match his accomplishments, talent or perseverance.

With the exception of Ronald Reagan, Bush was the only candidate in the contest for the Republican presidential nomination to emerge victorious in any of the primaries or precinct caucuses.

Bush accomplished that feat no fewer than seven times — in Iowa, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia — despite the fact that Reagan, a presidential contender for more than a decade, has become almost a living legend in the Republican party.

Indeed, one of Bush's failings was his inability to develop and articulate a coherent rationale for his candidacy as an alternative to Reagan's bid for the nomination.

Personality differences also worked to Bush's disadvantage. Reagan successfully projected an image of a likable, charming man while Bush too often was perceived as tense and uneasy.

But on matters of substance, Bush's positions were the product of a sophisticated thought process. A fiscal conservative and a national security "hawk," he nevertheless was difficult to pigeon-hole philosophically because he came down on the liberal side of various domestic social issues.

Reagan, on the other hand, offered little more than the politics of nostalgia — the unfulfillable promise to return the nation to the supposed glories of the 1950s when the federal government was benign, the post-war economy was booming and the United States was virtually unchallenged as a military superpower.

Moderates traditionally have fared poorly in primaries, and Bush's problems were compounded because he was forced to play the role of the ideological man-in-the-middle, trapped between the conservative Reagan and the liberal Rep. John B. Anderson.

While Anderson was laying the foundation for an independent presidential campaign and Reagan was peddling stale nostrums, Bush was offering sensible proposals — but logic and common sense never have been especially saleable commodities in presidential campaigns.

If others are to be judged by the friends they make, politicians can be assessed by the staffs they assemble. Attracted to Bush's cause were many of the most able and talented people in contemporary politics — campaign manager James Baker, political organizers David Keene and David Sparks, press aides Peter Teeley and Susan Morrison and scores of others.

On the strategic level, Bush's great strength — and great weakness — was the decision to place most of his political eggs in two baskets: Iowa and New Hampshire, the states where the selection process began early in the year.

That strategy succeeded beyond even Bush's expectations in Iowa, where he was catapulated ahead of everyone else in the crowded field after winning that state's precinct caucuses. But he never fully recovered from a devastating loss to Reagan in New Hampshire.

The ensuing months were difficult for Bush, as Reagan methodically picked up delegate support, widened his lead and forced other opponents to abandon the race. But Bush carried on the fight while displaying courage, persistence and grace under pressure.

"Nobody ever said it would be easy," he joked on more than one occasion, "and nobody was right."

Bush's campaign ended as it had been conducted — with honor and dignity, devoid of complaints or recriminations. Perhaps the greatest compliment that can be paid to him is that he consistently was — and remains — a professional. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Will state watchdog trample rights?

Commentary
by Loring Swaim

BOSTON — House Speaker Tom McGee put the lie last week to charges he is stalling or telling others to stall on the landmark legislation to set up an Inspector General.

In a carefully crafted speech, the peppery McGee urged the House Ways and Means committee to report out promptly and positively the Inspector General bill — with certain modifications he believes in passionately.

Working with staff till 11:30 at night, then back at 7:30 in the morning, McGee put together and presented his best thinking on what mechanisms and what powers can effectively stem the tide of corruption vividly being brought to light by a special investigating commission. . McGee again finds himself one of the few major political figures in the state to go up front on these proposals. His Senate counterpart, Sen. Pres. Billy Bulger, remains silent and inaccessible, though privately supportive. Gov. King promises some kind of "statement" during the week, already having been upstaged somewhat by his maverick Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill who "urges action" on the bills Att. Gen. Frank Bellotti, a commission member, naturally supports the proposals. McGee's fear about the Inspector General concept is its potential for trampling on personal rights. "The principles that embody the essence of liberty and security," solemnly intoned the ordinarily earthy Speaker, "forbid all invasion, on the part of government, of the sanctity of a man's home and his private life without good and sufficient cause... It is easy to become an inquisition rather than an investigation... This office is important. To avoid abuses, to avoid invasions of privacy, to protect rights granted each citizen under the constitution, I off offer my suggestions."

There are, in fact, few precedents for so powerful and independent a watchdog as has here been proposed. Mindful of past excesses by crime commissions, McGee would move cautiously "until the Inspector General has proven his competence... The jurisdiction of the office can be broadened in the future."

McGee has long opposed the dispensing of subpoena powers except in extraordinary cases. At this stage he would authorize an I.G. to compel production only of books and records, not of testimony from private citizens. Federal inspectors general have similarly limited subpoena powers.

Here he parts company with the commission. The latter claims much of its present effectiveness flows from its authority to compel testimony. Indeed, there is now the spectacle of some of the big names of prior administrations ducking subpoenas by staying outside the Commonwealth or delaying tactics in the courts.

McGee has never waivered in his basic commitment to the commission. But he finds it disconcerting these days to talk privately and confidentially with commissioners, only to discover them lambasting him next day in public statements, then calling him on the phone to explain, "Don't be upset; we don't really mean it; we have to say these things to make our points."

The W & W committee speedily reported out a bill extending the comission's life another six months then fell to considering McGee's concepts. A redraft of the I.G. bill should be on the House floor next week.

The stage is thus set for a wide-ranging debate on putting the lid on governmental abuse. Given the climate of revulsion about abuses exposed, there should be no question of passage before the legislative session ends.

Summer program planned for English as second language

WABAN — An English as a Second Language program has been added to the Newton Creative Arts Center at the Zervas Elementary School during the coming summer session, June 30 through Aug. 1, for students with language difficulties.

The morning will be divided into two sessions, one for language study and one for a general art program which will be conducted by a visiting artist from abroad.

The art teacher is Vanna Leeming, who is director of art for the city of Christchurch, New Zealand.

The art program will be based upon activities such as drawing, painting, collage and sculpture, with an emphasis upon group projects such as murals. Art experiences will also provide a basis of language instruction through the use of terminology and processes. Fees for this program have been reduced to $35, as opposed to the regular fee of $75, so that no one will be deprived of attendance who can benefit from it. There is also scholarship aid beyond this level. For further information contact Lois Sockol (552-7634) or Al Hurwitz (552-7625).

Highlands garden club elects officers

HIGHLANDS — Mrs. Paul Capone was elected president of the Newton Highlands Garden Club for the 1980-1981 season at the club's annual meeting Tuesday, May 27, at the home of Mrs. Robert H. Searway.

Elected to serve with Mrs. Capone were: Mrs. James Horgan, vice president; Mrs. Richard N. Kimball, secretary; and Mrs. Philip Bowman, treasurer.

Mrs. Daniel F. Sullivan and Mrs. Kimball were appointed chairmen of the Horticulture and Publicity committees respectively, with other chairmanships to be announced later.

Mrs. Searway, retiring president, was named ex-officio advisor.

Activities for the evening included a tour of Mrs. Searway's garden and a sale of house and garden plants provided by club members. Assisting Mrs. Searway as hostesses were Mrs. J. A. Samuelson, Mildred Russo, and Mrs. Kimball.

On the way with the class of '80

'80 By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

The quiet collegians — class of 1980 — waited until graduation time to show there's a little spirit of something besides "me first" under the gowns and motar boards.

This is the crop of students dumbfounding analysts. They are supposed to be apolitical; apathetic; me-first — the almighty dollar over all — and then can come God, mother, country and human society.

But from the commencement scene come signs priorities are being shifted, feelings are surfacing, and that maybe the me-first tag isn't quite right.

At the University of Virginia, for example, little yellow ribbons dangled from the gowns of many in the commencement parade — remembrance of the hostages in Iran. The "yellow" showed up in other graduation ceremonies and included tying yellow ribbons around tree trunks (as in the song, to signify love despite separation).

In Philadelphia, Temple University grads applauded parents, spouses and even little brothers and sisters.

Some grads skipped commencement.

A "skipper" from a state university told a neighbor asking about commencement, "Ah, that's a lot of — you know," he said. Then he went back to polishing his motorcycle.

But some old-timers, those getting a Ph.D. at an older age, did what old-timers — those with two previous degrees — don't always do. They marched in commencement parades.

But for some reason, this year, going to the commencement was the in-thing for Ph.D. candidates — at least at the University of Pittsburgh.

Paula Bern, of Mt. Lebanon, Pa., with long-ago B.A.-M.A. said so. She has five children on various steps to the doctorates and is the wife of a Ph.D. candidate. The offspring include a daughter doctor, a son in med school, others on that trail.

"I didn't want to be the only one in the family without a doctorate," she said, the degree mattered enough to go to graduation — even though she is 49.

Mrs. Bern, a public relations consultant, now is looking for a job in college administration.

At Yale University in New Haven, Conn., the traditional show of helium-filled blue balloons in the graduation parade was broken up by pink and green ones with the symbol of a clenched fist, signifying demand for rights for women, blacks, hispanics.

Huge letters painted on sheets hanging from dorms ringing the graduation common made other demands dissent: No nukes; no draft; end racism at Yale; equal rights for women at Yale; pull the school's investment money out of firms doing business with "racist" South Africa.

White armbands were on the left arms of about 10 to 15 percent of the Yale class of 1980. Similar armbands were spotted at other commencements.

The meaning: "We won't go" said some armband wearers.

"How do you stand on the draft?" a graduate without an armband was asked.

He answered:

"Just say I am apolitical, I am apathetic. I am not against anything right now."

At Yale, in a major address before graduation day, school president A. Bartlett Giamatti did what college presidents do these days — he beat the drums for less federal regulation, more support from corporations, which, he said, only give away 0.9 percent of its allowable 5 percent tax deductible funds.

He declared the private sector is threatened — due to, among other things, inflation and the high price of oil.

At class day the students heard what the Yale Daily News "commencement special" called the class's "desperate" choice for a speaker — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J.

Bradley — Princeton grad, former Rhodes scholar, New York Knicks star, and the youngest senator at 36 — was obtained, the Yale Daily News, said, because of "the inability of the class to procure any of the speakers suggested in a classwide survey."

The first three choices were British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, actor Alan Alda and author Lillian Hellman.

Rebatable gas tax proposed in Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. J. Bennett Johnston Jr., D-La., Monday proposed a rebatable gasoline tax, which might go as high as $5 per gallon, to take the place of the administraton's standby coupon plan for rationing gas in a severe fuel shortage.

Johnston's proposed tax would be fully rebatable and he said his program would cost less than the coupon program to implement.

Johnston Monday gathered testimony on rationing alternatives at a session of his Senate Energy Committee subcommittee on regulation.

The administration's standby rationing plan will probably have the government send monthly coupon entitlements to the owners of registered vehicles in a supply emergency. Local banks or businesses would issue gas coupons at the cost of between $2 to $5. The coupons would be used to buy gasoline or could be sold for whatever price a free market might put on them.

Under Johnston's proposal, the government would tax gasoline at the rate it thinks gas coupons would trade for in a given emergency. But no coupons would be issued and the tax money would be rebated to vehicle owners as a deduction from monthly federal payroll withholding taxes.

At a news conference before the hearing, Johnston said he'd promised to "do everything I can to approve the administration plan.

"I don't believe it will work. But it's better than nothing," he said.

Witnesses, including representatives of the banking industry and Daniel Yergin, co-author of the Havard Business School book "Energy Future," agreed Johnston's plan would have the same rationing effect without an estimated $2 billion program cost of coupon rationing.

Johnston said it had the added advantage that it could be imposed swiftly, compared to a possible one-year start up time for a coupon system.

Administration studies indicate spare coupons might trade for $2 to $5 per gallon in the event of the 20 percent supply shortfall needed to trigger standby rationing.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., reasoning that Johnston's variable tax would reflect such coupon prices, found it unlikely Congresss would endorse a $5 tax when it has already balked at a 10-cent levy.

Yergin said Americans would eventually have to choose some form of rationing, by rebatable tax or coupons, to cut their dependancy on foreign oil and vulnerability to supply disruption.

'Clothing Corner' Half-price sale

DEDHAM — A half-price sale will be held by the "Clothing Corner" of St. John's United Methodist Church this Thursday, June 5, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., in the church's educational building, corner Fairview Street and Oakdale Avenue.

There'll be bargains galore in ladies' dresses, pant suits, skirt suits, blouses, hats, sweaters, slacks and evening gowns, including many larger sizes.

Also featured will be a variety of apparel for the teen set including blouses, jeans, tops and sweaters. A plentiful supply of children's clothing, sizes 2 to 7, is available, also.

Shirts, sweaters, jackets and slacks for boys teen age and younger will be featured.

Skidmore graduate

NEEDHAM — Carol Wadsworth of 51 Nehoiden St. was among 501 seniors to receive bachelor degrees recently from Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

Food buying tips

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Never do your grocery shopping when you're hungry and once you've made your shopping list, stick to it, the president of a supermarket chain says. It will save money.

Robert L. Hayden, president of Market Basket stores in Southern California, has published a list of 100 ways to be a better shopper. Some are obvious, some not so obvious.

Always shop for specials, he said. Also, generally the largest size represents the best buy. Generally, but not always.

Large tomatoes usually cost more and small oranges are juicier and less expensive.

Instead of buying seasoned rice mixes, add your own spices, herbs and bouillon cubes.

Use stale bread and crackers to make your own bread crumbs.

Boneless meat may not be more expensive. Consider you're buying all meat and no bone, he said. Use a meat thermometer to control shrinkage when roasting large cuts of meat.

Pork cooked at low temperature, 300-325 degrees F, shrinks less. Buy bulk sausage rather than link sausage.

Loin end chops often have as much meat as center cut chops but cost less and are just as nutritional. Pork liver costs less than beef or calves liver and has more iron, and beef liver costs less than calves liver.

Use a soy-protein mixture to extend ground beef. It's nutritionally comparable to hamburger and costs less.

Aldermen to huddle over county suit

NEWTON — Aldermen will meet in special session Monday to respond to a Middlesex County lawsuit against the city to recover $1.8 million in overdue assessments.

Board of Alderman President Matthew Jefferson said Wednesday the board must respond to the the county's complaint by June 17. The Board, Comptroller Lawrence Marino and Treasurer Theodore Scafidi are named in the action.

Jefferson said the board could decide to pay the overdue money, or could present reasons why the withholding is justified. Some of the discussion may go behind closed doors , Jefferson said. because the city's litigating position is at stake.

The board directed Marion to withhold the first of three county assessments more than a year ago after questioning whether Newton received adequate service in exchange for paying the largest assessment of any community in the county.

The county hopes to recover the amount of the overdue assements, eight percent interest and the amount of money the city has earned by investing the delinquent payments.— perhaps an additional six percent.

Recently the withholding of the assessments has been justified by the county 's failure to produce records required by state law. The county has provided a debt statement, but other documents outlining highway work, building repairs, inspections, salaries and fixed assessets are still missing, according to city officials.

Alderman Mark White, chairman of an ad hoc committee on Middlesex County hopes the board will not release the three overdue assessments because of the lawsuit, or because the county produces the records the city has requested.

Halas confident

CHICAGO (UPI) — George Halas says his Chicago Bears will resolve their contract dispute with Chicago Park District and will play their home games at Soldier Field this fall.

"It will be resolved and we will play in Soldier Field," Halas said Wednesday.

But the Bears' founder and president was the only one expressing optimism in the dispute involving a long-term lease at the stadium on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Carew leads A.L. voting

NEW YORK (UPI) — First baseman Rod Carew of the California Angels continued to be the top vote-getter with 538,500, in balloting for the American League All-Star team, Baseball Commissioner's Bowie Kuhn announced today.

Carew, who holds the record of 4,292,740 in 1977 and is the all-time leader in total votes, has already opened up a 200,000 vote lead on Carl Yastrzmeski of Boston.

New York Yankees' shortstop Bucky Dent has taken over the lead from Boston's Rick Burleson and California's Fred Patek. Milwaukee's Robin Yount and Minnesota's Roy Smalley are within 80,000 votes.

First Baptist hosts tours in honor of anniversary

NEWTON CENTRE — Each Wednesday from noon to 2 p.m. in June, the First Baptist Church in Newton Centre will be open to visitors.

Members of the church will be available to give guided tours of the church and grounds and to explain the architecture and symbolism associated with the building.

This activity is one aspect of the 200th anniversary celebration of the church.

The Baptist Church building is in the process of being accepted in the National Register of Historic Places. It was dedicated in 1888.

The architecture of the building was influenced by H. H. Richardson, a leading architect in the country in the 1870's, who initiated the movement away from the high Victorian styles imported from England and France. The newer style exhibited a basic simplicity of design, more functional shapes, more freedom of massing, and use of native materials.

Religious symbolism is apparent throughout the church, and first noticeable in the four gargoyle-like figures jutting from the outside of the church tower, representing four interpretations of the life of Christ.

The interior is studded with thousands of crosses, all the way from the shape of the church itself to the small crosses at the backs of the pews. The stained glass windows depict scenes from both Biblical and church history.

Two upcoming events - a free concert and a church service - are also part of the three-month-long 200th anniversary celebrations.

On Friday, June 6, at 8 p.m. an All Newton Music School String Quartet will present a concert of classical music featuring Beethoven and the American composer Charles Ives.

The quartet consists of Susan Abrams, Elizabeth Sklar, and Michael Appleman, all of Lexington; and Bernard DiGregorio of Westwood.

On Sunday, June 8, at 10 a.m., the church service will give recognition to the community involvement of the church over the past two centuries. Both Monsignor William Granville of the Sacred Heart Church and Rabbi Murray Rothman of Temple Shalom will take part in the service. Representatives from various service organizations have been invited to attend as honored guests.

The 200th anniversary celebration has been in preparation for two years. It includes symposia, a musical concert series, historical vignettes, skits, church suppers and a picnic, a sound and light show, and recognition of community and religious affiliations over the centuries.

Ward 1 Democrats gearing up for fall

NEWTON — The Ward 1 Democratic Committee held its first meeting last week at the home of Co-chairwoman Ruth Shapiro. Barbara Mooney chaired the organizational meeting as members charted the course for the coming year.

Voter registration was declared to be a primary responsbility of the commitee as it sought the best ways to ensure maximum wardwide participation in the upcoming September primary. Precinct captains were selected to cor ocoordinated the registration drive and to update the phone list.

Shapiro and Mooney designated Terry Halloran, Lois Oxman, Nikki Payne, Leonard Zakim and Marie Esposito as precinct captains.

A publicity effort will be coordinated by Anita Greenbaum and Ann Laredo, publicity chairwoman of the Democratic City Committee.

Associate members of the ward committee will be recruited in the next few months by members to strengthen the committee. All registered voters in the ward are invited to inquire as to the criteria for membership.

A candidate night is being considered for the early fall for candidates in the Fourth Congressional District.

Temple Emeth Sisterhood installs officers

CHESTNUT HILL — Temple Emeth Sisterhood will hold its annual installation meeting on Wednesday, June 11, at 9:45 a.m., in the vestry of the temple, at which time its new officers and Board of Directors will be installed.

Officers are: President, Barbara Diamond; Vice Presidents, Ellie Richmond, Sally Epstein, Evelyn Hyde, Sura Feinberg, and Ruth Grossman; Treasurer, Ina Fireman; Recording Secretary, Ann Lerner; Corresponding Secretary, Penny Grossman; Financial Secretary, Mickey Beldon; Social Secretary, Elaine Ross; Auditors, Hilda Shaffer and Carole Decter; Marshals, Fran Schwartz and Sara Segal.

Following the ceremonies, luncheon will be served. Entertainment will consist of a program of light opera and popular music sung by Paul Clayton of Brookline.

Chairwoman and Program Vice President is Gwen Levine.

EPA has grants for women-owned firms

BOSTON — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency is seeking to increase participation of women's businesses in its construction grants program.

To accomplish this, the agency is developing a list of women's business enterprises (WBE) from which bids may be solicited on EPA construction projects.

The construction grants program is mandated by the federal Clean Water Act and authorizes EPA to make grants to communities to cover 75 percent of the costs of needed sewage treatment facilities.

If you are a part of or know of any women-owned firms that can provide services in the planning, design and construction of wastewater treatment facilities (or support services) contact Janet Moebes, EPA, Room 2207, JFK Federal Building, Boston, MA 02203 or call 223-4631.

In order to qualify as a WBE under the EPA program, the firm must be at least 51 percent owned by a woman or women who also control or operate the firm.

Nancy Olshansky has been elected president of the Brandeis University National Women's Committee.

Kilburn heads hospice federation

WABAN — Linda H. Kilburn, MSW, the executive director of Hospice of the Good Shepherd, Inc.' was elected first president of the Hospice Federation of Massachusetts at the organization's annual meeting in May.

The Hospice Federation represents a consortium of approximately 26 hospice groups in the Commonwealth. The federation was formed to share information, educate, train and serve as a advocate at state, local and national levels.

Individual hospices within the federation provide comprehensive services for terminally ill patients and their families.

Other newly elected officers are: Jay McGovern, first vice president; Carol Holden, second vice president; the Rev. Whit Dennison, treasurer; and Tania Winne, clerk.

For further information on the hospice federation call 969-6130.

Concord to Boston train service will soon be cut

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Despite "enthusiastic" passenger response to the four-month-old train service between Concord and Boston, state transportation officials say one of two daily weekday runs will soon be dropped.

The New Hampshire Transportation Authority has decided to eliminate the latter of the two trains beginning June 16, because of mounting deficits in operating the service, which officials said are unrelated to the number of passengers taking to the rails.

"We think the riders are enthusaistic and that it's fulfilling a need," said Frances Shaines of the NHTA.

"My understanding is that last weekend for the tall ships parade in Boston the trains were jammed, but I don't have the figures, yet. That seems to me that is demonstrated usage of the service," she added.

The recent average of about 175 weekday passengers was at the high end of what planners had anticipated before the service began, she said.

However, because of the way the cost for the service is assessed, deficits of up to $57,000 were piling up each month, she said.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority operates the train service between Concord and Boston and charges the NHTA a percentage of what it costs to run the entire MBTA commuter rail system. Because those MBTA system costs have been rising, so have the deficits, Ms. Shaines said.

Operating under a two-year, $2.4 million federal grant, Ms. Shaines said the train service "has a limited budget and something had to go."

In addition to the higher costs, Ms. Shaines said revenues are also falling below the estimates.

Under the revised schedule, the train will continue to start out from Concord at 5:49 a.m. and make stops in Manchester, Merrimack, and Nashua, before arriving in Boston at 7:46 a.m. The evening train will leave Boston at 5 p.m.

BETTER LIVING '80

Design For Living, at Shreve, Crump and Low

"Design for Living," a new approach to the 1980 lifestyle, is currently featured at Shreve, Crump and Low. Dedicated to the belief that you don't have to be married to have taste, Shreve's is expanding the traditional Bridal Area to appeal to young professionals of both sexes who have achieved a position in the world and want their apartments and houses to reflect the fact.

Now, while most of us sensibly think china selling for $1,600 a place setting and a $28,000 crystal decanter are a little fancy for our 1980's patterns of entertaining, it's very nice to know that we can own china and crystal made by the same craftsmen at prices that strike closer to home.

One great example of this is pewter. Pewter is just as attractive to us today as it was in the eighteenth century, and many of the designs are direct reproductions from Paul Revere or close lineal descendants. Hampshire pewter is unique in this country for using a formula known as "Queen's Metal," which includes silver along with the tin, copper and antimony. (No lead is used in contemporary pewter).

Pewter's practicality today is the same as in colonial times. It retains all the properties and attributes of sterling silver except the cost. Any kind of hand engraving can be done. Bright finish pewter can be mistaken for sterling in appearance, while the satin finish looks more antique. Simple hand-washing in soap and water will keep pewter in mint condition for years as it doesn't tarnish.

Silver plate flatware is another excellent alternative for the practical shopper. A full service for eight can grace your table for $400 - $500.

A brand new display area has recently opened to bring together the widest possible selection of alternatives all on one floor. For the Bride who has come to register, for the single man who knows he has moved beyond scavenged cast-offs, or for the professional woman who wants to entertain with style, this new arrangement will make it easy to find the perfect combination of table and decorative accessories for 1980 and beyond.

"Design for Living" is not to be missed. Whether you're a bride setting up a new house or a single person anxious to spruce up a current one, Shreve's has ideas for you.

Cabinetpak Method

The Cabinetpak method of kitchen remodeling makes the creation of your new kitchen an almost instant success at a savings of 50% or more over the cost of a new kitchen installation. With this type of remodeling, custom made doors and drawer fronts are designed to fit your specifications. Cabinetpak, the oldest and largest door and drawer replacement company in the nation, utilizes a potential formica system which combines the look of a new kitchen at a fraction of the cost. A total look is achieved by adding new custom made counter tops in various exciting colors and in a number of new and effective styles.

Offered in many woodgrain and solid colors Cabinetpak, which is run in New England by Martin Kahalas of Sharon will be happy to visit you in your home and help you plan a kitchen which will be efficient as well as attractive.

Three experienced salespeople will assist you in your color and style selection. Additional cabinets can be built to blend into your new custom kitchen which has a full lifetime warranty.

CAN YOUR SAVINGS PLAN STACK UP TO BAYBANKS NEW 2½ YEAR CERTIFICATE?

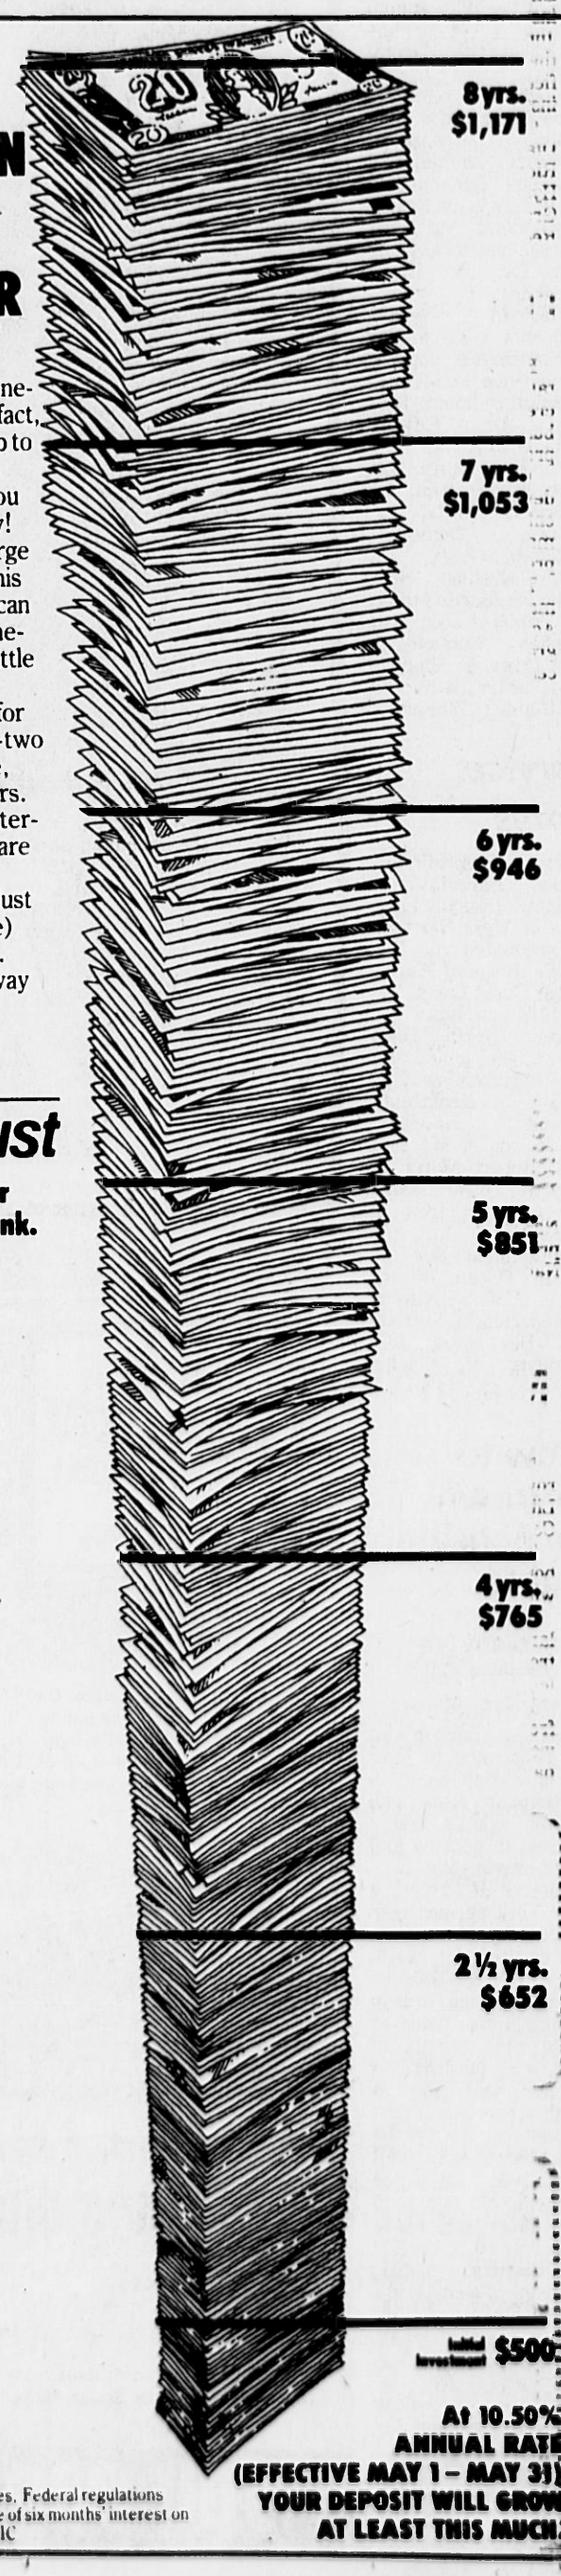

We call them "Two and One-Half Year Certificates" but, in fact, you can let them mature for up to eight years. And when you do that, big things can happen: you more than double your money!

Up until recently, only large investments could earn you this kind of interest, but now you can open a BayBanks Two and One-Half Year Certificate with as little as $500.

Your rate is guaranteed for whatever term you specify—two and one-half, three, four, five, six, seven, or even eight years. And, we'll compound your interest continuously. New rates are set monthly for certificates issued the following month. Just call 1-800-342-8888 (toll-free) any time for rate information. We'll tell you about a better way to save.

How to borrown on pension rights

By LeROY POPE
Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — One doesn't have to wait for retirement to have use of pension money; a participant often can borrow against vested interest in pension and profit-sharing plans.

Steven H. Adler, a New York pension consultant, says these loans can be used, for example, to put children through college, to help finance a new home or for a wide variety of worthwhile purposes.

Adler said only a small proportion of participants in the 600,000 such plans in force avail themselves of the privilege. He said such loans have been made from only 50 of the 700 plans his firm manages.

Anyone in a corporate pension plan — including professionals such as doctors or dentists who are incorporated — whose firm has arranged for such loans can apply for an amount up to their vested interest in the pension.

Visions for a rebirth at Maine's Old Orchard beach

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Maine (UPI) — For 80 years the Great Steel Pier was a symbol of summer to New Englanders who danced at its casino to the music of some of the greatest orchestras of the "Big Band Era."

The Great Steel Pier was built in 1898, and at one time extended one-third of a mile into the ocean.

The sea turned savage in the aftermath of the Blizzard of '78 reduced the pier and casino to a mass of rubble.

Old Orchard Beach a once-posh resort town with turreted hotels flying banners with names like "Alberta" and "Velvet" had already lost some of its glamour, but when the pier went it really turned down-at-the-heels.

Town folks who mourned the loss of the pier fondly remember soft summer nights at the casino with couples swaying to a Glen Miller tune or jumping to an Artie Shaw jive.

Joe Shribman, now an agent for Rosemary Clooney and Rose Marie, booked bands into the casino for years.

"Old Orchard Beach was a prime one-nighter for bands years ago," Shribman said. "You can't name a band that didn't play there — Miller, Artie Shaw, Lombardo — you name 'em."

Buddy Morrow played the trombone with the Tommy Dorsey orchestra at the casino ballroom, and returned later with his own band.

"It was a beehive of activity," Morrow said. "The crowds there were a breed apart. A little more cosmopolitan, a little more hip to what was going on."

A new wooden pier opens this weekend and its owner has visions of a rebirth of Old Orchard Beach.

"Honey, you're going to see this place jumping like it hasn't in 25 years," said Catherine Petit, owner of the Old Orchard Beach Pier Co. "We've got every single weekend crammed with activities.

"High-wire acts, concerts, animal shows, a circus," she said excitedly. "We're going to bring back the family. With the petroleum problem, you have got to be a one-stop destination point."

Mrs. Petit bought the controlling interest in what was left of the pier in September, and began a multi-million dollar project to restore it — with the aim of putting Old Orchard Beach back on the map.

"My family has owned the pier since 1913," she said. "My grandfather, John W. Duffy, bought it, and my father Howard managed it for years."

"My father truly loved this place, he really did," said Mrs. Petit. "When I was a little kid, Guy Lombardo used to come over to the house and I remember how exciting the town was.

The new pier will be dedicated in her father's memory this weekend, its unveiling celebrated with a parade, fireworks and an antique aircraft landing on the 4-mile strip of hard-packed beach.

A glassed-in restaurant serving lobster and prime rib at the pier's end will replace the casino.

Worker loyalty found rarer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Loyalty is becoming almost a dirty word in American business.

It is found only among the very young and among the few who are making steady or rapid progress up the promotion ladder whereas a generation or so back everybody was inclined to be loyal to the company and disloyalty was considered a justifiable cause for dismissal, says Prof. William D. Heier of Arizona State University.

Writing in Management Review, a publication of American Management Associations, Professor Heier reports on a survey he made of 700 workers and executives. The results no doubt will stir some outcry but may not be surprising to company executives and personnel experts.

One of the surprising things about Professor Heier's report is that he found company loyalty "practically nonexistent" among workers nearing retirement. These older workers generally won't even pretend sentiments of loyalty. The study didn't give any special reasons for the disenchantment of older workers with their companies or jobs.

Heier contented himself with reporting that among all employees, women showed more company loyalty than men, that 70 percent of all workers felt their company was unfair to workers at least some of the time, and only 29 percent felt their company was well regarded in the community.

Heier considered this very revealing of a substantial absence of loyalty among employees.

The study showed only slightly higher degrees of worker loyalty in small businesses than in big corporations but in one significant section it showed that 54 percent of workers said their primary loyalty was to their departments not to the whole company. Sixty percent said morale was good in their departments but only 22 percent believed morale was good throughout the company.

Probably not surprisingly, the workers generally showed a sharp consciousness of the other side of the coin. Fifty-four percent said workers did not give the company a fair day's work and only 26 percent believed their company was any more unfair to workers than the average firm. But only 25 percent said their bosses were any fairer than the average.

Possibly most revealing, was the response of 83 percent of those answering that they would do nothing if they saw a fellow worker stealing company property and the more than 75 percent said they would not complain to the boss about another worker's loafing or tardiness.

Some 31 percent said they would pick up and leave the company with no added pay inducements to do the same job for another firm if some grievance or other circumstance bothered them.

5 years probation for the 'bomb lady'

CAMBRIDGE — Lee Kaye, convicted last month in the "bomb Lady" robberies of a Newton Corner bank, was sentenced to five years probation Wednesday by Middlesex Superior Court Judge Samuel Adams.

Kaye, 60, a former heroin addict, will return to her home in New York City to resume methadone treatments and receive psychiatric help.

Two staffers at a Boston University clinic testified Wednesday that Kaye has been an addict for more than 30 years. Withdrawal is possible, they said, but not recommended especially in an unsupervised prison setting.

Special prosecutors Roscoe Trimmier and Robert Gad III asked for eight year sentences for the two counts of armed robbery to be served concurrently.

Judge Adams could not have sentenced Kaye to a prison term of less than five years by state statute.

Testimony Wednesday disclosed that in addition to drug related problems Kaye has a mass in her back that has ruptured a vertebra in her back and will probably require surgery.

Atty. Peter Harrington, who defended Kaye with Atty. Leslie Shea, said the long time addiction was a new experience for the clinic as well as the court.

In a memorandum cited by the judge, Harrington traced an early involvement with the tranquilizer Milltown as a contributing factor in Kaye's addition.

The drug was proscribed to Kaye in the 1940s when she was unable to sleep after the birth of a child. The addictive nature of the drug was overlooked at that time, Harrington said, and often prescribed without a complete examination.

Kaye could appeal the sentence within 30 days, but Harrington said an appeal is unlikely . Kaye will be required to seek medical and psychiatric treatment as a condition of the probation.

Her possible confinement presented problems because of the lack of drug treatment facilities in the state for women prisoners.

On March 17, 1978 a woman who said she had a bomb in a shopping bag took $200 from a teller at the BayBank at Newton Corner. Less than two weeks later on March 28, a woman wo identified herself as the "bomb lady" took $400 from the same teller.

Kaye was charged with the crimes 10 months later when she was identified by the teller in Waltham District court during her arraignment on unrelated charges.

Sewer work favored

NEWTON — The Public Facilities Wednesday supported $500,00 in sewer work for the five major problem areas in the city.

The amount of the work will be piggybacked to an already approved $1 - million bond issue for the installation of storm drains.

Proposed sewer improvements include the Linwood Avenue line where a total collapse of the pipe has created an emergency.

The most expensive correction, $180,000, will be to a sewer in the area of Turner St., Crafts St. and Central Ave. where the line has settled and there are low spots.

The Cross and Eddy Sts. sewer should be relined as well, according to the Public Works Dept. because lines running under Cheesecake Brook have settled and backed up.

Newton man charged

WALTHAM — Paul F. McMahon, 28, of 17 Bacon St. Newton, was arraigned Monday on a charge of breaking and entering in the nightime, and larceny after his arrest early in the day at the scene of an alleged attempted burglary in Watertown.

Watertown police said officers Michael Munger and Carmen Camerato responded to an alarm at the Norton Co., 76 Stanley Ave., at 12:43 a.m. The officers found a window in the rear of the building broken and moments later found McMahon hiding inside, the police report said.

Asbestos may close schools

NEWTON — The closing of schools or parts of schools will have to be considered unless there are temporary repairs to pipe insulation that contains asbestos, the health commissioner has told the school department.

The memo from Health Commissioner Dr. J. Carolyn Zavarine said in part "the Health Dept. deems it imperative that proper maintenance and temporary repair be carried out ... until such time as definitive corrections can be made."

"If this can not be, discontinuation of use of those schools or parts of schools affected must be considered."

Damaged sections of pipe "lagging" (covering) in schools is a priority, but Building Commissioner Allan Fraser has said lagging in all 61 municipal buildings could contain asbestos.

The Board of Alderman Monday sent back to committee a $23,000 request from Fraser to fund a study of pipe lagging.

A resolution by Alderman Carol Ann Shea asking the mayor to request money for asbestos removal in schools passed unaimously on a voice vote.

Testing by the state Dept. of Hygiene has turned up asbestos in pipe lagging in a number of Newton Schools.

A recent memo from Fraser to Roy Cornelius Jr., director of school support services, outlines methods for removal of asbestos and adds workmen should assume the lagging contains asbestos and that they should wear masks.

Aldermen had various motives for sending the study request back to committee, but arguments boiled down to whether the city needs an expert to confirm what the Health Dept., the state , and most members believe –that there is extensive asbestos material covering pipes in city buildings.

Shea said she was told by Dr. Zavarine the pipe covering problem is more serious than the asbestos insulation problem at Newton North High School where it has been estimated removal will cost between $6 and $8 million.

Fraser estimated removal of asbestos pipe lagging at Angier School will cost $25,000. Finance Chairman Edward Richmond said removal in all city buildings could cost $1.5 million and argued an expenditure on that scale requires expert guidance.

"Why do we have to support any more experts," Mrs. Shea counted. "We know it's there. It's silly."

Bigelow students enter realm of elderly

NEWTON CORNER — In conjunction with the current national concern for the elderly, Sara Pettinelli planned the course, "Insights on Aging and the Elderly," for her home economics majors at Bigelow Junior High School, this semester.

The "majors" are a group of 11 ninth grade non-language students who, this year, happen to be comprised of girls only. They are: Debbie Alvarez, Margaret Bradley, Nancy Ghannon, Theresa Gilenon, Virginia MacDougal, Nancy Manning, Michele Mercier, Mary Nash, Colleen O'Brien, Ann Marie Scaltreto and Trudi Weston. This course was developed as part of their home economics program and covered almost one semester.

After trying to understand themselves, their anger and frustrations, the "majors" discussed with Mrs. Pettinelli the responsibilities they have to themselves and to their family.

They then entered the world of the aged.

Through films, they viewed the elderly and the problems they faced. In the discussions which followed each film, the "majors" learned about the elderly's problems and the help that was available in Newton.

The students began to discuss the productivity and happiness that many senior citizens have found and are continuing to find in their lives; but they also learned of the fears and anxieties of the more frail of the elderly community.

Bigelow Principal Elizabeth Quinn acquainted the students with her practical experience in dealing with the elderly. They were fortunate also to have authorities from the Newton community: Barbara Ireland, director of RSVP, speaking on the Retired Senior Volunteer Program; Beverly Sorge, coordinator of the Senior Health Maintenance Program, discussing the illness of the elderly; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brehm, retirees, describing their work with Traveling Meals of Newton, Inc. for whom Brehm serves as coordinator.

Jeanette Aarons of RSVP, also a retiree, talked with the students about dealing with the elderly and being their friends.

The discussions, all very informal, were done over a hot beverage and warm coffee bread. The department's "living area" provided a relaxed atmosphere where everyone felt free to ask questions.

The students had begun to be aware of their and the city's responsibilities to the aged. They also acquired an understanding and sensitivity to their own problems and needs. Toward the end of the course, many of the fallacies concerning the aged were analyzed and put in their proper perspective, as well as the myths concerning the overemphasis on youth as may occur in the media.

Moving out into the community, the "majors" planned a vist to the Garland Nursing Home.

The students held a mid-morning coffee hour, serving the "treats" they had spent a week preparing. Carrying out their theme of spring, colorfully decorated cookies in the form of "spring hats" were individually wrapped and given to each of the ladies as a memento of the occasion. For the men in a second nursing home, the girls delivered huge cookies which were decorated as a smiling face. Although everyone, students and patients, felt strange when they first arrived, through the quiet and friendly warmth of the students, the visit ended with many affectionate good-byes.

On May Day, they left May baskets for each of their newfound friends at the Garland Nursing Home. The "majors," in groups of three and four, will continue to visit three days a week for the remainder of the school year. They also plan to visit throughout the summer.

Alligators and Appleseed's.

The common alligator may prefer the Everglades of Florida. But the Lacoste alligator favors a different habitat. The Appleseed's of Massachusetts. Four sites north and west of Boston where the species arrives faithfully each spring. Braving the Northeast storms and the handbag manufacturers of Brockton and Lynn en route. This year, they're here in record numbers.

Small, medium and large alligators. Even extra large alligators. In every conceivable spring color.

You'll find alligators on tops, jackets, jumpers, skirts and shorts by Haymaker. On David Crystal dresses. On Lacoste knits and pullovers. And alligators all over the men's department, on sportswear by Izod.

Come see the alligators and all the other spring creations. Including gifts for every room in the house. You're going to enjoy the good taste of Appleseed's.

Stretching

Carol Summers, Newton North first baseman' makes a long stretch to nip Waltham's Kathy Becht at first. Newton North won the game behind the no-hit performance of Janice Casey nad retained sole possession of second place in the Suburban League.

'Coach of the Year'

Close didn't begin coaching track until he reached 36

At 25, Peter Close of Newton was "tired of track," so much so that the former Olympic runner didn't even begin coaching the sport until he was 36 and didn't become a head track coach until he was 40.

Yet two years after he became head track coach at Tufts University, Peter Close was selected the 1979-80 NCAA Division III "Coach of the Year" by the track and field coached of the New England Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association.

"When I was running I was so intensely into track that I was due for a burnout," recalled the former two-time IC4A mile champion who went on to run the 1500 meter event for the United States team in the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome, Italy. "When I got out of the Marine Corps in 1962, I really wasn't interested in doing much with track anymore."

From 1962 through 1976, Close served as sports information director at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and listened to all the coaches cheer and complain about their jobs.

"I had been out of work for 11 years when Art Farnham retired as M.I.T. track coach in 1973 and Gordon Kelly offered me the assistant coach's job. I decided to try it and, once I got a taste of coaching, I knew I wanted to run my own program," he said.

Close was 40 years old when the head coach's job opened up at Tufts in 1977. He applied and was subsquently chosen for the position.

"Even my wife, Cindy, thought I was crazy in wanting to became a head track coach and begin handing out and collecting uniforms, sending out entry fees and travelling around the country with people half my age. But, for me, it was like starting a new life," he said.

At St. John's University and later in the Marines, Close had been continually competing in big, high-pressured meets. Even though he had a fair amount of success, Close admits that the constant pressure killed his enjoyment for running.

"Tufts offered me a chance to work with everyone who wanted to compete and to create a real team atmosphere. That's what I had missed as an athlete and that's what I had come to realize was the way athletics should be. Here, I have a chance to work with athletes on all levels-fast runners and slow runners, high jumpers and low jumpers all get a chance to develop their skills and compete in meets," Close said.

Since coming to Tufts, Close has built up a prgram that swelled to over 70 competitors during the indoor season this year and required practice sessions to be run in two shifts.

"It got so hectic, my wife was ready to mail my Christmas present to the Tufts track office," he said.

But, armed with those numbers, Close's 1979-80 indoor track team rolled up an 11-0 dual record and won the team title at the New England Division III Indoor Track and Field Championship at Colby College, Feb. 25.

Since arriving at Tufts, Close has compiled a 34-13-1 record while developing four New England champions and four school record-setter along with his record number of participants.

"But, his life has taken too many abrupt turns for Close to plan on setting up a comfortable chair in his track office at Tuft's Dussault Cage.

"Being a head coach has been a great experience for me, one that I thought I'd never have five years ago. Five years from now, who knows? I may decide I want to become a coal miner then."

Mets pick first in draft

The Strawberrywait is over

NEW YORK (UPI) — The wait is over for Darryl Strawberry. Now, it's time for a decision.

"I was just hoping to be picked in the top five," the much-heralded outfielder from Los Angeles' Crenshaw High School said Tuesday after the New York Mets made him the No. 1 pick in the 16th annual June draft of high school and college players.

"I knew the Mets were interested in me because they needed a power-hitting outfielder. I'm glad the ordeal is over. There has been a lot of pressure on me this spring. I can't remember facing an easy pitch all season — every pitcher was trying to strike me out."

The 18-year-old prospect, already the subject of a national sports magazine article, must now choose between the Mets and Oklahoma State, with whom he's signed a letter of intent. If he signs with the Mets, he figures to receive a bundle of cash. Joe McDonald of the Mets' front office is already in Los Angeles negotiating with the talented youngster.

"We knew he had other options," said Mets' public relations director Jay Horwitz. "We met for 18 hours a day the past six days and finally decided to draft him first and then worry about options."

Strawberry, who was called "the best prospect I've seen in the last 30 years" by Philadelphia scout Hugh Alexander, may well be worth all the money he'll be offered. In 14 games this year, he hit .400 with six home runs, 21 RBI and eight stolen bases in nine attempts. He is also 1-1 with three saves as a pitcher.

It was the third time the Mets had had the first pick in the June draft. In 1966, they picked a catcher named Steve Chilcott from Lancaster, Calif., but he never played a game in the major leagues. In 1968, New York selected shortstop Tim Foli, who had two tours with the Mets and now plays for Pittsburgh.

The Mets had two other first-round picks — Nos. 23 and 24 — and selected outfielder Billy Beane of Rancho Bernardo, Calif. and catcher John Gibbons of San Antonio.

After the Mets picked their Strawberry, Toronto took shortstop Garry Harris of Hoover High School in San Diego, Calif., and quickly signed him.

"I think this kid can take the ups and downs that are necessary to make it in the pros," said Bob Warner, Harris' coach. "He's very coachable. His best asset is his speed. This year, he stole 16 bases in 16 attempts and last year he was 17-of-17."

Atlanta and Oakland both took left-handed pitchers, the Braves going for Ken Dayley of University of Portland and the A's taking Morningside's Mike King. San Diego selected Georgia outfielder Jeff Pyburn, whose father, Jim, used to play for Baltimore. Pyburn also was selected on the fifth round of the NFL draft by Buffalo as a defensive back.

In the remainder of the first round, Seattle took shortstop Darnell Coles of Rialto, Calif.; San Francisco picked first baseman Jessie Reid of Lynwood, Calif.; the Chicago White Sox went for outfielder Cecil Espy from San Diego; Los Angeles took Miami shortstop Ross Jones; Cleveland picked shortstop Kelly Gruber of Austin, Texas; the Chicago Cubs selected right-handed pitcher Donald Schulze of Roselle, Ill.; Minnesota picked catcher Jeffrey Reed of Joliet, Ill.; Philadelphia went for catcher Henry Powell of Pensacola, Fla.

The remaining rounds of the regular phase will be held today and Thursday.

Legislature okays state amendment

BOSTON — The Massachusetts legislature has endorsed an amendment to the state constitution proposed by State Senator Jack Backman (D-Newton-Brookline) which bars discrimination against handicapped persons.

The vote by the House and Senate sitting in constitutional convention places the question on this November'sstate ballot.

If a majority of voters give final approval to the proposal, Massachusetts will become the first state in the nation to write protections for the handicapped into its constitution. The amendment prohibits any form of discrimination on account of a person's physical or mental disabilities.

Passage of the amendment will extend to the handicapped, the same rights and privileges enjoyed by other members of society.

According to Sen. Backman, "This constitutional amendment will grant to handicapped persons the same rights that all citizens of the commonwealth now enjoy by prohibiting any form of discrimination against persons who are mentally or physically handicapped.

"In November 1976, the people of the Commonwealth voted for an equal rights amendment. The ERA prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, race, color, creed or national origin.

"The one minority which has not been accorded the same constitutional protection that all other minorities now enjoy is the handicapped.

last decade has seen many minorities receive their equal rights under the law. These groups have had the manpower and advocates to fight for them. Unfortunately, the handicapped, both those physically or mentally handicapped, have not had the political clout nor the strong advocacy that is necessary to achieve equality in our society.

"The handicapped have the right to meaningful employment, to housing that is readily accessible to them, to recreational and other activities in which they desire to participate. Without this constitutional amendment, however, the handicapped cannot enjoy the same rights which those of us who are not handicapped take for granted.

"The handicapped have a lot to contribute to our society; but they must be given the opportunity to do so. This constitutional amendment is the vehicle by which the handicapped may begin to enter society on an equal basis with all others.

"It is very little to ask, and the rewards will be great for all of us," Backman said.

DePeter compiled 115-37 record

North lacrosse coach to retire

In 1972 the State lacrosse title came to Newton North High r the first time since the program started in 1969.

That year, the Tigers added another adddition, Coach Tom DePeter.

Now, after building a traditionally strong lacrosse team, DePeter has decided to step down from the position he brought so much ambition and ability to.

DePeter, the Tigers' field leader for nine years, cited health reasons and family olbigations as the dominant factor behind his resignation.

The amiable coach has compiled a 115-37 record while guiding Newton North and has brought his team to the EMass finals in 1972, 1978 , 1979 and 1980.

DePeters' knowledge and drive not only made the Garden City team a winner, but also the participants in the porgram. His program had aided six of his players being elected to the All-American squad and has placed 20 players on college teams in 1979 and 1980.

DePeter has 20 separate brothers play for him at Newton North, and of those 20, 16 have played college lacrosse.

The Sudbury resident, an English teacher at Newton North, grew up playing baseball in Westbury, Long Island, and went to Assumption College on an academic scholarship. While at Assumption, he ran an intramural program and received the Al Banks Award for 'the person who contributed the most to the athletic program."

After graduating from Assumption, DePeter attended Duke University's graduate school and became involved in lacrosse refereeing. He transfered from Duke to Middlebury College in Vermont where he received his master's degree from the Breadloaf School of English.

His interest in lacrosse when he was growing up in New York where it is a major sport. When he took charge of the lacrosse program at Newton North, the rookie coach set out to change the style of play that was prevalent on the team from one of a physical nature to one that stressed finese and quickness. The strategy payed off the first year as the team posted an 11-1 mark and beat Longmeadow, 9-6, at UMass in 1972 for the State crown.

"The teams that made the switch to finese and quickness have excelled and have been top contenders since," said DePeters.

DePeter, who won his 100th game this season in the second contest against Barnstable, has an EMass championship under his belt with a triple overtime victory over Billerica. He's looking forward to another EMass title Thursday when the Tigers face Lincoln-Sudbury.

Strong programs are not made by one man and DePeter credits Barry "Fuzzy" Howland with a great deal of the credit of its success. "Without Fuzzy I don't think I would have made it through the season," complimented DePeter. "A lot of Newton North's developing of its younger players in the past year is result of Jayvee coach Rick Clark's hard work," said Tom.

The winningest coach in Newton North's lacrosse history has not limited himself to his team only. DePeter has directed the All-School Play for two years and has handled the All-School Music program this year and will also direct the All-School Musical.

DePeter has been the publicity director for EMass lacrosse the past two years and will continue his duties after retiring.

In addition to health reasons, DePeter wants to spend more time with his wife of 10 years, Sharon, and thei four children, Courtney, 9; Damien, 7; Danielle, 5; and Dylan, 3.

The loss of DePeter will be a big void for the Newton North lacrosse program to fill.

Joshua Ditelberg makes Eagle Scout

Joshua L. Ditelberg

NEWTON — Joshua L. Ditelberg of Troop 225, Newton, was presented the Eagle Scout award, the highest rank in Boy Scouting, in a Court of Honor held recently at Temple Emanuel, the troop's sponsor.

Thomas P. Campbell Jr., district commissioner in Norumbega Council, Boy Scouts, made the in ceremonies attended by council representatives, scout leaders, other Eagle Scouts and members and friends of Troop 225.

Letters of congratulations also were read from national and state officials, including two former Eagle Scouts, Ohio Senator John Glenn and former President Gerald R. Ford.

Glenn wrote that "from personal experience I know that to make Eagle is a great achievement and represents a lot more work than non-Scouts could ever realize." President Ford wished Ditelberg "the best of success in whatever field of work you choose and hope that you will remember to give back to Scouting some of what it has given you."

As his community service project necessary for Eagle rank, Ditelberg organized and led a group of Scouts in painting and refurbishing a part of the Temple's Youth House.

Ditelberg, recipient of the troop's "Philip Ginsburg Outstanding Scout of the Year" Award earlier this year, has been a scout for the past 3 one-half years. The holder of 30 merit badges and 12 skill awards, he currently serves as senior patrol leader.

In addition, he is a member of the Muskataquid Lodge, Order of the Arrow, honorary camping society for Boy Scouts. He also has earned scouting's World Conservation Award and its religious award, the Ner Tamid Medal.

Ditelberg, 14, a ninth grader at Bigelow Junior High School, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis L. Ditelberg of Newton.

Booklet on youth agencies available

NEWTON — "Directions," a booklet that lists programs and services for Newton youth, is now available for distribution.

"Directions" was prepared by the Newton Youth Commission and Advisory Board in cooperation with the Department of Human Services. The booklet's objective is to assist Newton youth in learning about the multitude of resources available to them.

"Directions" is a result of a year-long project in which funding and other assistance for the printing of the booklet was provided by the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, McDonald's of Newton, the Rotary Club, Newton Jaycess, Inc., GCC Theatres, Inc. and the Community Development component of the Planning Department. The City Print Shop printed the booklet.

"Directions" pocket-sized booklet with information on the vital statistics of over 90 different agencies, departments and organizations likely to be used by Newton youth. Each listing provides a short narrative description of the organization's main function and an individual to contact for more information. A section on the schools is also presented.

"Directions" will be distributed to the students in the Newton high and junior high schools. Copies will be available to all the agencies listed in the booklet. Copies of "Directions" will also be available at the Department of Human Services in City Hall. Newton youth and agencies interested in obtaining more information can contact Steven Moskowitz, assistant director, Department of Human Services, at 552-7170.

Bob LeBlanc, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond LeBlanc of West Newton, recently received his second varsity letter as a member of the 1980 Babson College baseball team. LeBlanc, who played a major role in leading the Babson soccer team to a national championship, missed some action with an eye injury, but still managed to contribute with some fine defensive play in seven games at second base. A former soccer and baseball player at Newton North, he is a finance major at Babson.

State disputes findings, warns against cholesterol

BOSTON — The state Department of Public Health (DPH) has issued a warning to restrict fat and cholesterol consumption.

The warning follows a recent National Academy of Sciences' Food and Nutrition Board report that average healthy Americans need not decrease their intake of cholesterol.

DPH nutrition coordinator Jane Schwo Schwartz said that report contradicted every other substantial study on the same topic.

"There is every indication to believe that research behind the board's recommendation is limited in scope and possibly biased by financial support from the food industry," Schwartz said.

High levels of serum cholesterol are a known risk factor in heart desease, the leading cause of death in the United States, the DPH said.

Studies by the Nutrition Council of the American Heart Association and other authorities conclude that decreased saturated fat and cholesterol in diet generally reduces levels of serum cholesterol, Schwartz said.

"The question of whether or not a decrease in cholesterol and fat intake will prevent heart disease is a complex issue however considerable evidence indicates that high cholesterol can be harmful while never helpful to health," she stated.

Cutting out or reducing comsumption of high fat and cholesterol foods, such as red meat, is not Only a good health practice but will lower food bills, the DPH said.

More than 20 other qualified agencies and expert task forces recommend limited intake of fat and cholesterol. These include the American Heart Association and the Surgeon General, according to the DPH.

Service center camp prepares for opening

NEWTON — Swimming lessons, recreational swimming, boating, canoeing, sailing, crafts, rock-climbing, hikes, archery, nature projects, drama, and games are among the activities offered at the day camp for 6 ½ to 12-year-olds run by the Newton Community Service Centers, from June 23 through Aug. 15.

The camp operates four two-week sessions at the Robert Sever Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood.

Among the major goals of the camp is the hope that each child will gain through the program an improved self-concept, a deepened interest in discovering and improving his-her environment, an improved ability to interact with other children, and the sense that life can be a pleasant, happy, and frequently joyful experience.

The program offers flexibility within a structured framework. Children are assigned by age, and the counselors within each unit flesh out the skeletal schedule with activities appropriate to the age and interests of the children assigned.

The program is filling rapidly. To avoid the necessity of being put on waiting lists, parents are encouraged to enroll as soon as possible.

For more information or a brochure with registration form, interested parents can call the centers' main office at 969-5906 or drop in at 429 Cherry St., West Newton.

Sports briefs

Pats sign pair

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Defensive end Doug McDougald of VPI and free agent wide receiver Mike Cusumano of Cincinnati were signed Tuesday by the New England Patriots.

The 6'5", 274 lb. McDougald, the club's fifth round draft pick, signed a series of one year contracts. The terms were not disclosed.

Cusumano, a 6'0", 180 lb. native of Gloucester, Mass., played two years at Cincinnati after transferring from Ferrum Junior College, where he was a Junior College All-America selection.

Terms of Cusamano's contract were not disclosed.

On U.S. weightlifting team

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (UPI) — The U.S. Olympic Committee says three former Olympians were among the 10 men selected for the 1980 U.S. Olympic Weightlifting Team.

Previous Olympians named to the squad Tuesday following a four-day trial at the Spectrum in Philadelphia were Joe Puleo, Detroit; Mike Karchut, Calumet City, Ill., and Mark Cameron, Middleton, R.I.

Cameron and Tom Stock, Belleville, Ill., each won three gold medals at the 1979 Pan American Games in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Argonauts roster

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Argonauts added former Pittsburgh Steelers' running back Jack Deloplaine to their roster Tuesday.

Deloplaine, 26, a four-year NFL veteran, served as a backup running back and kickoff return specialist for the Steelers from 1976 through 1978 after joining the club as a sixth-round draft choice out of Salem College. He spent last season with the Chicago Bears.

The Argos also announced they had cut non-import slotback Reg Boudreau from their spring training camp roster. Boudreau, 24, was acquired in the off-season after he was put on waivers by the Hamilton Tiger-Cats. The release of Boudreau reduced the Argonauts spring roster to 63 players.

Indiana coach quits

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana University baseball coach Bob Lawrence asked for and received permission to be relieved of his duties at the Big Ten school, according to IU Athletic Director Ralph Floyd.

Lawrence served as head coach of the Hoosiers the last seven years and was an assistant coach with the team the previous nine years.

Indiana finished the last Big Ten season in a tie for sixth with Ohio State and Illinois with a 6-10 record. Indiana had a 17-25 record overall.

Roy White connects

TOKYO (UPI) — Former New York Yankees' outfielder Roy White hit a run-scoring double in the fifth inning Tuesday in leading the Yomiuri Giants to a 3-2 victory over the Chunichi Dragons.

Stand-by fares have less appeal

By ALEX FRERE

LONDON (UPI) — Noticed how nobody's advertising those stand-by fares across the Atlantic any more?

The revolution in trans-Atlantic air travel, started 2 ½ years ago when Freddie Laker flew his first Skytrain to New York, is quietly petering out.

The "turn up and take off" Skytrain flight which sparked that revolution earned Laker a knighthood from Queen Elizabeth and made airlines throughout the world realize the demand for cheap flights. But not it is being played down — a victim of soaring fuel prices.

The stand-by fare is still there, disguised as a "standard fare" on Laker to make it sound like a more secure reservation. But neither Laker nor the other major airlines across the Atlantic — TWA, Pan Am and British Airways — are actively advertising it.

The change in Laker's all-stand-by Skytrain to a series of scheduled flights with triple-structured fares has led Sir Freddie's rivals to call the Skytrain a failure.

"Rubbish," said Sir Freddie. "That's typical of them. They tried to undercut my fares and they failed. Now they've given up. If you notice, their fares recently have become much more expensive than mine once again.

"Now 40 percent of the (Laker) flights are reserved for standard (stand-by) fares. Because we've got more flights than when we started, there are more of those seats for sale than before."

Laker now has established itself as a scheduled airline carrier on the three most lucrative trans-Atlantic routes to London — from New York, Los Angeles and Miami.

Laker began the Skytrain to fight the price structuring by major airlines, which he said cheated the traveling public. Now he has been forced, however unwillingly, to join the fold.

But his prices still are cheaper than his rivals'.

There is still little love lost between Sir Freddie and British Airways.

Gerry Draper, British Airways' executive director, goes so far as to call Skytrain "one of the non-events of the 70s."

"The Skytrain concept died 17 months after it was born," said Draper. "Look at his New York or Los Angeles service now. He has ordinary reservations, he carries cargo, he even has a 'business jet' class so his tariff structure is indistinguisable from ours.

"Skytrain was a failure. If not, why has he changed it so drastically?" said Draper.

"No, Skytrain hasn't worked," said TWA's general manager in Britain, Laurence H. Langley. "The truth is only a small number of people found it attractive."

The change in Skytrain came largely because of the uneasy feeling that stand-by tickets give travelers. Instead, the pre-booked Apex fare is now the most popular.

A backlash to the Skytrain concept — the businessman's class — seems to hover between first and economy classes. British Airways is even scrapping first class entirely on some routes.

With all major airlines suffering losses in the first quarter of 1980, travelers can expect two things this summer — rising fares and declining in-flight service.

All airlines vigorously defend their economy class standards of service which, after the often subconscious thought of safety, is how most people choose between one airline and another.

"But you see how many of the staff switch off their smiles halfway down the cabin with these new classes," said Sir Freddie. "On my planes you can sit wherever you want and get the same service."

Start of hurricane season

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The hurricane season begins officially Sunday and a government expert on the topic warned that the "roll of dice" shows America is long overdue for a major onslaught of storms.

"There is a possibility that sometime soon — maybe this year — a coastal storm could bring unprecedented human and economic catastrophe," said Richard Frank, head of the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration.

"Not only is a major hurricane season long overdue, but more Americans than ever before are now living in areas exposed to these deadly storms."

A life of riches to rags to riches

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tamara Homer's family landed in New York in 1949 as refugees with "nothing but $28 and a lot of determination," and as head of her own advertising firm she is a defender of American capitalism that made it possible.

Mrs. Homer, president of Homer & Durham Advertising Ltd., which had $10 million in billings last year, is a soft-spoken, elegant woman who developed a business sense very early.

"I was in an unfortunate position; we were refugees and had no money for food ... You get caught up in the feeling that if you don't do something you won't survive, you become resourceful," she said.

Mrs. Homer was 12 years old then — her family had fled the Communists to newly-liberated Austria — and discovered she could trade her knowledge of English, German and eastern languages to work as translator for the American occupying forces.

"People swapped possessions for food and I found you could also swap talent for food. It was an early lesson in capitalism," she said.

Mrs. Homer's family were upper-middle class Ukranians who lived in Poland.

"We were rich, we lived in a castle. But that wasn't important when we arrived in America — nobody cared what we had been. We arrived as poor people and we had to make it on our own."

She feels her early childhood helped fuel her ambition. "Once you've had a taste of having had enough you don't want to settle for less."

Her parents took college for granted. "I went to city schools, to Hunter College, and worked at whatever I could find to earn money," she said.

Her jobs included babysitting, clerking at Woolworths, cookie maker at a bakery. "We — my whole family — were very happy to work at anything we could do and grateful to be able to do so," she said.

Mrs. Homer's early business career was varied, but she feels that every phase led up to her decision to start her own firm. Her first full-time job was as secretary at the New York office of a retail chain. She quickly moved into executive training as a buyer.

After husband Edward J. Homer, an executive with RCA, finished a two-year assignment in California, Mrs. Homer returned to New York and was offered the presidency of an import-export firm. From there she went to the advertising agency that ultimately launched her into business on her own.

Perhaps partly because of her experiences, "I sought my early clients from firms that I felt contributed a useful product to the world — shipping and finance for example," she said.

She handles the administrative end of her agency, the financial and marketing. Her partner Guy Durham — she retains majority interest in the firm — heads the creative side.

She employs 22 people — not many for an agency with its billings, she admits. "Each person does the work of 1 ½ employees. I pay them well. They share in the firm, and they earn it," she said. In a business that has a reputation of "revolving-door" employment her turnover is "practically non-existent."

Mrs. Homer staunchly defends the American business system.

"It's unfortunate that so many look at business as something that's not very nice. There's nothing wrong with making money and I think business does share — in jobs and contributing to the economy."

But more importantly, she feels that in American everyone can succeed at the thing they do best.

"You zero in on the real values — family and survival. Once you understand that you try to apply it to everything." adv for pms tues june 3

Mr. Merchant,

You've been in business for 5, 10, 20, 40 or maybe 100 years

SO WHY ADVERTISE?

Very simply, you should advertise to get business.

But why advertise when business is good? And, how can you afford to advertise when business is slow?

You should advertise when business is good to keep it that way; to keep ahead of the competition; to expand your product lines or sales area; add another location. Remember in business you can't stand still. If you try to stand still your competition is moving ahead and you are then actually slipping behind.

You should advertise when business is slow to attract new customers, to keep your old customers, to maintain your volume and momentum.

Newspaper advertising is a mighty salesman that takes your message right into your customers' homes . . . where buying decisions are made. In a very real sense, advertising helps keep you in business.

YOUR BUSINESS IS OUR BUSINESS . . .

Mann wavering on bid

NEWTON — Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann said today he is uncertain whether he will continue his bid for the Republican Congressional nomination from the fourth district.

"It is still an uncertainty," Mann replied when asked if reports he might drop out are true.

Mann was to hold a noontime press conference to announce his intentions.

Newton City Hall buzzed yesterday with rumors that Mann would drop out of the scramble for U.S. Congressman Robert Drinan's seat. Drinan isn't seeking re-election as the result of a papal order.

Mann's departure would leave a single Republican candidate, Richard Jones, and five Democrats: Rep. Barney Frank of Newton, Rep. David Mofenson of Newton, Waltham Mayor Arthur J. Clark, Governor's Councillor Herbert Connolly of Newton, and Jon Rottenberg of Brookline.

Mann has had occasional health problems in recent years and was called to testify last week in the trial of his former personal secretary who was found guilty of stealing $24,000 from Mann's paychecks over a period of several years.

Diana Ossinger, who Mann fired after discovering all his paychecks had not been deposited in his credit union account, has appealed the guilty finding to a jury trial.

Legion convenes in August

Committee chairmen for the 62nd National Convention of the American Legion have been named by H. Vincent Strout of Marblehead, president and general chairman of The American Legion National Convention Corporation of Massachusetts.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 legionnaires and their families are expected to attend the convention, which will be held in Boston Aug. 15-21.

Members of the board of directors of the convention corporation include Ernest J. Pescosolido, 1 Willow Terrace, Newton Centre and Robert Sage, 6 Cynthia Rd., Newton. Pescosolido is also serving as equipment procurement chairman.

The presidential candidates are expected to head a long list of dignataries who will address the business sessions which will be held Aug. 19, 20, 21 in Hynes Auditorium.

Recreation Notes

Women's Sports

The Newton Recreation Department is planning a high-school-age girls Softball League patterned after the successful junior high girls Fillies League. Play is scheduled to begin July 1. Interested individuals or teams should contact Fran Towle at 552-7120.

Fillies League Banquet

The Fillies League recently completed the 1980 season with a Pizza and Coke Banquet at the Hawthorn Fieldhouse. The first place certificate went to the Sultans; while the Good Sportsmanship Award, presented annually to the team that conducts itself with fairness and courtesy towards other teams, went to Mr. Dirt..

Other teams in the League this past season were: Corpus Christi Cougars, Moonbeams, Mt. Alvernia Banchees, Mt. Alvernia Leprechauns, Southside and Vikings. The guest speaker at the banquet was Deputy Commissioner Towle. The committee planning this third annual banquet included Jean Cole, Judy Dore and Alicia Dillon.

Special Swim Lessons

Assistant Supervisor James McLaughlin urges all Newton residents interested in three special swim classes to contact him at 552-7120. These include an eight-week program of adult swim lessons at Crystal Lake from June 30 to Aug. 22, 5:30 to 6 p.m.; advanced lifesaving classes from June 30 to July 25, 6 to 8 p.m. and basic rescue, July 28 to Aug. 8 or Aug. 11 to 22, 6 to 8 p.m.

Adult Tennis Lessons

Donnelly treasurer of YMCA

NEWTON CORNER — James C. Donnelly, treasurer of Boston Gas, has been named treasurer of the Newton YMCA.

After serving as an investment analyst with John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. from 1969-73, he joined Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates as an economic analyst and was appointed as assistant to the treasurer of Boston Gas in 1975.

A year later, he became manager of planning services, and in 1978 was appointed treasurer.

Donnelly earned a bachelor of science degree and a master of business administration degree from Northeastern University, and a law degree from Suffolk University.

He, his wife Mary, and their two children live at 77 Park St., Newton Corner. His parents, Charles and Florence Donnelly live in Newton Upper Falls.

The Newton YMCA is in its 103rd year of service to the western suburbs.

Textile Arts Assembly at Pine Manor in Chestnut Hill

CHESTNUT HILL — The American Institute of Textile Arts (AITA) at Pine Manor College announces the third annual National Textile Arts Assembly to be held June 22-27 on the Chestnut Hill campus.

The assembly will be highlighted by special events and workshops. Mildred Davis, director of AITA, noted, "This is an unusual and unique opportunity for people in the area to participate in an event that holds particular significance for anyone interested in the textile arts."

Special events include a lecture and seminar with Margaret Swain, a world-renowned authority on historic textiles from Edinburgh, Scotland. Ms. Swain has authored several books including "The Flowerers," and her newly published book, "Figures on Fabric," will be the topic of her lecture at 8:30 p.m. on June 22. Admission to the lecture is free.

On June 25 she will present a seminar on the topic of Whitework.

A special attraction will be the "Promenade de Costume," a period fashion show given by John Burbidge, a designer for Priscilla of Boston. This event, which will feature models presenting 15 costumes and matching accessories from the AITA collection and selections from Burbidge's own collection, will be held on Thursday, June 26 at 8:30 p.m. This event is open to the public at an admission fee of $5.

Special exhibits will be on display all week at Ellsworth Hall, the college's performing arts center.

Part of a collection recently donated to the AITA will be among the displays along with some of the work of the advanced professional study candidates.

The teacher's forum this year deals with the "Coming of Age of Embroidery Education" which will treat the topic of the future of embroidery in America.

There are 37 workshops planned, ranging from one-day mini workshops to a five-day workshop on quilting. Among the topics to be dealt with in the workshops are shadow applique, needlework lace, plaiting, canvaswork, crewel, Indian embroidery, Lacy Florentine, and many more.

The AITA at Pine Manor College is interested in the whole of the textile arts: the design, making, uses, and decoration of all manner of textile coverings.

"Aside from the opportunities for sharing the expertise of well-known instructors, it is a time for renewal of friendships, and for welcoming new friends to a campus that is unique in its beauty and charm," Mrs. Davis said.

Deadline for pre-registration is June 13. For information about fees, special events, and the workshops, contact Mrs. Davis at 731-7133.

Stand-by fares have less appeal

By ALEX FRERE

LONDON (UPI) — Noticed how nobody's advertising those stand-by fares across the Atlantic any more?

The revolution in trans-Atlantic air travel, started 2 ½ years ago when Freddie Laker flew his first Skytrain to New York, is quietly petering out.

The "turn up and take off" Skytrain flight which sparked that revolution earned Laker a knighthood from Queen Elizabeth and made airlines throughout the world realize the demand for cheap flights. But not it is being played down — a victim of soaring fuel prices.

The stand-by fare is still there, disguised as a "standard fare" on Laker to make it sound like a more secure reservation. But neither Laker nor the other major airlines across the Atlantic — TWA, Pan Am and British Airways — are actively advertising it.

The change in Laker's all-stand-by Skytrain to a series of scheduled flights with triple-structured fares has led Sir Freddie's rivals to call the Skytrain a failure.

"Rubbish," said Sir Freddie. "That's typical of them. They tried to undercut my fares and they failed. Now they've given up. If you notice, their fares recently have become much more expensive than mine once again.

"Now 40 percent of the (Laker) flights are reserved for standard (stand-by) fares. Because we've got more flights than when we started, there are more of those seats for sale than before."

Laker now has established itself as a scheduled airline carrier on the three most lucrative trans-Atlantic routes to London — from New York, Los Angeles and Miami.

Laker began the Skytrain to fight the price structuring by major airlines, which he said cheated the traveling public. Now he has been forced, however unwillingly, to join the fold.

But his prices still are cheaper than his rivals'.

There is still little love lost between Sir Freddie and British Airways.

Gerry Draper, British Airways' executive director, goes so far as to call Skytrain "one of the non-events of the 70s."

"The Skytrain concept died 17 months after it was born," said Draper. "Look at his New York or Los Angeles service now. He has ordinary reservations, he carries cargo, he even has a 'business jet' class so his tariff structure is indistinguisable from ours.

"Skytrain was a failure. If not, why has he changed it so drastically?" said Draper.

"No, Skytrain hasn't worked," said TWA's general manager in Britain, Laurence H. Langley. "The truth is only a small number of people found it attractive."

To Lawrence L. Suttenberg and Anne R. Suttenberg, both of Newton, Middlesex County, and said Commonwealth; Stanley Suttenberg, of Hewlett, Long Island, in the State of New York: and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended:
City Bank & Trust Company, a duly existing corporation having an usual place of business in Boston, Suffolk County, and said Commonwealth; claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property in said Newton, numbered 5 Montrose Street, given by Lawrence L. Suttenberg and Anne R. Suttenberg to plaintiff, dated September 27, 1979, recorded with Middlesex County (Southern District) Registry of Deeds, Book 13799, Page 86, has filed with said court a complaint for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry and possession and exercise of power of sale.
If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended and you object to such foreclosure you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Boston on or before the thirieth day of June 1980, or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.
Witness, WILLIAM I. RANDALL, Chief Justice of said Court this fourteenth day of May 1980.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS LAND COURT
Middlesex, ss.
To The Honorable The Judges of the Land Court for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Respectfully represents Ellin Saltzman (Silberberg) of Newton, in the County of Middlesex and said Commonwealth; that she is owner of certain lot of land with the buildings thereon situate in Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and said Commonwealth bounded and described as follows:
NORTHERLY: by Hartman Road eighty-four and 93/100 feet;
NORTHEASTERLY: by a curved line forming the junction of Hartmen Road and Village Circle thirty-four and 33/100 feet;
EASTERLY: by Village Circle seventy-six and 03/100 feet;
SOUTHERLY: by lot 429 on said plan eighty-five and 89/100 feet;
WESTERLY: by Lot 427 on said plan one hundred seventeen and 27/100 feet, that the record title to said lot of land is clouded by a mortgage given to Fox Meadow Corporation by George (now deceased) and Ellin Saltzman, dated May 4, 1950 and duly recorded Book 7574, Page 173, purporting to secure a note for $1,000 payable with interest annually, which mortgage appears to be undischarged, unassigned and unforeclosed on and by the record--or not properly or legally discharged of record:
That for more than twenty years after the expiration of the time limited for the full performance of said condition no payment has been made and no other act done in recognition of said mortgage and;
That the mortgagor named in said mortgage and those claiming under her have been in uninterrupted possession of said land for more than 20 years after the expiration of time limited in said mortgage for the full performance of the condition thereof.
Wherefore your petitioner pray that after appropriate notices a decree may be entered on the foregoing allegations as authorized by Section 15 Chapter 240 of the General Laws as amended by Chapter 20, of the Acts of 1924.
By the Court.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

Being one of The First has its advantages.

Discover them on Saturday, June 7
9 AM - 1 PM, 40 Morrissey Blvd., Dorchester

One First advantage is the chance to work in many departments and branches. You'll see the whole spectrum of banking activities...meet new people...learn new skills. Along the way, you'll learn what you like to do best with The First and what your best skills are. That's why we do it.

Great benefits include free checking; discounts on auto loans and Mastercharge if you're eligible; tuition reimbursement; paid medical coverage and much more.

Someone will be waiting to give you a quick First overview. Then you can ask your own questions, about where you can go with The First. Come talk to The First about these opportunities: take hold of a great advantage!

CLERK TYPISTS
We have openings at our Morrissey Blvd. and 100 Federal Street facilities. These positions are available for individuals with good office skills and typing of 35 wpm. Bookkeeping experience a plus.

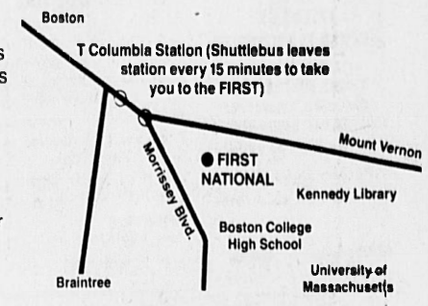

COLLECTORS
We currently have some exciting openings for full-time collectors. Part-time positions on our twilight shift are also available.

CLERKS
Currently, we have opportunities for clerks without typing skills. Responsibilities include filing, telephone work, and/or lifting heavy trays or reels of tape. You need to be accurate and pay close attention to detail. There are various shifts available.

CRT OPERATORS
We have full-time positions available at our Morrissey Blvd. facility. You should have good keyboard skills, to take advantage of your choice of various shifts.

SECRETARIES
When you join The First, you will have a choice. If you have shorthand or its equivalent, you can explore and work in as many job environments as you like—move from branch to branch, from department to department, until you find the spot that fits just right. Then settle down, the best is yet to come.

Take advantage of our special subway shuttle leaving Columbia Station on the Red Line every 15 minutes to take you straight to our door. This special service is available on Saturday, June 7 only. For those of you who prefer to drive, convenient free parking will also be available.

Come share refreshments.
While you're visiting our Dorchester location, why not take advantage of our proximity to the Kennedy Library?
If you are unable to be with us on Saturday, drop by our Morrissey Blvd. Employment Center anytime, Monday through Friday during business hours, or call 929-6618. If it's more convenient, visit our Employment Center, in downtown Boston, on the 11th floor, 100 Federal Street, from 9AM-4PM, or call 434-8444.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own . . . but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item . . . and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers . . . so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood . . . but you'll want a bigger crowd than that . . . so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing . . . get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

'Fiddler' proves immortal

By Eleanore Parker

Stage review: "Fiddler on The Roof" by Joseph Stein, based on Sholom Aleichem's stories by special permission of Arnold Perl; music by Jerry Bock; lyrics by Sheldon Harnick; directed and choreographed by Jerome Robbins; produced by Eugene V. Wolsk; starring Herschel Bernardi; at the Music Hall, Boston.

"Fiddler on The Roof" is ageless. The production, now playing at the Music Hall, is as fresh and timeless as it must have been when it first opened on Broadway in 1964. Herschel Bernardi is a memorable and endearing Tevye, who finds that life without "Tradition" is as shaky as a "fiddler on the roof".

Bernardi, who performed the role on Broadway for two years, obviously knows and loves Tevye. Every inflection and mannerism is perfect, and his rendition of "If I Were a Rich Man" is as bright and exciting as if this were the first time that he's performing it. Bernardi, however, did not originate the role of Tevye. The late Zero Mostel, of course, was the original Tevye, and he performed in that role in the last touring production to play Boston, shortly before he died.

The remainder of the cast, although mostly unknown, is uniformly excellent. Particular mention should go to Rhoda Gemignani as Golde, Tevye's wife, Ruth Jaroslow as Yente, the Matchmaker and Paul Lipson as Lazar Wolf, the butcher. Hope Katcher, Donalyn Petrucci and Lis Larsen are all very good as Tevye's three eldest daughters Tzeitel, Hodel and Chava. Donalyn Petrucci, as Hodel, displays a fine soprano voice in the lovely "Far From the Home I Love."

This production was staged and choreographed by Jerome Robbins, who staged the original production. The dances, joyful and exuberant, reflect the emotions and traditional values of the villagers of Anatevka. The choreography of "To Life" and "The Wedding Dance" is breathtaking and exhilarating.

Bernardi as Tevya

The book by Joseph Stein is based on the stories of Sholem Aleichem, and captures the bitter-sweet world of the Jews who lived in Czarist Russia. They believed that "Tradition" would protect them from the extreme hardships and cruelties they faced every day. But while it proclaims "Tradition", "Fiddler On The Roof" is about to change, and the effect of the modern world on the inhabitants of the quiet little village of Anetvka. The story is universal. People throughout the world are still leaving their homes in search of freedom in strange new lands.

This is no skimpy production of "Fiddler On The Roof". The cast is large, the voices are full, the sets by Boris Aronson, costumes by Patricia Zipprodt and lighting by Ken Billington are perfect. If you've seen "Fiddler" only performed in a local college, community or dinner theatre production, you owe it to yourself to see the real thing. It's pretty warm and wonderful.

NEWTON—The Newton Lodge of Elks will have State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci as guest speaker for their annual Flag Day Ceremony, June 12, at 7 p.m. in the lodge at Newton Corner.

Cub Scouts and the Emblem Club will also attend. The public is invited.

String music seminar set

BELMONT — The Belmont Music School will sponsor a string orchestra weekend June 13-14 for intermediate and advanced students of high school and junior high school age at the First Unitarian Church in Belmont, 404 Concord Ave.

The orchestra, conducted by Robert Eshbach, will include members of the school faculty.

A series of intensive rehearsals of a chosen repertoire is scheduled Friday, June 13, from 7 to 9 p.m. and Saturday from 9:30 to noon and 1 to 2:30. The musicians will present a short concert at 3 p.m. Saturday. (Participants will have a picnic lunch at noon).

Registration is underway at the school, 484-4696 or 489-2559. The fee is $25. Music is available at the school.

Comfort in new handbags

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK (NEA) - "Last year, ready-to-wear dictated the constructed look in bags," says Jeffrey Frankel, vice-president of Lewis Purses, which makes handbags in New York.

"And," he confesses, "the consumer didn't buy it from me or anybody else because the American woman is comfortable with what she is comfortable with."

For instance, lots are comfortable with real leather bags. And uncomfortable with them, too. Put just half of what you always carry in many genuine leather bags and, by the end of the day, the sheer weight of it all has you round-shouldered, charley-horsed and disgruntled.

So this year, to make you more comfortable in leather, Lewis Purses, among others is taking a lighter approach to the matter.

"We're doing a 'panache' line of bags using very lightweight leather," Frankel says, "in casual soft styling. By lightweight, I mean leather that weighs 3½ to 4 ounces, which, flexible as it is, could not be used in ready-to-wear. Garment weight leather is much thinner because it has to be much more flexible."

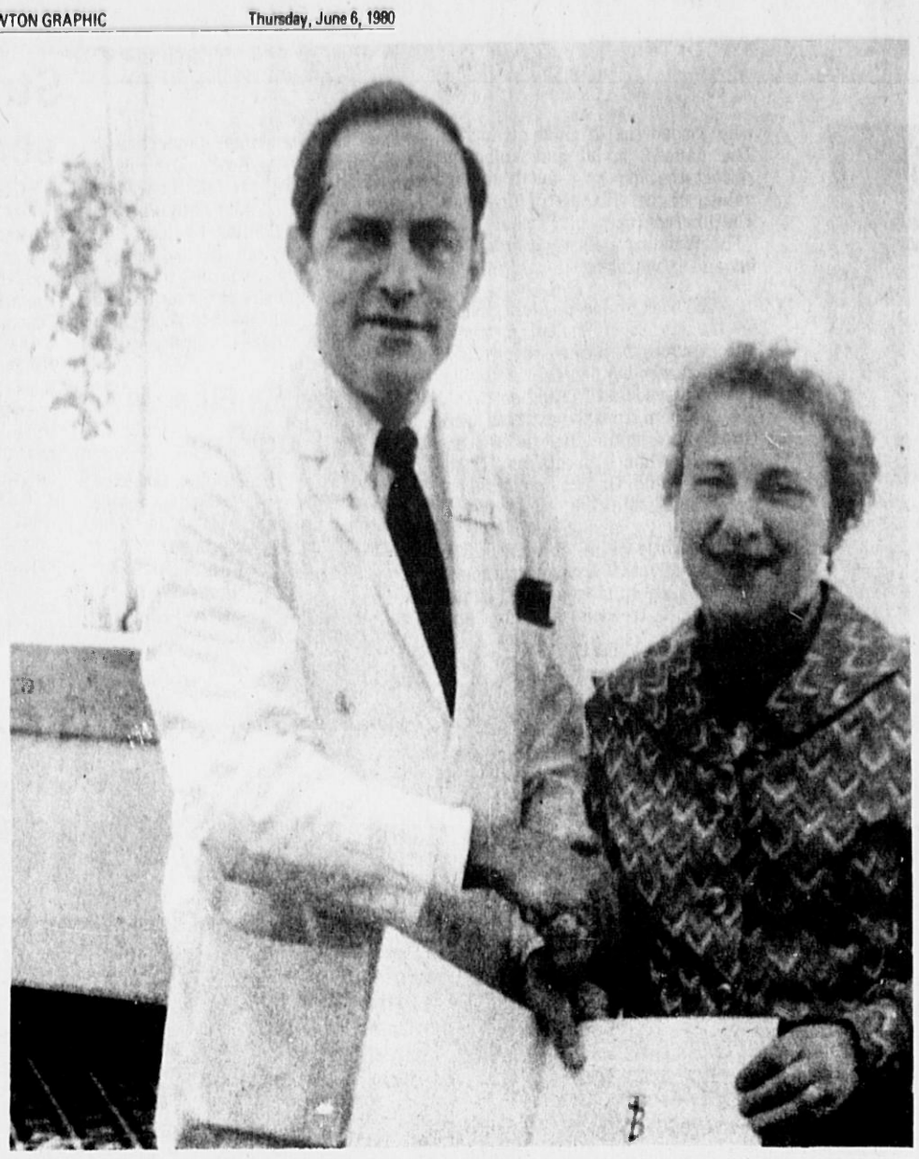

So much for the basic cowskin. How it's shaped and gussied up determines weight, too. For instance, Lewis' basic clutch with the wristlet handle or drop-in shoulder strap and facile frame ($62), is light and breezy.

So, too, are their hobo bags: a soft floppy one with zipper top, adjustable shoulder strap, outside pocket and tab front closing for $115, and its younger sister for $100.

For one thing, he explains, "There are stay papers in the flaps to give them shape because this is a more tailored bag, which means it's not supposed to be soft and floppy. That makes it heavier. So do the hardware handle holders on the sides, the rings made of 24k gold-plated brass."

The more hardware, obviously, the heavier, and, if you've got a vinyl lining to prevent the bag from getting dirty, that adds up, too. "That's why we use faille to line our bags," Frankel says. "It's lighter."

But no matter how they tip the scales in their naked state, all these day bags of American leather will arrive this fall in the following shades, in specialty and department stores all over: gray, burgundy, taupe, brown, black, navy. Plus mushroom and eggplant, which, as any calorie-counter knows, counts next to nothing.

A life of riches to rags to riches

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tamara Homer's family landed in New York in 1949 as refugees with "nothing but $28 and a lot of determination," and as head of her own advertising firm she is a defender of American capitalism that made it possible.

Mrs. Homer, president of Homer & Durham Advertising Ltd., which had $10 million in billings last year, is a soft-spoken, elegant woman who developed a business sense very early.

"I was in an unfortunate position; we were refugees and had no money for food ... You get caught up in the feeling that if you don't do something you won't survive, you become resourceful," she said.

Mrs. Homer was 12 years old then — her family had fled the Communists to newly-liberated Austria — and discovered she could trade her knowledge of English, German and eastern languages to work as translator for the American occupying forces.

"People swapped possessions for food and I found you could also swap talent for food. It was an early lesson in capitalism," she said.

Mrs. Homer's family were upper-middle class Ukranians who lived in Poland.

"We were rich, we lived in a castle. But that wasn't important when we arrived in America — nobody cared what we had been. We arrived as poor people and we had to make it on our own."

She feels her early childhood helped fuel her ambition. "Once you've had a taste of having had enough you don't want to settle for less."

Her parents took college for granted. "I went to city schools, to Hunter College, and worked at whatever I could find to earn money," she said.

Her jobs included babysitting, clerking at Woolworths, cookie maker at a bakery. "We — my whole family — were very happy to work at anything we could do and grateful to be able to do so," she said.

Mrs. Homer's early business career was varied, but she feels that every phase led up to her decision to start her own firm. Her first full-time job was as secretary at the New York office of a retail chain. She quickly moved into executive training as a buyer.

After husband Edward J. Homer, an executive with RCA, finished a two-year assignment in California, Mrs. Homer returned to New York and was offered the presidency of an import-export firm. From there she went to the advertising agency that ultimately launched her into business on her own.

Perhaps partly because of her experiences, "I sought my early clients from firms that I felt contributed a useful product to the world — shipping and finance for example," she said.

She handles the administrative end of her agency, the financial and marketing. Her partner Guy Durham — she retains majority interest in the firm — heads the creative side.

She employs 22 people — not many for an agency with its billings, she admits. "Each person does the work of 1 ½ employees. I pay them well. They share in the firm, and they earn it," she said. In a business that has a reputation of "revolving-door" employment her turnover is "practically non-existent."

Mrs. Homer staunchly defends the American business system.

"It's unfortunate that so many look at business as something that's not very nice. There's nothing wrong with making money and I think business does share — in jobs and contributing to the economy."

But more importantly, she feels that in American everyone can succeed at the thing they do best.

"You zero in on the real values — family and survival. Once you understand that you try to apply it to everything." adv for pms tues june 3

Risk, Codex meet again

NEW YORK (UPI) — The main thrust of Saturday's $200,000-added Belmont Stakes has been the rematch between Kentucky Derby winner Genuine Risk and Codex, the vindicated winner of the Preakness.

But when they draw the post positions today for the 1 ½-mile race there will be eight others hoping to spoil the showdown.

It was expected that Rumbo, a fast-closing second in the Derby, and Super Moment, who was fourth, would ship to New York for the final leg of the Triple Crown. And it wasn't any big surprise that Rockhill Native, seemingly recovered from a wrenched knee suffered in the Derby, would go in the Belmont. Or that a couple of New York horses, like Temperence Hill and Comptroller, would be entered.

On the other hand, you have horses like Bing, winless in nine starts and a soundly defeated fifth in the Preakness. And Joanie's Chief, winner of last year's Champagne stakes but winless this year. The biggest surprise, however, was that the undefeated Pikotazo would be be hauled from Mexico City to New York and attempting to become the first Mexican horse ever to win the Belmont.

"I don't care where you're coming from," said LeRoy Jolley, trainer of Genuine Risk. "If you win eight or nine races you've got to be able to run."

The fact that Picotazo has won nine straight including the Mexican Triple Crown obviously doesn't impress racetrackers overmuch. Neither does the fact that he romped to a nine-length victory in his last race on May 31 without ever seeing the whip. What does tickle their interest is the fact that Picotazo has been racing at an altitude of 7,500 feet and may have developed quite a set of lungs to compensate for the lack of oxygen at that level.

Speaking through an interpreter, trainer Claudino Hernandez said he decided to bring Picotazo to New York to run in the Belmont because he'd simply run out of competition in Mexico.

"This is the finest horse I've ever trained, the finest horse in Mexico," said Hernandez, 66, who began training in 1949 but has never raced a horse in the U.S. "He has won all his races and I feel I have a superior horse."

Still, most of the attention will be focused on the rematch between Codex and Genuine Risk.

Wednesday, Maryland's Thoroughbred Racing Board denied a request Wednesday by the owners of Genuine Risk to overturn a stewards' decision and disqualify Codex as the winner of the Preakness.

The board deliberated 55 minutes on the third day of hearings at Pimlico Race Course, then voted 3-1 to uphold the stewards' decision that Codex did not foul Genuine Risk on the final turn.

"What I've said before still stands," said John Nazareth, the assistant trainer for Genuine Risk who condemned Cordero's ride aboard Codex right after the race. "I've said it all."

Israeli blackout

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — A nationwide power failure hit Israel for more than four hours Tuesday, snarling traffic, stranding hundreds of people in elevators and cutting air conditioning in hospitals and holiday resorts.

Electric company officials blamed a short circuit in a major switching station at Caesaria, a resort midway between Tel Aviv and Haifa, for the blackout. They ruled out the possibility of sabotage.

The blackout came shortly before the afternoon rush hour and lasted well into the evening. By 7:30 p.m. power was restored in most parts of the country. It was the second nationwide blackout in eight months.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria

The increasing cost of fuel is the prime reason that surcharges are becoming prevalent in the travel industry. Ticket holders may be assessed a fuel surcharge on cruises, charters, and occasionally, at hotels. At this time, domestic airlines are not collecting fuel surcharges. However, CAB regulations now require a mere 24-hour notice of an airline fare increase. The airlines are free to incorporate increased fuel costs into their fares. Fortunately, current rules stipulate that air tickets are to be accepted at the price which was in effect at time of purchase.

Times, routes, accommodations and even costs are becoming a more complex consideration when making travel arrangements. A professional travel agent such as BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner, is up to date on these matters. At BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC. our staff takes the initiative in travel planning to save you time, money and energy and make your trip more enjoyable. Students from Carr School in Newtonville visited with Newton Congressman Robert Drinan during their recent trip to Washington, D.C. Drinan explained the role of a member of congress and led the group in a discussion of national and international affairs.

Board meets on county suit

NEWTON — There is substantial disagreement among aldermen over a lawsuit by Middlesex County to recover $1. million in overdue assessments.

The Board of Aldermen went behind closed doors Monday to discuss a response to the suit and the meeting was reportedly heated.

The county is seeking three overdue assessments, eight percent interest, and any money the city may have made by investing the withheld money.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk reportedly suggested a settlement with the county that would result in the city paying only the overdue assessments and the interest charge.

Before goinq into executive session, Alderman Mark White, chairman of an ad hoc committee on Niddlesex County, said he will ask for an appropriation to hire outside counsel to represent the board with an "innovative and agressive defense.

The Board of Aldermen will meet again on Wednesday to continue the executive session, and White said he will recommend an appropriation of $10,000 for outside counsel. The city must answer the county's complaint by May 17.

Some aldermen are getting cold feet about the lawsuit and agree with Alderman Ethel Sheehan that the county has an absolute right to assess member communities, and that the city has an absolute duty to pay. Funk said in open session that the city is in violation of state statute.

But White doesn't think the case is so clear cut, and he said if the state statutes on county government are taken together the county's failure to supply reports required by law becomes very important.

Newton pays the largest assessment of any county community. The first assessment was withheld a year-end-one-half ago after aldermen questioned the level of county service.

Later, the board justified the withholding of the assessments because the county has not supplied annual reports required by law.

The complaint filed with the state Supreme Judicial Count by Asst. District Attorney Howard Whitehead names as defendants the city, Treasurer Theodore Scafidi, Assessors Harold J. Brady and Thaddeus D. Jankowski, Jr., and all 24 aldermen.

Before going into executive session, Alderman Robert Tennant said county officials were "blatant politicians saying go 'go to hell'. We can't find were the money is, where it has been spent. How long are we going to let this go on. I hope we'll do what we have to do to make thooe birds stand up and be counted . . ."

Board of Aldermen President Matthew Jefferson said "If we're playing poker, it's time to play, call the hand, or turn it in."

A motion to go into executive session to discuss the litigation was approved on a 14-8 vote. Aldermen Richard McGrath and Dominic Taglienti, who opposed the executive session, did not participate in the meeting.

Voting for executive session were aldermen Lisle Baker, Rodney Barker, Wendell Bauckman, Donald Budge, Bruce Carmichael, Paul Coletti, Cynthia Creem, Ernest Dietz, Robert Gaynor, Elaine Gentile, Edward Richmond, Susan Schur, Carol Ann Shea and Jefferson.

Drinan extolls adult education

NEWTON— Nearly all American adults know how to read. But most are funtionally illiterate in their understanding of many of the complex problems in the world today, U.S. Rep. (D-4th) Robert F. Drinan told an audience here Saturday.

"If the American public is not educated or sophisticated enough to understand public policy, then our democracy is doomed," Drinan warned.

For that reason, Drinan said, he favors a massive influx of additional federal funds for continuinq educational programs for adults. He called Newton's community programs "a model of what we should strive for."

Drinan's words were met by receptive ears as he was the keynote speaker at the morning-long symposium sponsored by Newton Community Schools, which runs the city's continuing education proqrams. The subject of the conference was "Community Leadership in the Eighties."

"The number one problem of the 80's," Drinan said, "is to met accurate information to 100 million adults in America...From where I sit, it seems like people want simplistic solutions to complex problems."

The congressman added, "Only federal assistance can get what you have in Newton across the land. More federal funds can also intensify your program here."

Drinan added, "You've reached 13,000 people with $220,000. It's extraordinary that 66 percent of your funds are self-generated.

"I hope we will have a renaissance in learning that in America. I am proud renaissance started in Newton, Mass."

Drinan cited two areas where he feels "illiteracy" is rampant: nutrition and computers.

"We thought we were literate about cholesterol, but we're not," he said. "I'm kind of illiterate about computers," he added, saying computers are another subject ripe for study in community education programs.

Asked after the meeting which problems seemed to produce "simplistic solutions," Drinan said inflation and energy. Drinan noted that he is a co-

$710,000 for purchase of golf club endorsed

NEWTON — The Finance Committee Monday supported the mayor's request for $710,000 to purchase the Chestnut Hill Golf Course.

The city will acquire more than 71 acres of the original golf course remaining after construction of 42 townhouses on Algonquin Road and Kenrick Street.

In submitting the request, Mayor Theodore D. Mann said " I now am reasonably convinced that the cost of long-term maintenance of this valuable recreational resource will at no time in the future by borne by the taxpayers." At one time the mayor said he would not spend city funds for the acquisition.

The appropriation of $710,000 will be reduced by a state reimbursement of $125,000, and a $64,000 lump sum assessment to the townhouse developer, reducing the city's cost to $521,000 to be bonded over a period of time.

A betterment assessment on direct abutters will generate $200,000 over a 20-year period. About 50 parcels are expected to be assessed.

The Newton Commonwealth Improvement Corportation a group of neighbors who bought the club for $50,000 at auction last April, will disband and a non-profit corporation will be established to lease the course to the city and operate it as a public golf course.

Mann said he has been assured that members of the corporation will not profit from the sale of the club land to the city or to the developer.

Assessors estimate the townhouse construction will generate about $220,000 in taxes

An annuity fund will be established by the Newton Commonwealth Improvement Corporation with an initial investment of $115,000 which will be transferred to a non-profit foundation. The fund will be used to maintain the 71 acres as open space in the event the golf course fails. If revenues from the fund exceed the amount needed for maintenance, the excess can be used to maintain other conservation land in the city.

The request from the mayor was for $10,000 more than the stated purchase cost, and that amount will be used for appraisals, title search and closing costs.

The Finance Committee Monday also recommended adoption of a state statute that establishes a betterment district, and accepted a list of abutters to be assessed. Owners of about 25 percent of the abutting parcels have not agreed to the betterments although their agreement is not required by law.

Residents, officials oppose proposed MBTA fare increase

NEWTONVILLE — About 50 people attended Monday night's MBTA hearing at Newton North High School, and many voiced strong opposition to the proposed fare hikes.

Spokesmen for Mayor Theodore Mann, who is attending the U.S. Conference of Mayors in Seattle; Rep. Barney Frank, Rep. David Mofenson and U.S. Senator Paul Tsongas, were present and spoke against the fare increses increases.

In a statement read by David Wilkinson Mann said, "Such an increase is not appropriate."

Mann noted that the added revenue will not make a dent in the MBTA's present deficit and that any increase should come with better T services.

He added that a fare increase would mean more money poorly spent, and said he would not support one at this time.

Rep. Mofenson (D-Newton), said in his statement, "My constituents who ride the Green Line are not receiving value for money even at the present rate, let alone the proposed new rate."

Mofenson questioned whether or not the increase would be the first of several more increases in the near future and whether or not service cuts were being planned.

Senator Tsongas (D-Mass.) said the MBTA must control costs and increase productivity.

A rate increase, Tsongas stated, is not an appropriate way to deal with the MBTA's financial woes. He suggested a gas tax to make the T look more desirable.

Others cited a decrease in ridership as a problem, including Rep. Frank, who stated, "A fare hike today will aggravate our energy problem by driving people away from mass transit."

Frank described the MBTA as the most "inefficient and wasteful public agency in the state," and said he opposes giving it any more funds "whether through property taxes, fare increases or state revenues" until it becomes more efficient.

Anita Capeless, president of the League of Women Voters of Newton, complained of unreliable and inefficient service on the Green Line, adding that the MBTA needs money, but that the money should come through savings, more efficient management and greater productivity of workers. .

Henry Brown, a resident of Waban, agreed an increase in fares would not solve MBTA problems, but that increased productivity of workers adnd better leadership might. Fredrich Schewster of Auburndale, who is blind, told the hearing he has waited 45 minutes for a

Green Line train. He also questioned the 100 percent increase in the fare from Riverside to Longwood. The MBTA has proposed increasing all rapid rail line fares now 25 cents to 50 cents, 50 cents to 75 cents and 75 cents to $1. Fares on the Arborway, Beacon Street and Commonwealth Avenue lines between the surface portion of the line and the subway will increase from 45 cents to 50 cents. Fares on the Riverside Line will also increase within zone 1, Reservoir through Fenway, from

50 cents to 75 cents; Zone 2, Riverside through Chestnut Hill,

50 cents to $1; between zones 1 and 2 from 50 cents to $1; and between zone 1 and the subway from $1 to $1.25 and zone

2 to and the subway from $1 to $1.50.

Commuter Rail fares within the Commonwealth would be raised an average of 19 percent by raising the terminal charge from 75 to 80 cents and the mileage charge from 4 to 5 cents.

There is also a plan to convert the rapid rail system to a token system, which would mean tokens would be on sale at all collectors booths.

The plan would go into effect Sept. 1 for all passholders and June 30 for all other riders.

The hearing, required under the Urban Mass Transportation Act, was conducted by John Coffey, assistant general counsel for the MBTA; and John Taylor, assistant treasurer and comptroller.

Frank, Clark trade potshots at debate

NEWTON–State Rep. Barney Frank and Waltham Mayor Arthur J. Clark are acting like they are the only candidates in the Fourth Congressional race.

In fact five candidates shared the stage at the Marriott Hotel Thursday for a debate sponsored by The Tab, a Newton-Brookline weekly newspaper. It was the first major exposure in this end of the district for Republican Richard Jones of Harvard and Democrat Robert Blair Shaffer of Fitchburg.

Newton state Rep. David Mofenson (D), who agrees with Frank on major issues, escaped the potshots aimed at Frank by other candidates, perhaps because Frank's image has crystalized as "the liberal" candidate. Arthur Clark (D), who a month ago counted an endorsement from supporters of outgoing Cong. Robert F. Drinan, directed most of his comments at Frank, who won the group's endorsement. Repeatedly Clark called for heavy defense spending for military reasons, and as a way to create jobs in the district. A reliance on defense contracts for jobs is risky and inflationary, Frank responded, and a repudiation of Drinan's policies.

Frank and Mofenson support federally-funded abortions. Shaffer and Jones do not, although Jones said he might support shifting the decision on funding to the states. Clark was the most vehement opponent of government funding. He said it is the most objectionable part of the federal budget.

Frank, Mofenson and Clark agree on support of short-term wage and price controls. The controls won't work, Shaffer and Jones said.

Clark strongly supported national health care, and using windfall profit taxes on oil companies to help finance the plan. He also supported cost controls as did Mofenson and Frank.

Jones said national health care will not work, and Shaffer said a national plan would be "catastrophic."

Nobody seemed happy with the Kemp-Roth bill that would cut personal income taxes by 30 percent. Mofenson labeled the plan a "total disaster." Frank said it would be inflationary. Jones thought business should be included in the tax cut, but said he really prefers a flat rate tax of 15-18 percent without loopholes.

Clark didn't respond to the Kemp-Roth question but said he would have to look at all tax proposals. Shaffer said he wasn't sure the plan would work, and said a plan to encourage savings and investment is needed.

Questioning the candidates were Jack Hoey, The News-Tribune, Edward T. McHugh, The Worcester Telegram and Gazette, Keith Yokum, The Tab, and Robert Moore, The Middlesex News.

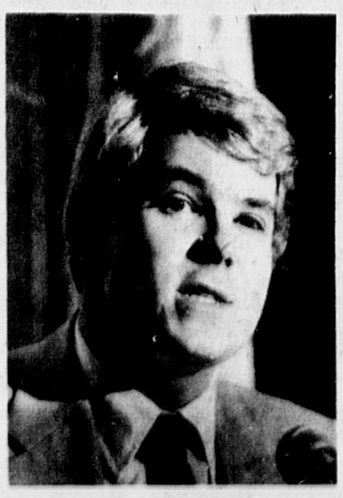

Frank, who moved into the district days after Rev. Drinan announced he would not seek a sixth term because of a papal order, has yoked "compassion and fiscal responsibility" as his watchwords.

Clark contends Frank, a Back Bay representative, doesn't understand the needs of the district and suggested his opposition to defense spending endangers employment in the area.

In one exchange, Frank said he did not believe the tX Missile System would bring a single job to the district, but the federal government has already signed a contract with GTE Sylvania to develop a guidance system that has resulted in increased employment.

Although Clark often mentioned the

Newton 'Racial' incident probed

NEWTON — An internal Police Department investigatiog is underway involving an alleged civil rights violation.

John and Gertrude Gomes, 32 Hamlet Pk., allege their 13-year-old son Antonio, who is black, was forced to the ground and questioned by a Newton police officer while he waited for his mother in the Chestnut Hill Shopping Center on May 3.

Mrs. Gomes and a friend had left their sons in the Gomes car while they went shopping. Antonio was standing by the car when the officer allegedly struck him on the back of the neck, forced him down on the car step, and accused the boys of attempting to oteal a car, Mrs. Gomes said.

Police Chief William F. Quinn said Tuesday the internal investigation by Lt. Paul Robinson will be completed within the week. Quinn said he is preparing a report now for the Newton Human Rights Commission.

A serious accusation has been made, the chief said, adding the investigation is a "top priority."

The South Middlesex Branch of the National Association for the Advancenent of Colored People (NAACP) is supporting the Gomes' complaint.

In a statement about the incident, the NAACP said "We know this matter is now being investigated by the Police Department. However, we have little confidence in a police department investigating itself. We demand that if the charge against the officer is substantiated that he be suspended from duty without pay for a reasonable time. This office of NAACP will support the Gomes family in any reasonable action they deem necessary to have this matter adjudicated."

Quinn said the alleged incident did not end in an arrest. The boys contend they were not asked to identify themselves although they attempted to explain the situation.

The NAACP statement authorized by President Matthew Jefferson contends "the police officer was way out of line in the way he carried out his duty. He apparently had no reason to touch either of these young people."

"The consensus of most citizens of Newton is that we have a fine police department. Unfortunately, there is a growing record that shows that not all Newton police officers respect the rights and privileges of Black citizens.

"If Black people of this city, as well as other cities, are expected to show respect for police officers, the police must show that they are protectors and not persecutors. Historically, this has been the case nationally, and apparently some Newton police officers are still adhering to that old line. It must stop.

"Over the last few years, this office has helped resolve a charge of police harassment of a young Black high school student who lives in Newton Highlands.

Black Citizens of Newton (BCON) was born because of a number of incidents of alleged harassment of Black citizens by Newton police officers.

With the Miami incident still fresh in our minds, we cannot and will not stand by idily while some police officers continue to harass our citizens," the NAACP said.

Hospital says it's willing to talk

NEWTON — An invitation last Tuesday to striking Newton-Wellesley Hospital nurses from hospital administrators to hold talks "to help resolve the current strike" was blocked by the Massachusetts Nursinq Association (MNA) because hospital officials refused to seat them at such talks, said Richard Montalbano, assistant executive director of the hospital.

Montalbano said this Tuesday that the invitation was sent to Janet Barron, chairman of the Nurses Organizing Committee, which he said was an ad hoc group.

Barron could not be reached for comment.

"We would have talked with anyone who came in," Montalbano said. About half of the hospital's 250 regularly scheduled full time and part-time nurses went on strike May 28 in an attempt to have the MNA recognized as their bargainin agent. The total of previously 465 nurses which reported to work at the hospital includes many who work sporadically or only a few hours a year, Montalbano said.

The nurses voted for MNA representation Feb. 28 but the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) impounded the ballots after the hospital appealed the vote. Montalbano said Tuesday that NLRB officials will say only that they will "take action" on the appeal in "the next several months."

Montalbano said that "maybe five" of the nurses who originally went on strike have returned to work. Eleven new nurses were hired, he said, "to continue to operate the hospital."

He said the hospital was functioning with limited medical and limited surgical admissions...at at reduced capacity."

Montalbano said that normally 280-335 patient beds are filled. He said there were "about 100" patients Tuesday.

Surgeons are performing "elective surgery that will require no extensive care," he continued. There is no "high risk" surgery being done, he said. He said surgery is performed five times daily, compared to the normal 25 operations a day.

Montalbano said patients are being referred to Waltham Hospital in Waltham, Glover Hospital in Needham, Morse Hospital in Natick and St. Elizabeth Hospital in Brighton.

The offer to talk is "still on the table," Montalbano said. "Really, I believe the nurses still have to make the decision they want to resolve the strike or remain out."

He said there are no conditions the nurses have to meet to talk. "The hospital will welcome these people back with open arms tomorrow if they want to come back," he contended. "There are no recriminations, no disciplinary action, nothing. Nobody will be fired."

He said the hospital appealed the nurses' vote for MHA bargaining representation because it felt such a bargaining unit was "was inappropriate."

He contended the U.S. Congress placed hospitals under the National Labor Relations Act five years ago in an attempt to prevent bargaining units that could lead to strikes by hospital workers.

Montalbano said the hospital did not want to deal with multiple bargaining units but would rather have the nurses included in a bargaining unit with other health care professionals. A larger unit is less likely to strike and would be "in accordance" with Congressional intent, hospital officials feel, Montalbano said.

The hospital "regrets what is going on," Montalbano said, but "there is no danger that this hospital is going to close."

He said the hospital could continue to operate with "management nurses" and its School of Nursing faculity if more nurses went on strike.

Rt. 9 access delays church plan

NEWTON — The Land Use Committee has again deferred action on a plan to construct a church on Dudley Road, this time in the hope of winning state approval of Route 9 access to the site.

The Church Society of St. John of Damascus is seeking site plan approval for new construction of a church and assembly hall for as many as 400 persons, new parking faciliteis facilities for 114 vehicles, and use of an existing building for administrative offices and Sunday school.

The 184,765-square-foot site at 47 Dudley Road is in a Single-family residence district.

The Board of Aldermen cannot deny site plan requests from religious or educational uses, but can impose "reasonable" restrictions.

A driveway along Route 9 is only possible in a 300-foot stretch between a steep ledge and the intersection with Dudley Road.

City Traffic Planner David Tannozzini told the committee Tuesday the district office of the state Department of Public Works (DPW) will recommend against a curbcut in that section of road. St. John newstrib 2

But Atty. Robert Freeto, representing neighbors who object to a Dudley Road access to the church, said he has contacted District Engineer Joseph McCarthy of the Boston DPW office, who will review the distrct office decision.

Freeto said McCarthy has agreed to

Newton seeks grant to train Asian refugees

NEWTON — The School Dept. is applying for a $77,000 federal grant to institute an employment training proposal for 30-36 Indochinese refugees who recently settled in the Newton area.

School Committee members were presented with the proposal Monday night. It calls for a 30 week program from November to June to include 430 hours of ESL-bilingual, 90 hours of exploratory experiences and 450 hours of intensive vocational training in the participant's choice of 44 programs available at Newton North High School.

The proposal is a cooperative effort of the department, Newton Area CETA, Newton's Office on Southeast Asians, Friends of the Southeast Asians, churches and sponsoring families.

In other business, Committee members were informed that consolidation plans are going well for the closing of the Carr and Davis Schools.

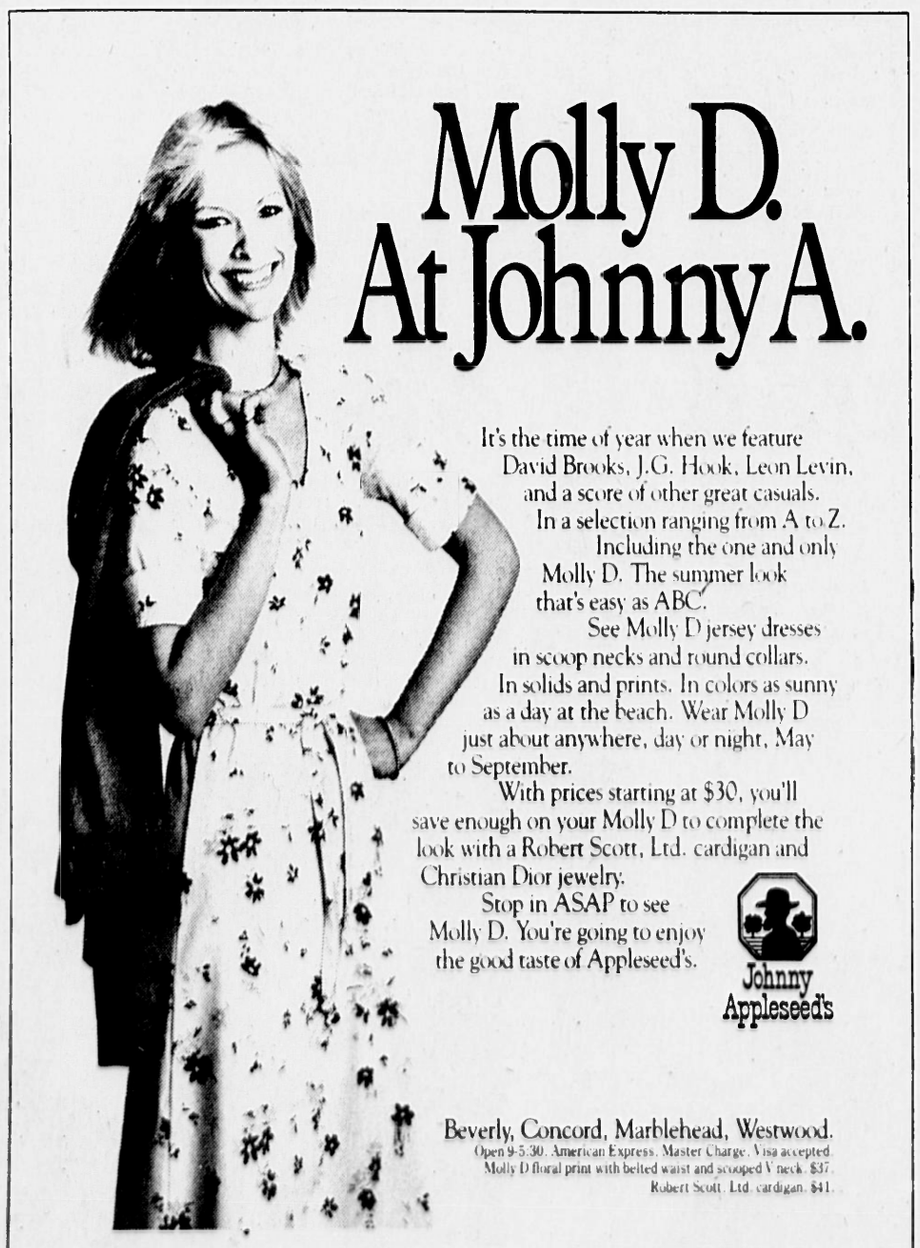

Principals for the two schools and the four receiving schools, Franklin, Burr, Lincoln-Eliot, and Horace-Mann said they had worked well together and addressed all the details.

In addition, the committee received a letter from Police Lt. Charles Feeley that the Dept. had completed its safety walks to orientate those students changing schools to their new routes.

Members also discussed the philosophy of the Newton Advanced Challenge materials, a program designed to give the system's most academically talented children the opportunity to explore their intellectual capacities.

Plans for the program began three years ago and parts of it will be instituted in the next school year. Teachers from all areas of the system took part in deeloping new courses and curricula.

Administration assistants said they hoped to involve university personnel and high technology professionals in a mentor type with the program's students. They also said specifics have not yet been worked out for enrolling students.

Religious, educational developments is concern

NEWTON — A Planning Department study is underway that could provide the city with a method for regulating religious and educational developments.

Both categories of development are exempt from usual zoning ordinances by state law. Local officials can impose reasonable restrictions but cannot deny requests for site plan approval.

The special provision in state law has been a concern to Newton aldermen because they are powerless to deny requests despite sigmificant neighborhood opposition in some cases.

This week the Board of Aldermen approved a site plan for a nursery school in Newton Centre although neighbors and some aldermen thought the location was very inappropriate.

Pending is a request to build a church and assembly hall on Dudley Road for 400 persons, with parking facilities for 114 vehicles, and there is also major opposition to that proposal.

The City of Cambridge recently obtained approval from the etate Legislature to impose additional regulations on educational and religious uses. The city can bar those uses in certain districts.

Although Cambridge has a problem with institutional uses encroaching on housing, and a shrinkinq tax base, Alderman Edward Richmond has proposed similar legislation for Newton.

City Attorney Michael Peirce said a Planning Department study of institutional uses could be used as a case for special legislation along the lines of the Cambridge bill.

But the study could also be used, he said, as background for an ordinance regulating those uses.

A recent lawcase won by the Lenox Board of Appeals suggests a blanket ordinance setting limits on institutional uses may be acceptable.

Restrictions must be uniform and reasonable, Peirce said, if they are to stand a legal challenge.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk has asked the Planning Department to make the study a priority, so the city can quickly draft a special ordinance for institutional uses.

Pipes checked daily for asbestos

NEWTON — A bulk analysis of pipe and boiler coverings in a number of Newton schools has Division of Occupational Hygiene. shown the presence of asbestos, according to the state

The samples showed amosite or chrysotile (asbestos) in varying percentages. Information compiled by the Newton Health Department listed asbestos concentrations in the samples in the range of 20 to 50 percent.

A $23,000 request from Building Commissioner Allan B. Fraser to finance testing and recommendations for all 61 municipal- buildings has been turned down by two aldermanic committees.

The School Department has issued a memorandum to custodians outlining methods for handling the suspected carcinogen.

"Much of the pipe insulation in the schools contains asbestos," according to the memo. "Ordinarily this is a safe, efficient means of insulation. If the lagging (insulation) becomes damaged or broken, the material can present a health hazard unless cleaned up and repaired in a timely manner."

'The School Department directive calls for daily inspections to identify areas of broken or damaged lagging, and teachers are encouraged to report danage to custodians immediately.

Face masks must be worn during all work on pipe lagging. 'Ihe material will be soaked before being removed and placed in plastic bags for disposal. Damaged sections of pipe will be wrapped in duct seal tape until permenant repairs are made.

A recent report from Health Commissioner J. Carolyn Zavarine, M.D., to Roy Cornelius, Jr., school director of support services, notes obviously, these are only temporary measures to be used until the Building Department carrieo out definitive procedures for long-term prevention of release of asbestoe-containing material from the pipe lagging."

Dragon Boat Festival on Charles Sat

BOSTON — Dragon Boats will appear again on the Charles River Saturday, June 14, from 1-5 p.m.

The second annual celebration of the Chinese Dragon Boat Festival will be held on the Esplanade at the Hatch Shell. Events are free and open to the public. Raindate is June 15.

The Dragon Boat Festival will feature activities for all ages, from pre-school children to senior citizens. Chinese arts, crafts and game demonstrations will offer participants an opportunity to learn through experience about the fine and folk arts of China. Special Chinese activities and games are planned for children.

Chinese modern and traditional music, dance and martial arts groups from the Boston area will perform on the stage of the Hatch Shell.

The highlight of the day will be heralded by rhythmic drum beats marking the crew teams' strokes as the dragon boats race on the Charles.

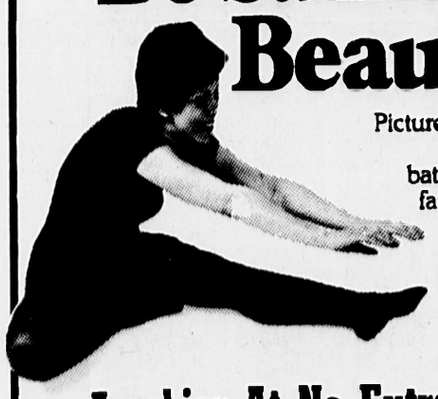

The boats will be decorated to look like traditional Chinese dragons by local artists and will be crewed by school and community groups.

The Dragon Boat Festival commemorates the death of the famous poet and patriot, Chu Yuan of the Zhou Dynasty (circa 400 B.C.).

For centuries, long boats decorated as dragons have been raced in China on the anniversary of Chu Yuan's death to honor his spirit and celebrate the summer solstice.

Line crossed by MacKenzie

Let Ronald MacKenzie's sad experience be a reminder of the temptations that go with election to state office if you are looking toward a political future.

MacKenzie is an attractive, intelligent Lexington resident who held a State Senate seat for several terms. He wound up in federal prison with Sen. Joseph DiCarlo, convicted of accepting cash payments to alter a legislative report in favor of a contractor. Of all those who have paraded before the Special Commission concerning State and County Buildings, MacKenzie rates sympathy.

MacKenzie was more candid than his colleague. In consequence, what he told the commission is far more revealing as an indictment of the system. The former senator already had paid the price in a jail term, wreckage of his public career and family embarrassment.

Now, without excusing his actions, he has given guidance to those trying to reduce corruption in Massachusetts.

"I predict," MacKenzie said in his opening statement on an initial appearance, "that unless the important remedial legislation proposed by this commission is combined with a comprehensive plan for the public financing of political campaigns, your successors will be here 10 or 15 years hence attempting to remedy new ills produced in large measure by the same old causes."

Earlier, William B. Massielo, self-styled payoff man on state contracts, told the commission "I simply operated within the system that was in existence in Massachusetts . . ."

As a senator, MacKenzie quickly established himself by extensive constituent assistance and sponsoring bills that got through to enactment despite his minority party status. He was maintaining himself with a modest legislative salary and a none-too-profitable insurance business.

His business suffered, he said, as State House duties mounted. He found an "ongoing necessity" to engage in political fundraising. Any number of lawmakers have told the same stories in visits to the newspaper.

Initially, MacKenzie got involved to help a key contact for the MBM firm who was a personal friend and contributor to his campaigns.

Friendship was "used to keep my defense mechanism inoperative until I had crossed the line that separates normal constituent assistance from improper conduct," he stated.

A new legislator goes into Beacon Hill with shining ideals, set to ride a white charger in improving the world. He soon finds himself subjected to all kinds of pressure which, unless he is an out-and-out maverick, rests on personal accommodation and an exchange of favors for good or evil.

Lots of money is floating around. Wining and dining and other forms of entertainment are used to influence the members. Money changes hands under the table. Some succumb, as in MacKenzie's case. Maybe public financing will help, but it's only part of the job.

Let's get to the corruptors, too.

Social Security discriminates against women

By ROBERT DRINAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A task force set up by the House Aging Committee, on which I serve, recently completed a study proving that the Social Security system discriminates against women in a number of areas.

For instance, couples in which both spouses work may receive less retirement benefits than couples in which only the husband works, even if the total earnings of the two couples are identical.

Divorced or widowed women face even more severe inequities. When a marriage lasts for less than 10 years, a woman homemaker does not qualify for any benefits.

These inequities go on and on.

I have joined with other members of the Aging Committee in introducing a package of bills designed to equalize opportunities for both men and women in Social Security.

These bills recognize the economic contributions of the homemaker as well as those of the working woman.

Two of the bills would establish an "earnings sharing" approach to the allocation of Social Security benefits and credits, to provide equal benefits for husband and wife. Other benefits address specific gaps in current coverage and would protect women who suddenly find themselves divorced or widowed.

At a time when 50 percent of all women are in the work force, the outmoded, sexist provisions of the Social Security law must be reformed.

Asbestos in Schools

For years, asbestos was sprayed on walls and ceilings in schools as a safeguard against fire.

Today, we know that it is a cancer-causing agent that represents a tremendous threat to the health of our children.

It is estimated that 10 percent of Massachusetts' schools still contain this deadly carcinogen.

I have supported the Asbestos School Hazard Act. This bill, which would supply grants and loans to local governments, was recently approved by both the House and the Senate.

It is expected that President Carter will sign the measure into law within the next few days.

Medical Records

In 1977, a presidentially appointed commission on privacy found that medical records are much more widely circulated than many patients imagine.

This commission found that there have been many instances of abuse, errors, and offhand observations by doctors that can haunt a person for a lifetime.

This misinformation can affect whether an individual is hired, promoted, insured, or licensed to practice.

To address this problem, my subcommittee on individual rights has written the Privacy of Medical Information Act. This bill would permit individuals to examine and correct their medical records. It would also close these records to employers and insurers unless they have permission from the individual to see them.

Our subcommittee completed its work, and the measure was recently approved by the full Government Operations Committee. Other committee action is required, but I am confident we can pass this important piece of privacy legislation in the present Congress.

As the president has noted, there is tremendous potential for abuse of privacy in modern information practices and facilities. This legislation will provide much-needed protection in the area of medical records.

Handgun Control

Last year a total of 8124 people died needlessly because of America's failure to adequately control the sale and possession of handguns. For years, public opinion polls have shown that the vast majority of Americans wants an end to this carnage, and favor stricter handgun control.

However, the powerful gun lobby here in Washington has worked its will against the will of the American people.

I have continually asked the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Peter Rodino (D-NJ), to schedule hearings on the Kennedy Handgun Control bill which the chairman and I have co-sponsored.

This week I was notified by Chairman Rodino that he intends to schedule a hearing shortly. This is only a first step, but it is an encouraging one.

Running mate woes for Ron

Commentary
by Bob Wagman

LOS ANGELES (NEA) — Ronald Reagan's key aides here conceed their candidate is facing a major problem over his choice of a running mate. What's worse, none of them has yet been able to figure a way out of this bind.

Nearly everyone in the Reagan camp agrees that the strongest running mate for the former California governor would be Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee. They think the Senate minority leader would serve as a link to the more moderate elements of the party, would likely prevent Reagan from losing many votes to independent candidate John Anderson and would make an excellent showing in debates with Vice President Walter Mondale.

But if Reagan chooses Baker, he will break a direct promise to a major special interest, thus casting himself as a candidate who breaks his solemn word when doing so becomes politically expedient.

Reagan has said that his running mate must share his views on all major issues. Baker and Reagan have differed on such major issues as the Panama Canal treaty, but that is considered past history by the Reagan camp. They now pronounce Baker sufficiently in agreement with Reagan on most of the issues.

But there is one big exception: abortion.

Reagan has long been on record as opposing abortion. He received much support in the primaries from right-to-life groups, which see him as the only major presidential candidate with a steady anti-abortion record.

Those same groups consider Baker to be one of the Senate's strongest supporters of abortion. They calculate that he has taken the pro-abortion side 27 times in 28 key Senate votes on the issue since 1973.

Making Reagan's problem even worse is the telegram he sent to a major Chicago-based right-to-life organization just before the critical Illinois primary. In that telegram, he promised flatly that if nominated he would choose "a pro-life running mate."

'BEDTIME FOR BONZO', STARRING RONALD REAGAN

Then in a major interview with the Wall Street Journal, Reagan was asked to list those issues on which he thought he and his running mate could disagree. Reagan named the Panama Canal and a Kemp-Roth type of sweeping tax cut. But on abortion, he insisted that "it would be very hard for me to accept (a pro-abortion running mate) because I feel that we are talking about the taking of a human life."

So, a classic no-win situation has arisen: Choosing Baker would break a direct promise. But not choosing Baker because of the abortion issue would brand Reagan as a zealot, or at least as being so dogmatic that all the old questions of whether he has the mind set to be president will be raised again.

Reagan's staff is trying to work him out of the bind. To start with, they got Baker to say publicly that he is not very interested in being vice president and that he does not expect to be. Thus, if Reagan has to pass him up, the excuse can be made that it was because Baker preferred to stay in the Senate.

In addition, Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin has begun a national poll asking Republicans who they prefer as their party's vice presidential candidate. If Baker is the top choice - and many in the Reagan camp believe, or at least hope fervently, that he will be - Reagan can choose Baker on the basis that it is the will of the party.

Reagan insiders say that if the poll does not show overwhelming support of Baker for the No. 2 spot, the likely choice will be the man likely to cost Reagan the least politically. Their current thinking is that Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar fits this bill.

Meanwhile, the Reagan camp is trying to broaden its base among all elements of the Republican Party.

In recent days, Stuart Spencer and William Timmons, former aides of President Ford, have been invited to join the Reagan campaign in key positions. Both reportedly said they will have to think it over, but they will likely come on board before the Republican Convention in July.

How Carter whipped Ted

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN
UPI political reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jimmy Carter's methodical march to the Democratic presidential nomination was a mixture of smart political strategy, willing surrogates and pure luck.

In 1976, he spent more than two years doggedly stumping the country to beat a pack of better-known contenders, winning the nomination with home-grown Georgia advisers too naive to know it could not be done.

In 1980, Carter gave himself a Rose Garden — the same one he accused Gerald Ford of being too fond of in 1976. What with Iran, and then Afghanistan, he said, he just couldn't leave the White House. A veteran party politician was tapped to run the campaign that never was.

Summer 1979 was bleak for White House staffers. "The Boss" faced political extinction.

First came the mysterious cancellation of a scheduled energy address to the nation, the 10-day domestic summit at Camp David, and then Carter's Oval Office speech about "national malaise."

Whatever momentum Carter created was lost in the confusion of his Cabinet shake-up. Six departments had new top officers, and the country was uncertain about its leadership.

Polls showed Sen. Edward Kennedy could have the nomination for the asking. And some members of Congress were asking — wanting a strong contender to head the ticket.

Jimmy Carter is a fighter.

"I'll whip his ass," Carter told surprised congressmen at a White House dinner. He knew the message would reach the news media. His aides gladly confirmed it.

The boast seemed idle, and it remained so for much of the fall as Kennedy dropped hints he would run.

Kennedy finally said the economy was forcing him to challenge the incumbent. Carter was ready. Aides privately advised him to debate Kennedy as soon as possible.

They agreed to meet face-to-face in Iowa — Carter accepting because he trailed in the polls, Kennedy because it would be a chance to administer a death blow.

The debate never came off. On Nov. 4, militants in Iran seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and 53 Americans. The political lives of Carter and Kennedy became bound to them as well.

Americans rallied around Carter. When Kennedy tried to speak out — saying the shah was corrupt — the public backlash was fearsome.

Carter's official announcement came in a low-key statement in the East Room. He scrubbed plans for a four-day campaign swing, saying he had to stay in the White House and solve the Iran crisis.

Surrogates, led by wife Rosalynn and Vice President Walter Mondale, picked up the cudgels.

After a faltering start at a church in Harlem, where irate black demonstrators drowned out their words, Mrs. Carter and Mondale swiftly fell into a groove, wooing voters with charm

Nurses are bypassing due process

To the Editor:

I am writing as a concerned resident of Wellesley relative to the strike by some of the registered nurses at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The strike, in my opinion, is a bypass of due legal process and is without regard for the welfare of patients and our community.

My concerns are as follows:

—The strike was called while an "appeal" is pending before an official regulatory body; namely, the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB).

The issue before the board is whether the Newton-Wellesley Hospital nurses alone constitute an appropriate bargaining unit under the National Labor Relations Act.

The nurses contend they do. The hospital administration challenges this contention, claiming that other hospital employees ought to be allowed inclusion. The decision rests with the NLRB.

By striking before the NLRB has made a ruling, the nurses are seeking to bypass the due legal process that in fact exists to protect the rights of employees.

—This strike and any other work stoppage by health professionals is disruptive and detrimental to patient care. Lest the public be "hoodwinked" by picket signs and union lip service espousing concern for patients, it's clear that the strikers and their MNA union have in fact abandoned present and prospective patients. Moreover, they are interfering with the rights of our families, our neighbors and ourselves to care in our own hospital.

I hope fellow residents will exhort the striking nurses to resume their professional responsibilities to patients by returning to work.

Whatever issues may be of concern to them should be addressed in an appropriate forum — one that does not adversely affect patient services at the hospital.

Our community owes a debt of gratitude to those nurses who have crossed picket lines and to other hospital employees who have assisted in maintaining essential services during this unfortunate crisis.

Superwalk a sucess

To the Editor:

Superwalk '80, the largest fundraising event of the March of Dimes, is behind us and I would like to take this opportunity to thank the community for its support.

Over 5'000 people with 100,000 sponsors raised $250'000 for March of Dimes programs in birth defects research and prevention.

I would especially like to thank Zayre Department Stores. In addition to underwriting the cost of Superwalk, Zayre Stores all over the greater Boston area served as Superwalk registration points. Their support and involvement was certainly an integral part of the success.

I would also like to thank the Newton Graphic for its willingness to promote the event. It is only with this type of cooperation that we will someday realize a future when all babies are born perfectly beautiful and beautifully perfect.

Once again, many thanks.

Enemy at home

To the Editor:

It is deeply tragic and may even prove fatal to western society that we have mastered all arts but the single most important of all — the art of living.

Modern electronic communication, especially TV when abused, as it is throughout most of the world by viewer and network alike, is doubtless one of the greatest enemies of this, the noblest of all arts.

It squats with innocent deception in our homes, luring us ever so subtly to watch the whole wide, weary world with its endless stream of bewildering, frustrating and urgent problems flashing before our bleary eyes, everyone of them demanding to be solved without delay.

TV is addictive and tyrannical and is leading us with more problems than the human frame can carry.

Man is unique, a thinking creature! Only in the printed word, in the depth, the scope, the marvelous variety and challenge of the books, newspapers, magazines, etc., only through these can he fully and intelligently grapple with today's world.

In life, the rewards for choosing the better way are deeply satisfying, and in the case of TV we have quite a switch.

John Keefe,
Newtonville

Burden of proof

To the Editor:

Another wound has been inflicted upon the American system of justice. On May 29, Diana Ossinger was found guilty by Judge Jablonski on all counts of cashing the paychecks of Mayor Mann.

In the final summation of the defense attorney, he showed where "reasonable doubt" existed — the testimony of one of the prosecution's key witnesses, in which she testified that on a specific date, in no under uncertain terms, Ms. Ossinger cashed both the mayor's check and her own.

The check bore the double stamp as the machine in the treasurer's office was malfunctioning that day. She testified she remembered seeing Ms. Ossinger's check with a double stamp, so she was certain that both were cashed by Ms. Ossinger that day.

When the court was shown Ms. Ossinger's check, it did not bear the double stamp, it did not even bear one stamp from the office. It seems the check was cashed at . Ms. Ossinger's own bank. When presented with this evidence, the witness still refused to change her story.

As if this isn't doubt enough, on a number of occasions that the checks were cashed, it was proven that Ms. Ossinger was not at City Hall, and once not even in this part of the country.

The prosecution's response to this was that only Ms. Ossinger had the opportunity to cash the checks and she "could have" done so. Since when is "could have" strong enough evidence to convict?

As far as opportunity, anyone in the treasurer's office who knew that Ms. Ossinger deposited the mayor's checks "could have" crossed off "for deposit only" and pocketed the money.

I'm not saying anyone did, but to use the prosecutor's own words, they "could have."

The burden of proof lies with the state. The defendant must be proven guilty beyond reasonable doubt. The facts speak for themselves; there is much doubt.

Ms. Ossinger is to all her friends and to all those who believe in the American system of justice and innocent victim, and a trial by a jury of her peers will bear out our faith in her.

The well runs dry

To the Editor:

The Bottle Bill will once again come to Governor King's desk soon. The way I see it, the point to recycling and conservation is that if we don't cut down on the sheer volume of non-renewable resources we gobble up, the day will come when the well will run dry' and we'll all be left high and dry.

Oil, steel, aluminum, glass, all come from the earth. No matter how vast the supply seems to be, it is a finite amount. Worldwide industry has been consuming the earth's resources at an ever-increasing rate, and now the bottom of the barrel is beginning to be clearly seen.

Have you ever thought of how thin the veneer of civilization is? What stands between a comfortable existence and starvation? It is oil that moves produce from California to Boston.

It is steel that is made into wheels and gears of the nation.

Energy from oil and coal make it possible to fashion containers from aluminum and glass.

I believe there is time to change industry over from dependence on dwindling non-renewable resources to independence by carefully husbanding renewable resources.

The change has begun, but many drag their feet. We have no other choice but change. If the change is not complete by the time the well runs dry, there will be a disaster as crippling as nuclear war.

I understand the bottling industry is large and its systems of operation were developed decades ago. It is a great sacrifice on their part to change equipment, standardize bottles, install bottle washers, develop different handling techniques and returnable bottle-collection systems. .

This is difficult, but not impossible. Expensive in the short run, but economical in the long run.

I suspect that bottlers who do put in the work of tooling up for recyclable containers may face unfair competition from bottlers who don't. A law banning non-returnable containers will protect the investments of bottlers who go through the expense of converting their operations to re-use containers.

Eliminating the cost of containers will reduce overhead and increase profits and gain independence from fluctuating prices and availability of glassmaking materials.

It will curry public favor because it will reduce taxesby reducing the load on municipal waste systems. It will result in cleaner air, cleaner water and independence from foreign oil, which will reduce inflation.

Elitism

To the Editor:

For the Drinan organization to attempt to coalesce behind one candidate in a crowded primary field makes a great deal of sense. But for 35 people who represent the upper echelons of the Drinan organization to assume that they can speak for and-deliver the support of the thousands of Drinan volunteers without any attempt to consult them or to let them participate in the selection process smacks of the worst kind of elitism.

I have been a loyal—albeit lowly—Drinan supporter and worker for the past 10 years. I am offended and shocked that Congressman Drinan's top level organizers would participate in such a closed, secret process.

Newton protests limit on Metco

NEWTON — School Committee members Monday voted to send a letter to the State Dept. of Education to protest the state's policy not to accept increased enrollment for the Metco program next year.

School Dept. plans had called for an addition of 43 students to the program bringing the total to 440 for 1980-81. Now only 18 students can take advantage of the program.

Metco is a state funded program to allow inner-city youths the opportunity to attend suburban schools. The program, on behalf of school districts and students, is voluntary.

The Dept. of Education's Director of Metropolitan Programs, Doreen H. Wilkinson, in a letter to school committees cited two reasons why the Dept. had made the decision. She said one was due to the cost of funding the program in the face of increased inflation.

Ms. Wilkinson also said that if the participating districts could increase enrollment at no extra cost for fiscal year 1981, expanded enrollment could mean additional costs in future years.

Commissioner of Education Gregory Amrig has requested $7.8 million for Metco in his 1981 budget, according to Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink. Newton's program costs about $780,000, Fink said.

"I am very distressed at this and what it means to school systems like Newton that have declining enrollments and can accommodate more students than five or ten years ago," said Committeewoman Honora Kaplan. Committeewoman Katherine Jones said she was most concerned that the policy could mean the beginning of the end for Metco. She suggested political factors may be involved in the decision.

"Declining enrollments are ocurring in other communities such as Boston, and Boston may want those kids back there because the kids provide jobs and take up classroom space just as Metco kids provide jobs for teachers in Newton," Mrs. Jones said.

Mrs. Kaplan offered to lobby state legislators for more program funds, but Supt. Fink warned that could jeopardize a cutback in money. Fink said the state's request is 12 percent more than this year's.

Fink did stress that an increased committment for Metco must be forthcoming from the state.

"I maintain that voluntary desegregation is a lot cheaper and more healthy than imposed segregation," Fink said during a meeting break.

He said that Metco should provide an element of choice for blacks. "They should be able to decide to stay in Boston and demand equal education or be able to come to the suburbs," Fink said.

NEEDHAM — Teams from 12 towns are expected to participate in the Muscular Distrophy benefit baseball day to be held at Claxton Field on Saturday.

"Needham firemen are ready for the biggest baseball day ever," notes Firefighter Tom Welch, coordinator of the benefit. "We haven't decided our own lineup, but we'll be ready on . Saturday. Muscular Distrophy will be the real winner — and maybe some of the kids and adults who are victims of that crippling disease."

Chairman,
Cancer and Leukemia Group B

Once Jennifer's future would have been far from bright. Then childhood leukemia meant almost certain death. It took many long years, but now things are changing. Not only for children with leukemia, but through what we've learned working to save them, for patients with many other types of cancer as well.

Leukemia research helped us find treatments to keep cancers from spreading. Treatments that kill traces of disease so they won't threaten a patient's life. For thousands of people who'll beat cancer this year, these new approaches will make the difference. In a very real way, they'll have children like Jennifer to thank for their lives.

Cancer is hundreds of different diseases. There won't be a single answer. But there is continuing progress. For patients like Jennifer, we're making your contributions count.

Local funding sought

NEWTON — The Planning Department is seeking local funding for the final design of six intersections to be reconstructed with an estimated $1 million in state and federal funds.

If the $15,000 request for design work is approved, construction will go out to bid in August.

The proposed appropriation, plus $12,000 in federal Community Development funds, will boost thc design budget from $30,000 to $57,000. Community Development funds will be used to complete the designs for the Washington Street-Centre Street and Centre Street-Centre Avenue locations.

The local share is required to complete the design for two locations on Commonwealth Avenue at Centre and Washington Streets as well as the Centre Street-Walnut Street intersection. The intersection of Centre and Beacon Streets is the sixth Urban Systems Project location.

The Public Works Department has requested an Urban Systems project for the entire length of Commonwealth Avenue and the two intersections on that street scheduled for traffic improvements will become models for further work.

The city is also trying to accelerate its state-aided highway reconstruction program.

The reconstruction of the remainder of Crafts Street will begin in June, and thé reconstruction of Chestnut Street (Beacon Street to Route 9) will begin later this summer.

More that $1.1 million in state-aid funds will be expended but the state program is funded on a reimbursable basis.

During the Waltham and Crafts Streets projects city appropriations were necessary because the project required local matching funds. The criteria of the progran has changed and a local match is no longer required but there is a delay before reimbursement and the Public Works Department 0 is seeking a $100,000 appropriation, most of which will be reimbursed.

Safety improvements to eight intersections are being hampered by local problems. The authorized Board of Aldermen the improvements during recent years but they have not yet been funded.

Several of the projects, including three intersections on Commonwealth Avenue, will be incorporated into street reconstructicn projects.

Of the remaining eight intersections, the Public Works Department only has enough noney, about $45,000, for four locationo. The projects cannot get underway by the end of the fiscal year and the department is asking for an appropriation in that amount to the next fiscal year budget, to be offset by a turnback at the end of this fiscal year.

Intersections that could be funded are: Greenlawn Ave.-Park Lane-Brentwood Ave.; Sumner St.-Willow St.-Lyman St.; Newtonville Ave.-Lewis Ter.- East Side Parkway; and, Grove St.-Hagar St.

Anti-nuke literature allowed

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — A Superior Court judge ordered the Lawrence Livermore nuclear weapons laboratory, operated by the University of California for the federal government, to allow distribution of anti-nuclear literature in its public reception center.

But, Judge Robert Bostick in Alameda County Tuesday delayed enforcing the preliminary injunction for one week to allow laboratory attorneys to appeal.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Alan Schlosser filed the suit in behalf of the Nuclear Weapons labs Conversion Project.

Mofenson liberal alternative?

high technology Route 128 belt, Shaffer said ,is end of the district has more to lose beceuse of inflation. The average worker has made no monetary gains since 1967, he claims, and he supports tax indexing.

The answer to inflation and unemployment is a balanced budget, Jones said, tax cuts for individuals and businesses, and the elimination of wasteful spending.

Mofenson, who is emerging as the alternative liberal in this race, says he can cut across philosophical lines to deal with a range of people on a range of issue

It's going to be a good year for fiscal conservatives, and all candidatee had a solution. Mofenson agrees with Sen. Kennedy on the immediate imposition of wage and price controls, questions a $32 billion expenditure for the MX Missile, and supports selective credit controls.

Frank also supports wage and price controls while looking for more long-term remedies.

Clark supports those controls only on an emergency basis, and thinks the key to the economy is control of the oil industry. He thinks price decontrol was a mistake.

Wage and price controls create shortages, poor qualitY goods and black markets, Jones said. and Shaffer believes the controls are a panacea that has never worked, while the solution is governmental fiscal restraint.

Jones doesn't think there is a trade off between defense spending and human service programs. Economies are possible by cutting waste.

Mofenson would shift the emphasis from defense spending to various assistance programs.

Frank said he has proved he can work to cut waste in government in the state Legislature with bills for MBTA and civil service reform, and he would cut the MX Missile program, increase maritime subsidies, and eliminate waterworks projects.

On the national health care question, Shaffer did not support an across the board plan, but did support catastrophic health insurance, and said the country must provide for the 8 percent of the population without insurance.

Jones said the responsibility for health insurance lies with the states and not with the federal government.

Candidates differed on how much the campaign will cost. Estimates ranged from Clark's low guess of more than $100,000 to Mofenson's estimate of as much as $150,000 to $200,000.

Clark took no position on public campaign financing while Frank and Mofenson favored it and Schaffer and Jones were opposed.

Drinan extols adult education

sponsor of the Lifelong Learning Act, which would increase federal funding of continuing education proqrams from $3.1 million to $25 milllion. He predicted that the proqrams "are goinq to sweep the country like a prairie fire." There are also economic reasons for the program, Drinan added. Citing a "need for increased productivity among American workers, he said, America can Drinan add three best compete against tradinq rivals like Japan by increasing the skills of our workers."

Drinan added, "Continuing education offers us the opportunity to create the most skilled, mature and flexible force in the world."

He cited as an example the difficulties many high technoloqy companies currently have in finding enough skilled employes.

Drinan, a Democrat who represents the Fourth District, recently announced that he will not seek re-election this year, following Pope John Paul II's order that priests no longer hold political office. Drinan, a priest, chose to accept the pope's rulinq.

Questioned privately, Drinan noted that he will continue reqular appearances at forums such as the one in Newton until he leaves office in January, 1981. But as to whether such activities will qo on after January, he said, I don,t knov.

Drinan also declined to comment on the field of candidates now competing for his seat in Congress.

Drinan was introduced by Bill McLaurin, chairman of the Newton Community Schools Commission. McLaurin said the Congressman "has set a standard of excellence in representing this Fourth District.

Weddings

Patricia Hope Cotton and John Donald Bottomley were married at the Belmont Country Club May 18. The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cotton of Waban and Franconia, N.H., is enrolled in a master of business administration program at York University in Toronto. The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bottomley of Whitby, Ontario, holds a master's degree in urban planning and resource development from the University of Waterloo in Ontario. The couple will live in Toronto, following a honeymoon in Bermuda.

DeRogatis-Robbins wed at 'family affair'

In a wedding that was truly a "family affair" Joy DeRogatis married John G. Robbins Saturday, May 31, in Wellesley Hills Congregational Church.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Davis S. DeRogatis of Waban; and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul L. Robbins of Wakefield.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's fatherfather. She was attended by her mother as matron of honor and the groom's mother. The groom's father served as his best man; and the couple's brothers, Peter J. DeRogatis of Waltham and Christopher Robbins of Wakefield, ushered.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Waban home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Wakefield.

Cape Playhouse site of Hayden-Farrington wedding

Suzanne Hayden, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Hayden of West Newton, was married on May 17 to Francis Edwin Farrington, of New York City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Farrington of Tinley Park, Ill..

The wedding took place on the grounds of the Cape Playhouse in Dennis, and Dr. Ross Cannon was the officiating clergyman. Carolyn Hayden, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and best man was Gary Andrashko of Dennis.

The bride, a graduate of Wheelock College, is stage manager of the Cape Playhouse. The groom graduated from Mankato State College in Minnesota and is stage manager of the Performing Arts Center at Herbert Lehman College. They will live in New York and Yarmouthport.

Summer program for teens

BROOKLINE — The Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Center Youth Services Dept. will sponsor a summer program for teenagers in the 7th-12th grades, beginning Tuesday, June 24.

The program will include gym and lounge nights on Tuesdays and Thursdays; Wednesday and Sunday afternoon trips and overnight trips.

Activities at the center include basketball, volleyball, badminton and soccer, discussion groups, music and times to socialize. Day trips include beach days, canoeing, biking, horseback riding, evening cruises and minature golf.

Participants must be center members. Trips will be payable on an individual basis, but there will be a savings for the package registration plan.

For information, call Linda Klemow, 734-0800.

Births

Newton-Wellesley Hospital has reported the following births recently to Newton couples:

A daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Matthews, 235 Chapel St., Newton, on May 3.

A son to Mr. and Mrs. Wayne MacLeod, 92 Chapel St., Newton, on May 9.

A son to Mr. and Mrs. Nazzareno Leone, 201 Jackson Rd., Newton, on May 16.

A son to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blaquere, 2061 Commonwealth Ave., Auburndale, on May 20.

The Rev. Margaret Crockett will preach Sunday, June 15, at the 10 a.m. worship service at Second Church in Newton, 60 Highland St., West Newton. Rev. Crockett has just been appointed summer interim minister at Second Church. She is the widow of Jim Crockett of Channel 2's "Crockett's Victory Garden."

Temple Sinai elects officers

BROOKLINE — Temple Sinai held its 41st annual meeting June 8.

Elected officers were: Mrs. Abraham Shulman, president; Yale Berry, Norman Cubell, Eleanor Lewis, vice presidents; Elliott Bachner, treasurer; Justin Frankel, and Meyer Tuchinsky, assistant treasurers; Harry Wheeler, auditor; Bernard Berkowitch, recording secretary; Bernard Lemlein, administrative secretary.

Complete studies

Seven Newton women recently completed year-long internships in the Newton public schools as part of a study-internship program at Boston Collge.

They are: Lucille Yin Chao-Yuan, Patricia Downey, Ruth Forrest, Barbara Jackson, Lillie Jefferson, Shirley Sowsy, and Janet Weisman.

Analysis

The decline and fall of Edward Kennedy

By DEAN REYNOLDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "We will have plenty of time after June 3 to look at our mistakes, what we might have done differently." That is Sen. Edward Kennedy's standard answer to the question:

"How could you have fallen so fast, so quickly?"

It is a question Kennedy has faced for seven months. And, now that President Carter has enough delegates to win a first ballot nomination, it is worthwhile to look at the reasons for Kennedy's defeat. ——

First, it should be recognized the polls were wrong. They showed Kennedy defeating Carter by nearly a 2-1 margin before he announced his candidacy Nov. 7. It is now apparent Kennedy was sole beneficiary of anti-Carter sentiment, and since he was the only alternative, he got all the support.

The media and, more importantly, Kennedy and his advisers, were beguiled by the samplings. They assumed people favored Kennedy more than they disliked Carter.

The misconceptions about Kennedy's appeal led to other mistakes.

The campaign advertising, which came along later, reflected the idea that people knew and liked Kennedy, leading to a kind of campaign "holding pattern" in which a diffident candidate sought to offend no one.

This led to another major mistake. ——

Kennedy started his campaign like a man certain to face a Republican challenger in November. His speeches were bland, failed to put distance between himself and Carter, and did not articulate reasons for running, other than to point to the economy — a subject even some economists cannot grasp.

The Roger Mudd interview on CBS three days before his announcement underlined the problem in red ink.

Why, voters concluded after seeing the show, should we choose someone who seems no different than the man we already have?

Kennedy sought to change the perception with his Jan. 28 speech on the issues at Georgetown University, but by then events, his past, and his own recklessness filled the identity vacuum with negatives. ——

Negative No. 1 was Chappaquiddick. The campaign braintrust underestimated its impact and Kennedy himself rejected advice to confront it at the outset. He said he would take all questions, but never made the first move.

Instead, the issue was left to fester in innuendo and purported exposes that oozed through November, December and January. To this was added Carter's statement about how he tended not to "panic" at critical times.

Kennedy was unable to surmount the issue. Just last week, in the seventh month of his candidacy, a roadside "Remember Mary Jo" sign greeted his motorcade in Helena, Mont.

Chappaquiddick, however, fit into a larger, less readily definable category. ——

Negative No. 2: Character.

The tragedy on Cape Cod in July 1969 reminded voters of more than just the death of one young woman. It pointed up Kennedy's perceived shortcomings as a man.

Carter and his advertising friends were only too happy to zero in on this. The ad campaign devastated and embittered Kennedy. On radio one heard a voice extolling Carter as "President. Husband. Father. He Does all three jobs with distinction."

On television, regular Main Street Americans were seen expressing doubts about Kennedy, saying they did not trust him.

And there was Joan.

Joan Bennett Kennedy, a strikingly pretty and friendly woman who has just acquired a masters degree in music education, has suffered from alcoholism. It is widely perceived, although denied by the Kennedys, that they separated after 22 years because of Kennedy's alleged extramarital affairs and her drinking. The first reason is conjecture, the second fact.

She campaigned regularly and expressed confidence in her husband. Audiences were sympathetic. But why? Because she had overcome alcoholism — and apparently her husband's behavior.

Negative No. 3: Iran.

Kennedy, an old political pro, committed a classic blunder when he criticized the shah in December. He injected himself into an issue that might have sunk the president had it not been for Kennedy's ill advised comments.

When, on Dec. 2, he told San Francisco television station KRON that the shah had run "one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and had stollen "umpteen billions of dollars from his country," Kennedy appeared to be siding with the anti-shah revolutionaries holding 53 Americans hostage in Teheran.

Whether right or wrong, Kennedy's comments were incredibly ill-timed. Outraged by the U.S. Embassy takeover, Americans unleashed their pent up fury on Kennedy. He never was able to dig out of that hole.

This week in San Jose, Calif., he still was defending himself. ——

Negative No. 4 includes Kennedy's performance as a candidate and the media's portrayal of that performance.

Kennedy is known to believe that there will be many second thoughts about how his candidacy was covered when the year is over.

Reporters were undeniably tough. Some reports, especially television stories about his lackluster stump speeches, were close to being unfair.

But Kennedy had only himself to blame for many problems. He was clearly not ready to take to the campaign trail when he announced Nov. 7. Only after the Illinois primary, March 18, did Kennedy begin to hit his stride. It was too late. ——

There were other, lesser negatives, among them the perception he was trading on a famous family name or was opportunistic and ruthless for challenging a president of his own party.

And Carter's refusal to campaign or debate hurt. Kennedy was the only one on the hustings, the only one who had to answer questions or formulate positions on hypothetical situations.

Kennedy is confident he could have defeated Carter in a debate, because, among other things, he believes the president's record is indefensible. ——

"I don't think an individual can make a speech on the issue of values and say, 'Look, trust me. I'm good. I'm worthy for this position,' because basically those values are built upon confidence.

"What it basically is," Kennedy said last week in San Francisco as he addressed the Chappaquiddick-character issue for the thousandth time — "is a growing and evolving sense about an individual. Whether it is between a husband and a wife, or between friends."

Faces term for not filing tax return

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Convicted tax rebel Irwin A. Schiff could face up to two years in prison at his scheduled June 20 sentencing for willful failure to file federal income tax returns in 1974 and 1975.

Chief U.S. District Court Judge T. Emmet Clarie Monday set the sentencing date.

A U.S. District Court jury in Hartford Friday convicted Schiff of failing to file the returns, rejecting his arguments that the U.S. Constitution did not require him to provide the information to the Internal Revenue Service.

Schiff, 51, of Hamden, a financial consultant and author, faces a maximum sentence of one year in prison or a $10,000 fine on each count.

Schiff was found guilty of the same charges in 1979 and sentenced to six months in jail and fined $10,000.

But the 2nd Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in New York overturned the conviction, ruling improper evidence was admitted in the first trial.

Contest winners

Newton Catholic Elementary School has announced that two of its students received first place recognition in a statewide essay and poetry contest held earlier this year.

They are: Julie Mahoney, grade 8, winner of the essay contest; and Melinda Marchand, grade 6, winner of the poetry contest.

Their works will now be sent for judging in the national competition.

'Worcester' tornado, one of worst in U.S. history

1953 tornado not the first in New England

WORCESTER, Mass. (UPI) — Anybody who thinks tornadoes don't happen in New England wasn't around 27 years ago when a twister swept through central Massachusetts leaving 93 dead, more than 1,500 injured, and property damage well over $50 million.

The "Worcester" tornado actually began in Petersham, June 9, 1953 at about 4:25 p.m., and wove a 46-mile path of destruction through Barre and Rutland, and Shrewsbury in a little more than an hour.

It was one of the worst tornadoes in New England and one of the most damaging in the United States. President Dwight D. Eisenhower declared the region a disaster area.

Mr. and Mrs. GeorgeJones of Petersham were among the first to see the huge black funnel sweeping towards their home. They took refuge in the cellar where they heard their barn being ripped from its foundation.

Animals, roofs, clothing and even a car whistled through the air in a terror-filled variation of the benign tornado of "The Wizard of Oz."

Workers at the Diamond Watch Co. in Worcester reported seeing an auto sail over an eight-foot fence and land upside down on the Assumption College lawn.

The winds pulled things from their places and scattered over most of the state. A dress from a Worcester shop window was carried 45 miles to the east, landing on a lawn in a Boston suburb.

Some debris landed by the sea in Wollaston, and a bundle of shingles from a Worcester lumber yard landed in a Boston driveway. Flying debris decapitated a Shrewsbury woman.

A priest and three nuns were killed at Assumption College when the wind cracked a spire. A bus overturned, killing one passenger and injuring others. Elderly pensioners at a Worcester farm home were killed when the walls collapsed.

The 1953 tornado was not the first to strike New England. The second worst twister recorded in New England killed 34 people in Wallingford, Conn., on August 9, 1878.

The smashed Greendale section of Worcester after the tornado that struck in the afternoon of June 9, 1953.

Twister of 27-years ago killed 93, left more than 1,500 injured and $50 million in damage to property.

Diane Guglielmo of Connecticut

This rookie is a woman

FARMINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — Diane Guglielmo's boss says Connecticut's first professionally trained female firefighter takes "a lot of harassment" and ribbing from her male colleagues.

But Gregory N. Metcalf said Monday the teasing and taunting is because Mrs. Guglielmo is "the rookie" — not because she's a woman.

"In fire departments there's always a lot of harassment of the rookie," he said. "I don't think what Diane's getting is any different. By and large it's been the rookie type of stunts."

And the 22-year-old woman pacesetter said the toughest part of her job as a firefighter at the University of Connecticut Health Center is finding clothes and boots that fit.

Metcalf said he and Mrs. Guglielmo "spent a lot of time working on how she'd deal with the male-female thing" once she joined the department om April.

"I was ready to fight the battle for equality," said Metcalf, the center's public safety director. "But I thought it was going to be a lot tougher."

As an example, Metcalf relates how her co-workers reacted when Mrs. Guglielmo got a fire truck stuck in mud.

"Naturally," said Metcalf, "The inclination was 'What's the matter, Diane, can't you drive it?' But you see, that's 'cause she's the new kid, not 'cause she's a woman."

Mrs. Guglielmo, of Glastonbury, was the first women to graduate from the New Haven Fire Training School. Two other women who began the six-week course with her in March dropped out.

Mrs. Guglielmo is also believed to be the first full-time paid female firefighter in Connecticut.

But she viewed her achievement more as a personal victory than as a milestone along the road to equal rights.

"I believe in women's rights," said Mrs. Guglielmo, "but what's important is that I'm not trying to prove a point. This is something I've always wanted to do."

"It's something I've wanted ever since I can remember," she said, "even though everybody told me to forget it."

Taking care of power pliances

Most sma household electrica appliances are sim ple devices, in geniously pu together. They co sist of a switch, motor, a set of gea and possibly heating element. A appliances, not i cluding radios ar TV sets, fall into or of three categorie: Those which hav heating element those which have cooling system ar those with neither these.

By and large, the appliances are pret reliable. One reas is that we really do use most of the very much. You ma use a shoe polish for a 10-minu period twice a wee which adds up to le than 15 hours of use year. If you put mo than 20 hours of u on an electric knife a year, you a unusual.

Another reason reliability is simplicity of parts. Most pliances have only few parts and the with slight variati from unit to u have been us millions of times, manufacturers ha the advantage of vast background experience to dr on in building them

The great major of appliance failu occur in power cor switches and in pa which collect dirt a debris (crumbs lecting in toas parts, for examp unless the applia is mistreated in so fashion. Thus, if know how to repl a power cord know how and w to clean those pliances which n it, you will have s ed a fair numbe your appliance blems.

If a breakdown curs in a switch heating element motor, you may able to repair the sent part — but odds are much be that the part have to be repla To find a repla ment part, you m contact the manu turer or one of its vice centers, sup ing all model part numbers. P which fit one mak appliances aln never fit ano brand. In fact, most cases parts not interchange between diffe models by the s maker.

Does it pay repair the appliar You can spend a l time and money letters, phone and travel to ser centers. In addi you must pay for replacement pa and they can be pensive. All of raises the questio whether or no makes econo sense to repair ar pliance, either yourself or throu service center.

Pops Night on June 24 features George Shearing

BOSTON — The George Shearing Duo will appear in concert with the Boston Pops Orchestra Tuesday, June 24, at 8 p.m.

This special appearance, arranged through the American Foundation for the Blind, will be part of the Helen Keller Centennial Congress, which will take place in Boston June 23-28.

Tickets to the concert are available through the foundation at $12 and $15. Call 727-5526.

Miss Keller's 100th birthday would have been June 27. Because of her association with this area through Perkins School for the Blind and Radcliffe College, among others, Boston was chosen as the site for the centennial congress.

George Shearing, who has more recently been working as a duo with bassist Brian Torr, will make his first appearance with the orchestra since 1970.

Rhode Island will buy Navy land

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — The state has reached a $1.25 million agreement with the U.S. government to buy 86 acres of former Navy land, including deep water docks, in the Melville section of Portsmouth, Gov. J. Joseph Garrahy said today.

Garrahy said the purchase will be financed through a bond issues voters approved in June 1979 for acquisition of surplus government land. The agreement is subject to review by the General Services Administration and Congress prior to a formal transfer.

"Melville is particularly valuable becasue it provides much needed existing deep water access on Narragansett Bay.

Taking care of power pliances

Most small household electrical appliances are simple devices, ingeniously put together. They consist of a switch, a motor, a set of gears and possibly a heating element. All appliances, not including radios and TV sets, fall into one of three categories: Those which have heating elements, those which have a cooling system and those with neither of these.

By and large, these appliances are pretty reliable. One reason is that we really don't use most of them very much. You may use a shoe polisher for a 10-minute period twice a week, which adds up to less than 15 hours of use a year. If you put more than 20 hours of use on an electric knife in a year, you are unusual.

Another reason for reliability is the simplicity of the parts. Most appliances have only a few parts and these, with slight variations from unit to unit, have been used millions of times, so manufacturers have the advantage of a vast background of experience to draw on in building them.

The great majority of appliance failures occur in power cords, switches and in parts which collect dirt and debris (crumbs collecting in toaster parts, for example), unless the appliance is mistreated in some fashion. Thus, if you know how to replace a power cord and know how and when to clean those appliances which need it, you will have solved a fair number of your appliance problems.

If a breakdown occurs in a switch, a heating element or a motor, you may be able to repair the present part — but the odds are much better that the part will have to be replaced. To find a replacement part, you must contact the manufacturer or one of its service centers, supplying all model and part numbers. Parts which fit one maker's appliances almost never fit another brand. In fact, in most cases parts are not interchangeable between different models by the same maker.

Does it pay to repair the appliance? You can spend a lot of time and money for letters, phone calls and travel to service centers. In addition, you must pay for the replacement parts, and they can be expensive. All of this raises the question of whether or not it makes economic sense to repair an appliance, either by yourself or through a service center.

Stallone co-stars with Caine

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sylvester Stallone will co-star with Michael Caine and Max Von Sydow in "Escape to Victory" with crusty John Huston in the director's chair.

"Escape to Victory," based on World War II Allied prisoners forced to play the Nazi all-star soccer team in a life-and-death-match, will be the most ambitious American film ever produced in Hungary.

Producer Freddie Fiels has signed soccer stars Pele of Brazil.

Candidates agree on TV debate

WALTHAM — Democratic congressional candidate Rep. Barney Frank wants to debate the other candidates on Boston television and they are more than willing.

Frank issued the challenge Tuesday which was was quickly accepted by Mayor Arthur J. Clark. The mayor added he has already accepted a debate that will be sponsored by Boston's Channel 2 in September.

A spokesman for Rep. David Mofenson of Newton at his headquarters didn't even bother to ask the candidate. She said, "We will debate anytime and any place."

The other Democratic candidate, Robert B. Shaffer of Fitchburg, could not be reached immediately, but judging from the first debate in Newton, he'll be more than happy to debate.

There has been no immediate reply from the Boston TV stations other than Channel 2. Ground rules acceptable to all at Channel 2 have yet to be worked out.

When Frank issued his challenge, it appeared he was aiming primarily at Clark.

Frank said, "A very significant issue is emerging between myself and Arthur Clark. He is practicing the old politics of the 60s, promising everything to everybody. His support of great increases in almost every category of federal spending may sound like good politics, but it is bad economics."

Frank said candidates must "confront the hard choices facing the people of the 4th District."

In agreeing to the debates, Clark also noted sharp differences between himself and Frank. "Barney wants to cut defense spending which means he wants to cut jobs in the 4th District.

"My primary objective is jobs for the district. I'm not going to buy everything the Joint Chiefs of Staff are going to want, but I am going to listen carefully.

"I'd go for at least a three percent increase in military spending to allow for some inflation. Barney says he wouldn't," Clark said."

Clark added he also wants adequate funding for the elderly, the handicapped and the poor, but noted he finds way to handle social programs that aren't inflationary. He mentioned using the windfall profits tax on oil companies to finance health insurance.

Rep. Frank sticks with his theme, "Old fashioned 'everything for everybody' political rhetoric is not good enough for the 80s."

Frank has insisted that basing an area's economy on defense spending can be a disaster when there are cutbacks.

Clark said Robert W. Eisenmenger, senior vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston and director of research was quoted in the press last week as saying "rocovery (from the recession) will be faster here since we are blessed with defense spending and the computer industry."

Clark added, "Barney Frank doesn't know how to count the blessings of the 4th District. He doesn't know the district. He wants to cut defense spending and plunge us deeper into the recession."

In urging the Boston area TV stations to sponsor a 4th Congressional District debate, Frank said the district merits special focus because it is the only congressional seat in the state where no incumbent is running and only once every twelve years are no statwide elections competing for debate time.

Falcon falls 33 stories

BALTIMORE (UPI) — A baby peregrine falcon that took its first flight from a skyscraper about two weeks too soon is apparently in good health despite the fall from his 33rd-floor perch.

A Cornell University ornithologist said the 4-week-old male falcon possibly sprained its ankle when it fell.

Wilcox gets three letters at Tufts

MEDFORD — Diane Wilcox has won varsity letters in field hockey, indoor track and lacrosse at Tufts University.

A child study major, Wilcox is the daughter of Robert and Ann Wilcox of Waban. She is a regular in field hockey, a record-setting shot putter in indoor track and a standout midfielder in lacrosse.

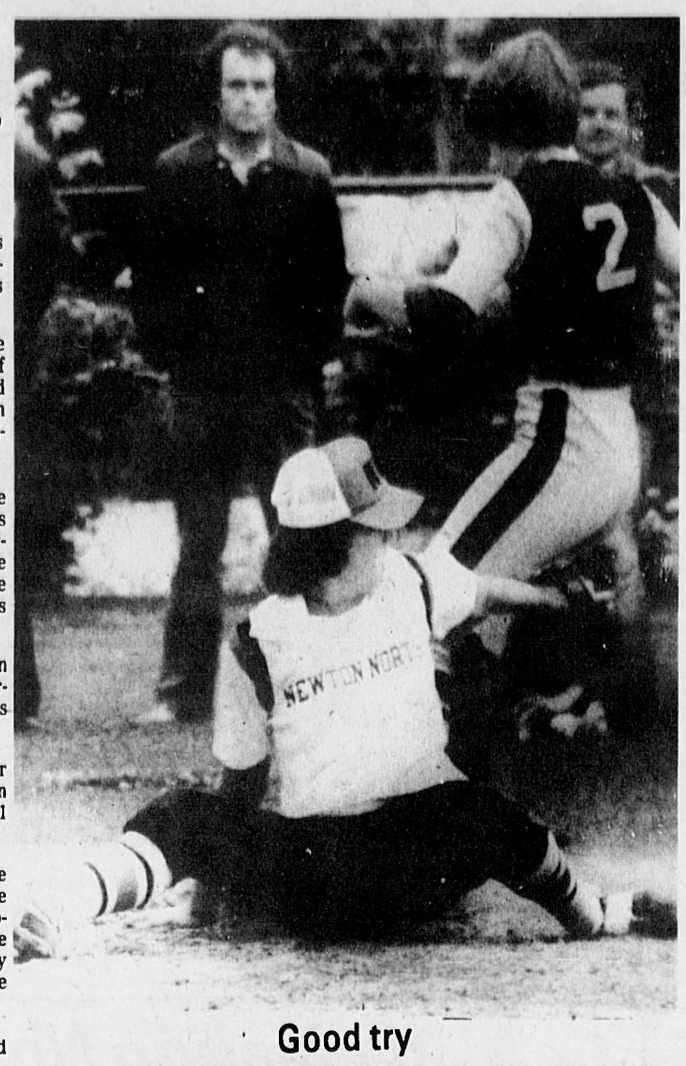

A consistent scorer with the women's track team, which has posted a 20-0 record since Wilcox arrived, she set the school record for the shot, 32'6", while placing fifth in the Greater Boston Championships this winter.

She was the leading playmaker on the women's lacrosse team this spring, scoring five goals and 14 assists enroute to a 9-3-1 season.

Although she will only be a junior next year, Miss Wilcox has been elected co-captain of the 1981 women's lacrosse team at Tufts.

"I've been playing sports all my life and I'd be bored without them," she said. "It seems you meet the best people through athletics and it makes me feel good physically and emotionally to be involved. It also helps me organize each day."

She is a former field hockey and track standout at Newton South, where she was selected to be Outstanding Girl Athlete in 1978.

Good try

Newton North third baseman Debbie Quinn makes a sit-down stop, but is too late for an attempted tag on Haverhill baserunner Barbara Eason in Monday's EMass tourney game . The Tigers triumphed, 8-2.

Armstrong lifts North to 8-2 win

Haverhill traveled to Newton to be the "home team" while Newton North was "away." But being the "away" Tigers at all as they rolled team at home didn't bother the to a convincinq 8-2 victory in the first round of the North sectional softball tournament on Monday.

"We played championship ball," said Newton North coach Carolyn Harrinqton. "We played good defense, eliminating our errors, and we hit better than we have all season."

"Newton came to win the game," said Haverill coach Mary Anderson. "I was impressed by their quickness and agressiveness on the base paths."

While senior Janice Casey was allowing only one earned run on the mound, the Tigers' offense pounded out 11 hits, that included a home run by Sue Armstrong.

Armstrong was inserted in the starting line-up when Diana Proia collided with HaVerhill's first baseman on an attempted bunt in the initial frame. Armstrong took advantage of the opportunity by going 3 for 5, hitting a home run, scoring two runs, and making a couple of nice catches in left field.

"Armstrong was the real key for us today," said Harrington. "Only nine people can play and when we call someone off the bench who produces, it really gives the team a boost'"

Casey knocked in two runs to aid her cause, while second baseman Patty Antonellis lined a double in the third inning to drive in a pair'

The Tigers' four run outburst in the third Inning broke a 1-1 tie and gave Newton North a comfortable lead. Sophomore Debbie Quinn knocked in a run with a sacrifice to power the Tigers' attack.

"We're capable of hitting much better," said Anderson. "Today we were terrible. We cOuldn't put together a string of hits."

"Everyone was looking forward to the game," said Harrington. "We knew we were a pretty good team, but the only way to show it is to qo out and win. We proved we're a strong club today'"

Meuthuen, the Merrimack Valley Conference champs and the number one seed in the tournament, will be the Newton North opponents in the quaterfinals today at Methuen. The summary;

Shiro wins Jarboe Bowl

His youthful appearance and rigorous daily routine bely the fact that he has just entered his sixth decade. If there truly are men for all seasons, Oren Shiro must be one of the select few.

Wednesday, amidst a cool springlike day which was more M rch morning than a steamy June afternoon, Shiro captured his second Jarboe Bowl in three years with a final round 72 at the New England Senior Golfers Association championship at the Woodland Golf Club.

ShiKo's two-round total of 147 easily bested defending champion Don Strobel and Bill Trepsas, who both recorded 76-75 151's.

For Shiro, originally from Newton but for most of his life a resident of Waterville, Me., the triumph adds another feather to the cap of a qolfing career which has seen a resurgence in the last three years.

Until six and one-half years ago, when he went into retirement at the age of 53, Shiro's booming restaurant business had limited his golf game to what he said waS "Going out once a day and hitting a bucket of balls."

"That' all I ever had time for," he said moments after winning the tournament. "I was a slave to my restaurant. But since my retirement I've gotten back into it. Golf is a way of life with me now."

Since bringing the clubs out of the closet again, Winning has become a tradition also. In addition to taking the Jarboe Bowl in 1978, Shiro captured an event he had yearned to win for 30 years in 1979 — the Maine Amateur Championship.

He had come close to the coveted title twice before in 1949 and 1969, but both times was just edged out in the final holes. This time Shiro went to the 18th tee trailing by a single shot. He coolly birdied the hole, saw his opponent bogey it, and won by a stroke.

"That tItle was always an all-consuming quest for me," admitted the affable Shiro.

Wednesday's crown did not come nearly as difficult, but it could have been much closer if Shiro had not again finished with a tremendous rush by posting birdie, par and birdie on the final three holes.

"That's quite a bit different from the last time I won here," he said' "I had such a lead that time after the first round that I ballooned to a 77 the next day."

Shiro doesn't hide the fact that at 60, he gets great pleasure out of beating opponents 20 years younger, whether it be golf or his other present activity, racquetball.

All-American status

Jon Greenleaf of Newton earned All American status at the NCAA Division III track championships at North Central College at the end of May.

He is a student as at Wesleyan University.

Greenleaf, the New England Division III champion, threw the javelin 67.24 meters (220'7") to take sixth in his first national championship.

At MIT May 8-10, he set the New England Division III meet record with a toss of 69.70 meters (228'8").

Road race results

NEWTON CENTRE — The second annual "Temple Trot" was held June 1, sponsored by Temple Beth Avodah.

There were 407 finishers, a 25 percent increase over last year. The race was run entirely within the residential streets of Newton and was sanctioned and certified by the NEAAU.

Winners were in the following categories: first male, first female, first male master , first female over 35, and first minor.

Winners were: Robert Pierce, Nancy Cuthbertson of Newton, John Hurley, Susan Hunter and Jon Sheldon.

Beaver baseball team ends season with perfect record

CHESTNUT HILL — Beaver Country Day School varsity baseball team finished its season with a perfect 11-0 record, capturing the Eastern League title and advancing to the quarter finals in the Mass. Interscholastic Athletic Association Tournament.

Beaver will play the winner of the Newton Catholic-Matignon game in the first round of the tournament.

Five members of the Beaver team also got positions on the Eastern League All-Star team, with Mark Wright being voted the league's most valuable player for the second year in a row.

Wright, class of 1980, led the league with a record 29 hits and a .568 batting average, scoring 17 runs and stealing 30 bases. Other All-Star players are John Toyias, son of Dr. and Mrs. James Toyias of Newton; Andrew Tobasky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tobasky of Chestnut Hill; Ward Hart of Brookline and Alexander Randall of Wellesley.

Four-year veteran Tobasky came into his own this season with a .476 batting average, going 3-3 in the title-clinching game against Pingree.

He played a flawless center field.

Pitcher and first baseman Toyias, the youngest member of the squad, combined a 5-0 pitching mark with a .478 hitting performance to have a spectacular season.

Toyias also drove in 20 runs, batting in many game-winning runs.

Catcher Hart, in his first season of varsit.v ball, played superbly all season, throwing out 17 baserunners and batting .486 in the all-important third position.

Randall, sporting a lively curve ball, honed his talents to produce a 7-0 record and a 1.20 ERA while striking out 75 batters.

In addition to the five All-Stars, the team, coached by Andrew Manning, includes: Alan Abrams, Brookline; Wayne Brown, Weston; Alexander Forbes, Jamaica Plain; Robert Karess, Swampscott; Casey Douglass and David Sprogis, Boston; Raymond Castagnola, Dedham; John Linnehan, Chestnut Hill; Robert Liebman, Newton; and Dimitri Philopoulos, Milton.

South in tourney loss

Newton South's stay in the EMass District tournament was a brief one as Marshfield rolled over the Tigers Monday, 18-3, at Marshfield.

Marshfield scored seven runs in the second inning and five more in the third to pretty well wrap the game up early. Newton South responded only with single tallies in the fourth, fifth and seventh.

In the fourth, Laura Sacks singled and scored when Patty Sullivan reached on an error to the second baseman. Kim Smith drove in the next two runs, doubling home Galvin in the fifth and tripling in Julie Perkins in the sixth.

Hattie Davis picked up the win for Marshfield while Perkins absorbed the loss.

Newton South finishes its season with an 11-4 overall record.

MARSHFIELD (18)—Richard 3-1; Welch 5-3; Davis 5-3; Matthews 5-2; Trilou 5-1; Gassett 5-3; Guscalt 4-1; Cahill 4-1; Quinn 1-0; Totals 37-15.

NEWTON SOUTH (3)—Miller 4-0; Perkins 3-2; K. Smith 4-2; Sacks 2-1; Houlihan 2-0; McLellan 1-0; Sullivan 3-0; Palder 2-0; L. Smith 3-0; Spicer 1-0; Galvin 1-1; Botti 1-1; Totals 27-7.

Two-base hits—Welch, K. Smith, Botti
Three-base hits—K. Smith
Base on balls—Davis 2, Perkins 5, Tennant 1.
Strike outs—Davis 5, Tennant 1.
Winning pitcher—Davis
Losing pitcher—Perkins

Dean MVP

Maureen Fairbanks of Auburndale was recently named the Most Valuable Player on the Dean Junior College softball team, which posted a 9-9 record.

Fairbanks, a senior, was the team's leading pitcher and a strong hitter as well. This season she held a .458 batting average, 3.83 ERA and a 7-9 record.

A graduate of Newton North where she played basketball, softball and field hockey, Fairbanks is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Fairbanks, 6 Grove St.

State girls' tennis tourney

Hinchey-McCarthy duo clinches title for Tigers

The No.1 doubles team of Judy Hinchey and Alison McCarthy rebounded from a 3-5 deficit in the third set Monday and went on to a 7-5, 3-6, 7-6 triumph to give Newton North a 3-2 win over Winchester in the finals of the girls' tennis state championships at Minuteman Regional in Lexington.

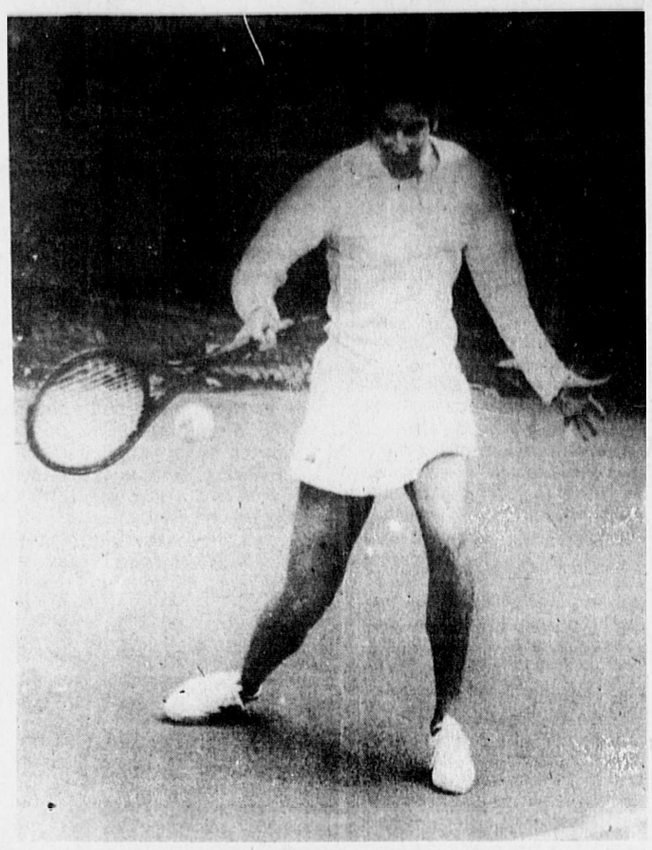

Hinchey and McCarthy had actually trailed Winchester's Jodi McNamara and Marissa Galino, 2-4, before mounting a charge. The Tiger girls broke serve at that point to turn what could have been an insurmountable 2-5 deficit into a more-reasonable 3-4 margin.

"Winning that game was absolutely the turnaround of the match," said Newton North coach Harriet Roossin later. "There was tremendous, tremendous pressure in that game."

Although all the matches begin at the same time, that doubles confrontation, lasting three hours, became the deciding one when the two teams finished the other contests deadlocked at 2-2. After coming back into a 6-6 tie and forcing a tiebreaker, Hinchey and McCarthy easily ran out the match at 4-1.

June Ferestien had set the stage for the Tigers early with a quick and convincing 6-0, 6-0 win over Theresa Aylwand. The Tigers went ahead 2-0 when Debbie Kaufman edged Debbie Willing in a tense threeset struggle, 6-3, 5-7, 6-0.

Winchester's Chris Elio got her team on the board in No.3 singles, defeating Jill Busmy, 6-1, 6-4, and the No2 doubles team of Chris Anderson and Trudy Horne evened the match with a 6-3, 5-7, 6-3 victory over Ronit Schwartz and Tamah Solomon.

Volleying

June Ferestien of Newton North volleys during her singles match in Monday's State girls' tennis final at Lexington. The Tigers captured the title by edging Winchester, 3-2.

Frank Battista has been named club photo champion of the Newton Boys' Club for this picture, submitted to the National Boys' Club-Kodak Photo Contest. Battista, 10, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mario Battista of 23 Dalby St. The winning picture, "Don't Hit Me," was taken during a boxing match. Battista is a fifth grader at Newton Catholic Elementary School and is interested in photography and intramural basketball.

North track teams do well in Andover

ANDOVER — The Newton North High boys' and girls' track teams did well at the state championships held in Andover last Saturday.

Each team had won its Suburban League title with undefeated seasons.

On a rainy, cold, windswept Saturday, the North teams competed aginst more than 30 schools. The first four finishers for the boys' teams were: New Bedford, 38; Newton North, 28; Ayer and Peabody, 22 and Reading, 19.

First four girls' teams were: Billerica, 38; Seekonk, 22; Needham, 20; Newton North and Falmouth, 19.

Boys' individual scorers were: Jim Magliozzi, first in the pole vault with 13'6"; Glenn Goldman, fourth in the hundred meters, 10:33; Mike Pendergast, fourth in the 880 meters, 1:56:8; and David Vona, first in the mile, 4:17:2.

Girls' individual scorers were: Sherry Levin, second in the javelin, 122'3"; Jenny Greenberg, fourth in the high jump, 5'2"; Linda Price, first in the 100 meters, 11:35; and Liz Natale, second in the 2-mile, 10:59:0.

In two of the more exciting races of the day, Vona avenged his earlier defeat by Mike Malekevich of Haverhill by edging him at the finish; and Liz Natale, using her strong closing kick, caught Kathy Good of Randolph to earn second place.

All of the Newton runners have qualified for the New England meet, to be held Sunday in Groton. — Paul Natale.

Hill spins 3-hitter

Kevin Hill fired a three-hitter with seven strikeouts and Eddie Murray and Roger Nusbaum provided the offense as Sacred Heart defeated Albemarle Club, 9-5, Monday in International League play at Albemarle Field.

Murray had two singles while Nusbaum contributed a single, double and two runs-batted-in to the attack which saw Sacred Heart junp out to a 5-0 lead in the first inning. Adam Rubin also had a single and two RBI's.

Tim Mulvey was a bright spot for the losers, blasting a long grand slam home run in the third.

In other action, Boys' Club edged Post 440, 7-5, at Cabot Field.

Abruzzi Club and Newton Sports Center battled to a 4-4 tie in a game called because of the time curfew in the International League on Monday at Albemarle Field.

Recreation Notes

The energy crunch may cut back on travel this summer, but the Newton Recreation Department will offer many programs to make the leisure time enjoyable for Garden City residents.

There will be varied activities available within walking distance.

Newton offers swimming facilities at the Gath Pool in Newtonville and Crystal Lake in Newton Highlands. In addition to the open swimming, the Recreation Department offers classes for all ages and abilities.

The Crystal Lake programs include use of sailboats and canoes.

The Recreation Department staff directs activities at the city's playgrounds during July and August. There are 29 supervised playgrounds in Newton with leaders on duty from 9 a.m. to noon and 1-4 p.m.

Recreation staffers are trained in first aid, arts and crafts, baseball, softball, basketball, kickball, soccer, drama, mime, tennis, intramural competition and special events.

Gath Pool Opens

Swim permits are now on sale at Gath Pool from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The pool opens Saturday, June 14, and Newton residents can purchase swim permits during the regular operating hours of the pool.

Permits will be on sale at Crystal Lake Thursday, June 19, and Friday, June 20, from 2-4 p.m.

After Crystal Lake opens Saturday, June 21, permits may be purchased during operating hours.

When purchasing permits, applicants must have proof of residency and the appropriate fee. Permits cost $2 for children, $5 for adults and $15 for families.

Softball League

Fran Towle is planning a summer softball league for high school age girls. It will be patterned after the junior high age Fillies League.

Play is scheduled to begin July 1. Individuals or teams interested in participating should contact Towle at 552-7120.

Swim Schedule

From June 14 to June 29, Gath Pool will be open from 3 p.m. to dusk weekdays. Weekend hours will be posted at the pool.

Gath Pool will be open on the following basis from June 30 to Sept. 1:

Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., swim lessons; 12:15 to 1 p.m., adult special needs; 1-4:45 p.m., general swim; and 7 p.m. to dusk, adult swim.

Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5:25 p.m., general swim; 5:30 to 6:55 p.m., family swim; 7 p.m. to dusk, adults.

The preseason swim schedule at Crystal Lake, June 21-29, will be posted at the lake.

The regular swim schedule for June 30 to Sept. 1 at Crystal Lake is:

Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., swim lessons; 9:30 a.m. to noon, general swim; 12:15 to 1 p.m., adult and family swim; 1 to 5 p.m., general swim; 5:15 to 6 p.m., adult and family swim; and 6 p.m. to dusk, general swim.

Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon, general swim; 12:15 to 1 p.m., adult and family swim; 1-5 p.m., general swim; 5:15 to 6 p.m., adult and family swim; and 6 p.m. to dusk, general swim.

Sunday, 1-5 p.m., general swim; 5:15 to 6 p.m., adult and family swim; and 6 p.m. to dusk, general swim.

Pony League

Any coach interested in placing a team in the Newton Recreation Department Pony League for boys of junior high age should contact Nick Siciliano at 527-3319.

Games are played at the Newton Centre field Tuesday, Thursday and sometimes Sunday nights starting at 8:30 p.m.

LOVE IS A FOUR LETTER WORD IN TENNIS. THE NEWTON Y WILL TEACH YOU TO BE UNLOVED

Are you tired of losing games 40-Love? Matches 6-Love? Has your tennis game taken the romance out of the word Love? Well, at the Newton Y we have an innovative tennis curriculum that will focus on skills which will help you play better tennis. Each clinic is comprised of six one-hour lessons meeting twice weekly for three weeks. Teh clinics are restricted to no more than six and no less than three to allow the instructor a one to one relationship with each player. We also offer private and semi-private lessons. We have classes for the beginner, advanced classes for the beginner, advanced beginner, and intermediate player, as well as junior and advanced junior. Clinics are held throughout the summer.
For info on the next clinic and class times call the NEWTON Y at 244-6050. You'll be "unloved" in no time.

New site asked for condominiums

NEWTON — The Land Use Committee Tuesday asked for a number of concessions in exchange for permission to construct 42 condominiums on Kenrick Street and Algonquin Road.

The housing will be built on a portion of the Chestnut Hill Golf Course. The city will purchase the remaining 71 acres for $700,000 to be used as a public golf course.

Alderman Lisle Baker asked representatives of Barkan Properties, the developer, to move the 25 units on Kenrick Street, and the 17 units on Algonquin Road, closer to the roadways to make more room for the golf course.

On both roadways the proposed housing will be within a chip shot of the fairways. Not only will the relocation lessen the danger of flying golf balls, Baker said, but will increase par from 69 to 70, and increase the chances the course will be a financial success.

Alderman Susan Schur thought the 1.5 spaces per unit required by city ordinance may not be enough in a luxury development. Developers will try to include an unspecified number of additional spaces.

The request for immediate repair of a stockade fence along Algonquin Road, and its maintenance construction was during unacceptable to Atty. Alan Schlesinger, who represents the developer.

A number of other conditions, many suggested by neighbors, were objectionable to the developer, although others will be considered before the next committee meeting on Thursday.

The committee will recommend private trash pickup from dumpsters, although in the case of another apartment development, the city recently allowed public trash collection.

The committee is expected to require the planting of trees of larger diameter UU than suggested by the developer, and will prohibit the removal of trees on portions of the lots. The landscaping should also include more evergreens, the committee decided.

All chimneys will be enclosed by wood or masonry, the committee said, and there will be only one master television antenna per housing cluster. Schlesinger said he objected to all the conditions, but to that condition in particular.

Neighbors also objected to heating, air conditioning or ventilating equipment on the rooftops.

When the committee concluded after midnight, it had worked through about one-half the conditions requested by neighbors. Committee Chairman Terry Morris conceded the committee is breaking new ground in imposing conditions on a developer.

NE Villages women elect officers, trustees

PEMBROKE — Women's Committee of New England Villages officially opened its 10th anniversary year with the installation of officers and the board of directors for 1980-81.

Mrs. James Gutzwiller of Hingham was installed for a second term as president of the group, which has enrolled more than 3500 women in the decade since its inception.

The committee serves as the major fundraising arm of the Villages, a non-profit organization dedicated to providing a dignified and fulfilling way of life for mentally retarded adults.

Other officers are: Mrs. William Widerman of Newton, Mrs. Stanley Lesnick, Mrs. Donald Kogos, vice presidents; Mrs. Edward Nierman of Newton Centre, treasurer; Mrs. Leopold Slosberg, Chestnut Hill, financial secretary; Mrs. Harold Schmickley, recording secretary; Mrs. Marilyn Lovell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Robert Berk of West Newton, parliamentarian.

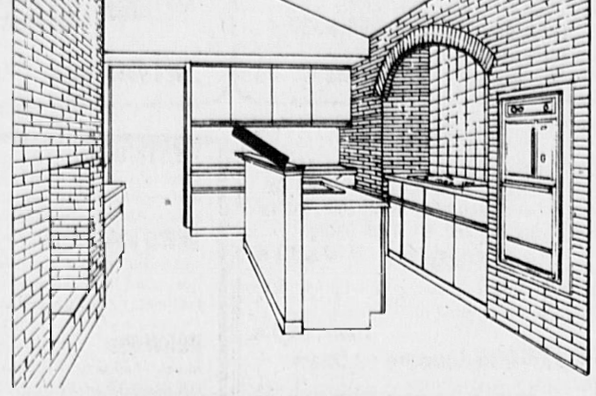

Among the members of the board of directors are the following Newton residents: Mrs. Gerald Dameshek, Mrs. Joseph Greenberg, Mrs. Harry Marks, Mrs. Jerome Pearlstein, Mrs. Wolf Shapiro, Mrs. Marvin Starensier, Mrs. Harold Swiman and Mrs. Chester Wolfe.

RSVP volunteers Lester Deneault and Herman Aborn sell their first raffle tickets for the 1980 fundraiser.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

115 Vacation Property For Sale

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT

Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".

There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breath-taking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.

Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.

This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.

You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.

Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

WOODED 1/4 acre waterview lot. John's Pond, Mashpee. Asking $8700. 326-4969

Hospitals using sales promotions

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — A lot of hospitals are hurting for patients.

If you try to get a bed in a big teaching hospital you may be put on a wait list. So you find it hard to believe.

But it is small hospitals, 250 beds or fewer, that have empty beds. They lack the link teaching hospitals have with big university medical centers. They are endangered by their smallness and more limited facilities.

Healthcare industry leaders predict 15 to 20 percent of the nation's hospitals — mostly smaller ones — may be forced to close during the 1980s.

Hospitals need an occupancy rate of at least 80 percent. But the average occupancy rate now is 72 percent. It is not profitable.

There is the cost of keeping beds in "go" condition. An occupied bed costs $60,000 a year to keep up. A vacant bed costs, about half that, $30,000. But it does not produce income.

Hospitals also are hurt by the fact that the average patient stay is one day less than it was 10 years ago. That deprives a hospital of one day's income it could count on in the past. Bills are calculated on the number of days spent. The average cost of a day now is $230.

So the hurting hospitals are turning to marketing or sales techniques to get customers for services to meet needs of people in their neighborhoods.

Healthcare economists say it is smaller hospitals suffering the biggest financial headaches that lead the turn to innovative programs.

The American Hospital Association is encouraging these efforts.

"For years," said AHA President Alex McMahon, "hospitals have been securing the latest medical technology to help the sick. Now it's important they do everything possible to let the community know their capabilities and to adapt their services to meet changing needs.

"That requires two-way commmunications and marketing. I'm all for it."

While most of the nation's 6000 hospitals are the small type that are leading the move to marketing or sales techniques, big ones also are turning to such programs.

Some have set up "wellness centers" — outreach facilities that, for a fee, help people to quit smoking, lose weight, overcome stress, stay fit.

For senior citizens, some hospitals offer courses in cooking, pre-retirement planning and where to get help. There also are tests of vision, hearing, blood pressure.

Still others offer health workshops and specific programs to meet needs of business — pre-employment physicals, for example.

Some examples of "marketing" or sales pitches to attract hospital "customers":

—Salem Hospital in Salem, Mass., gives physicals to truck drivers.

—Grant Hospital in Chicago set up a program to assist workers experiencing deteriorating job performance caused by personal or medical problems.

—In Baltimore, Johns Hopkins Hospital runs courses for doctors from Dupont and Allied Chemical. The courses are designed to help the industrial physicians brush up on ways to deal with industrial health and safety problems.

—In Evansville, Ind., Deaconess Hospital offers an occupational stress-management program to employers.

—Forest Hospital of Des Plaines, Ill., has set up a corporate fitness division to deal with occupational and life stress. Employees attending are taught how to examine their lifestyle and deal with stressful factors.

—Mount Auburn Hospital in Cambridge, Mass., has an occupational consulting service. Businesses and municipal organizations are taught how to deal with employees affected by alcohol and drug abuse.

—A course in vegetarian cooking is taught as part of health education classes at Hinsdale Hospital in Hinsdale, Ill.

—Pacific Medical Center in San Francisco has set up an occupational health unit that runs cardiac conditioning programs.

—Roosevelt Hospital in New York is promoting a plan to rebuild and enlarge its emergency room. To raise $2 million, the hospital has hired a public relations firm to call attention to the quality of its emergency room services in bus ads and promotional mailings. A radio campaign will offer a booklet on emergency care free to those donating $10 or more to the new ER.

—Lutheran Medical Center in Brooklyn, N.Y., needing an up-to-date physical plant, renovated and moved into a nearby abandoned foundry. Under the banner of Sunset Park Redevelopment Committee, the hospital is serving as a catalyst to improve the area.

It has purchased and rebuilt homes, become a partner in a skills bank, is involved in a child development center, housing for senior

Many Ohio gas stations hit by 11-cent increase

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Standard Oil Co. of Ohio hit customers with an 11-cent per gallon increase for gasoline today, although vast surpluses this month are expected to fuel competition and drive pump prices down nationwide.

The price increase that took effect at 12:01 a.m. covered only Ohio, where Sohio has 1,100 company-owned stations and 800 dealer-owned stations.

Sohio Senior Vice President Charles H. King said the company decided to announce the 11-cent increase Monday because of what Sohio called "the imminent implementation of the Department of Energy's proposed changes in the regulations affecting Alaskan North Slope crude oil costs, which are expected to be retroactive."

The DOE sought last month to force Sohio to increase its prices by a minimum 10 cents per gallon, only to change its mind at the last minute, when independent gasoline dealers charged that Sohio was underpricing them into oblivion, by as much as 10 to 12 cents per gallon.

Nationwide, price competition will continue and intensify despite today's larger Sohio increase, gasoline expert Dan Lundberg said in his June fuel allocation report.

This month there is more gasoline available than there ever has been, he said.

He said oil companies have released a record 8.38 million barrels of gas per day to dealers, 22.8 percent greater than in May. Gasoline supplies are 112.7 percent higher than last year, but he said drivers would probably not use much more than 7 million barrels a day in June.

"It is becoming increasingly clear," Lundberg said, "that rising petroleum prices have caused profound changes in demand."

King, meanwhile, said of the Sohio price hike, "The die is cast as far as the government regulations are concerned, and it is necessary for the company to move now in order to recover some of these increased costs."

Last week the DOE held hearings in Washington on proposed changes in regulations affecting Alaskan crude prices, which are lower than foreign crude. Sohio, whose profits topped $1 billion for the first time in 1979, has vast oil holdings in Alaska.

They help families cope in the kitchen

By BRIGID PHILLIPS

TORONTO (UPC) — Anxiety attacks, stress, guilt trips and junk food seem to dominate North American life, but two Toronto authors have developed a system they believe will help working families cope with the situation.

Their handbook is a guide to eating healthfully, organizing household chores and keeping otherwise neglected children involved in the daily routine.

"The real impetus for writing the book came when I was faced with the situation of going back to work and upsetting the routines I'd established," said Susan Seidman, who helped write the 157-page book between teaching at a Toronto school and raising a four-year-old daughter.

"I thought I'd be living on TV Dinners the rest of my life, while my kid was off being babysat," Ms. Seidman said.

"There were a lot of books on quick and easy meals from seven cans, but I really don't like to eat like that," echoed co-author Sheila Kennedy, a teacher of children with learning disabilities and many times a foster parent.

The Working Family's Kitchen Guide, a $5.95 paperback, contains healthful, practical, fast recipes as well as tips for involving children in cooking, shopping and cleaning up, so everybody in a household shares the workload.

"A lot of people feel guilty because they're out all day and they don't want to ask their kids to help, so they end up having no time or energy to spend with their children," said Ms. Kennedy. "But eating is one of the most natural activities to share. And if you involve your kids, you will end up with a child who is really competent in the kitchen."

"And it can be an awful lot of fun mucking about," Ms. Seidman added.

The authors, now in their mid-30s, two years ago began ago delivering to questionnaires to hundreds of working families, doing extensive research and collecting about 900 recipes. In choosing those for the book, the authors looked for simplicity, flexibility, adaptability and good taste.

Although much of their advice is children-oriented, they stress they were writing for any group of people living together. There are sections on games for grocery shopping and packing away, how to make your own convenience foods, getting kids to enjoy preparing and eating meals and tips on freezing, cleaning, reading ingredient labeling, growing edible plants and buying favorite foods.

"But perhaps what is most important is the technique to cope and make your family work as a team," said Ms. Seidman.

The authors believe kitchen participation — even from the "mudpie set" — helps kids learn to handle themselves in a kitchen and develops skills such as counting, matching shapes, memorizing and, of course, understanding good food.

"As teachers, Susan and I have both seen the effects of haphazard eating on kids and it can really show," said Ms. Kennedy. "Frankly I find it appalling to walk around a supermarket and see what's in peoples' shopping carts, and the junk food that children are constantly shoving down their throats.

"But if you're well organized, you can feed your family well without relying on junk."

The book is being published simultaneously in the United States by 101 Productions, San Francisco, and John Wiley & Sons Canada Ltd., Rexdale, Ontario.

The authors said they have received perhaps the greatest commendation any household guide could hope for.

Business slows plans for spending

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American businesses, suddenly confronted with recession, have scaled down their plant and equipment spending plans for this year, a government survey showed today.

According to a Commerce Department survey conducted in late April and May, the nation's firms plan to increase their spending by only 9.9 percent in 1980 to $194.6 billion.

Earlier this year, in February and March, an identical survey found American businesses were planning an 11.1 percent hike in spending to $196.8 billion.

In other words, businesses have trimmed their plant and equipment spending plans by 1.2 percent since the recession began to take hold in early spring.

Government officials had hoped the nation's businesses would hold the line on their spending plans during the current downturn to soften its impact and give consumers enough time to start buying again.

The Commerce Department said when inflation is taken into consideration, the increase in business spending this year will amount to only a 1 percent — pale in comparision to last year's 6 percent increase in "real" spending.

Be Nice To A Graduate Nurse Today

How, You May Ask?

#1 By offering congratulations because graduation time is here.
#2 By suggesting that Morton Hospital is a rewarding place to practice nursing.

Morton Hospital is a 190 bed non-profit acute care community hospital which is located within easy commuting distance of southwest suburban Boston, Plymouth County, Cape Cod, Bristol County and Providence, R.I. We believe in the potential of Graduate Nurses and we have a successful history of offering a rewarding opportunity to begin nursing practice within a progressive nursing service which offers a unique blend of individualized orientation and supportive supervision. Everything is carefully orchestrated to assist the Graduate Nurse through those important months following nursing school and beginning nursing practice. Candidates will have the opportunity to interview with Morton Hospital's nursing recruitment team which includes nurse managers as well as nursing unit teachers who will work with Graduate Nurses throughout the orientation period and beyond.

Please call Denise Fortin at (617)823-5025 for more information about these unique nursing opportunities.

Toyota attacks tariff

DETROIT (UPI) — Toyota says a recently-ordered tariff increase will boost the price of its imported mini-pickup trucks by $800 this fall and could threaten employment at the company's California plant.

Norman D. Lean, senior vice president and general operations manager for Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., said Monday the action will reduce Toyota truck sales by 40 percent in the United States.

It was Toyota's second attack on a May 20 U.S. Customs Service order increasing the tariff on imported truck cab-chassis units from 4 percent to 25 percent in 90 days.

Currently, the cab-chassis are considered components and are subject to a 4 percent duty, even though they lack only a cargo bed. The new ruling places them in the category of unfinished trucks requiring a 25 percent levy.

Toyota said the action dealt a severe blow to its U.S. truck marketing plans, which had assumed the cab-chassis rule would not change. The company has asked President Carter to reduce the duty from 25 percent to 6.8 percent, the lowest allowable under current law.

"We have spent nearly $60 million since 1976 to advertise our trucks and are right in the middle of a $24 million expansion of the manufacturing plant in Long Beach, Calif., where the truck cargo beds are produced," Lean said.

"Our California plant has more than 450 employees now and that figure was scheduled to exceed 500 when the expansion program is completed this fall."

A shutdown of the plant "is possible" if truck sales are severely depressed by the new tariff, he said. Lean also said the higher tariff will contribute to inflation but will not increase sales of larger pickups built by U.S. automakers.

"With the huge increase brought on by the tariff, our truck sales will be reduced by about 40 percent," Lean said in a statement. "But only a very small percentage of these lost buyers will move to larger, less fuel-efficient trucks."

Lean said Toyota's research showed only about 4 to 8 percent of import pickup buyers considered purchasing a larger, standard-sized pickup.

The Big Three U.S. automakers all import Japanese-built small pickup trucks and market them under their own names

Volkswagen of America is the only U.S. automaker building a mini-pickup competing head-on with the Japanese, although General Motors is expected to introduce a domestically-built version in 1982.

Nissan, maker of Datsun cars and trucks, currently is seeking a site for a truck-building plant in the United States.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own . . . but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item . . . and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers . . . so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood . . . but you'll want a bigger crowd than that . . . so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing . . . get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

Liquor store suspension upheld

HIGHLANDS — The state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) has upheld the decision of the Newton Board of License Commissioners to suspend the package store license of Highland Liquors, 9 Woodward St., for two weeks.

The ABCC decision was received by Newton Tuesday.

The Newton Board of License Commissioners voted in April to suspend the store's license for two weeks due to the alleged sale of beverage to a minor March 17.

The order of suspension was appealed by the store's owners to the ABCC on the basis of being "clearly wrong and the punishment imposed unduly harsh."

A hearing was held before the ABCC June 3.

Taking pain out of going to the dentist

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — A team of New Jersey researchers is experimenting with sedatives and analgesics in its search for new ways to take the pain out of going to the dentist.

Studies by the team of dental professors at the dental school of the College of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey involve the use of sedatives like Valium and pentobarbital while a patient is undergoing surgery, and various new analgesics for alleviating post-operative pain.

Working in CMDNJ's Oral Surgery Clinic, the researchers are testing and comparing the effectiveness of new, investigative analgesics, which, says Dr. Stephen A. Cooper, director of research and an associate professor of oral surgery, may "revolutionize oral therapy."

RSVP starts fund drive

West Newton—The Newton-Wellesley-Weston Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) has begun its annual fundraising campaign. For the fourth consecutive year the RSVP raffle will be the major focus of the RSVP drive to raise money to help pay for the costs of transporting senior citizen volunteers to their assignments in the community.

RSVP volunteers will be selling raffle tickets a supermarkets in the three towns and at each of the RSVP offices.

Lester Deneault, RSVP assistant treasurer, directs raffle sales efforts, aided by other RSVP volunteers: Louis Kolow, a retired pharmacist who says raffle selling "is more fun than writing prescriptions and makes my friends feel good besides." Herman Aborn, now completely blind, a retiree from the millinery manufacturing business; Harry Zastrea, a volunteer taking time out from fishing season to help with the raffle sales and Gladys Cole, a Newton volunteer who has been a volunteer fundraiser for many years.

RSVP, part of the federal volunteer agency ACTION, is sponsored locally by the Newton Community Service Center. At the present time, the Newton-Wellesley-Weston RSVP has 475 senior volunteers over age 60 who contribute more than 7,000 hours of their time each month in the three communities. The variety of volunteer assignments is wide and included most of the non-profit organizations in the towns. Any resident of Newton, Wellesley or Weston, 60 years of age or older, is eligible to join the Program. Futher information is available at 969-5906.

At the recent awards banquet of Newton Boys' Club are (from left): State Rep. Joe DeNucci, member of the board of directors; Kevin Mackey, assistant coach of Boston College basketball; Michael Leone, Boy of the Year; Eliot Cohen, club president; and Michael Antonellis, past president.

Nirvana Shaw, a 7th grade student at Day Junior High School, has been chosen by audition for the New York City Ballet Co. and will study at its School of American Ballet in New York City this summer. Miss Shaw has been a student at the Boston Ballet School for seven years, appearing in four productions of the "Nutcracker" and "Sleeping Beauty." Here she is dressed as a "party child" for the "Nutcracker."

NSO concert Sunday

NEWTON — The Newton Symphony Esplanade concert, rained out June 8, has been rescheduled for Sunday, June 15, at 8 p.m., at the Hatch Shell.

The free concert, under the direction of Michel Sasson, is sponsored by the MDC and the Colonial Provision Co.

Timothy Morrison, winner of an international competition to join the Boston Symphony trumpet section, will be the guest soloist at the concert. He will play Haydn's Trumpet Concerto.

This is the second NSO concert on the Esplanade. The first was in June 1972.

Also on the program will be Rossini's William Tell overture, Bernstein's "West Side Story" suite, and Gershwin's "American in Paris."

Police, fire awards given

CHESTNUT HILL—The Insurance Agents of Newton, at a ceremony held at a luncheon at Valle's Steak House, honored Youth Officer Robert Braceland of the Community Services Bureau of the Newton Police Department and Firefighter Bryon Prescott of the Newton Fire Department.

Chief Edward B. Reilly Jr., stated that when informed that the Newton Insurance Agents wished to honor an outstanding firefighter, he and his command officers had difficulty in picking one this year. The Rescue Teams were outstanding and the highlight in exceptional effort was the group action of Newton firefighters in the containment of the Warren Jr. High School fire and the saving of over $2 million to the junior high building, Reilly said. It was decided that Byron P. Prescott would accept the award for all the firefighters and officers who did such outstanding work to save the Warren Jr. High School, Reilly said.

Chief William F. Quinn announced his commanders had submitted a total of 15 names as candidates, and Robert V. Braceland was chosen.

Braceland has been a member of the police force since 1959 and has served as a patrol officer, detective and for the past 10 years, a juvenile officer.

His assignment to the Community Services Bureau also includes safety education, pedestrian and bus evacuation programs, crime prevention, human relations problems, public relations and information, drug abuse, personal protection lectures and demonstrations and rape prevention lectures.

He has been on the planning committee on Bus Safety Programing as a member of the Mass. Safety Officers League and introduced the present evacuation program in Newton.

Braceland is in demand as a lecturer and speaker throughout the Greater Boston area in each of the previously mentioned areas of interest, Quinn said.

In addition, according to Chief Quinn, he has worked with and counseled troubled and problem children, young adults and their parents and has assisted many of these young people from an uncertain future to become good citizens.

Braceland, Quinn and Lt. John Likely, formed the Newton Police Explorers Post 300.

As a result of his work in Scouting, the Norumbega Council and the Boys Scouts of America awarded him the Silver Beaver Award, the highest honor in Scouting.

Braceland has also been recognized by the Mayor' Crime Prevention Commission as an outstanding officer.

The chief concluded, "Bob Braceland's work and good deeds are intangible, unheralded and extremely confidential and it could be that the reasonable young person you last talked to, was one of those he has helped."

The presentation of awards were made by Past President of the Newton Agents and Chairman of the Awards Committee Norman Aronson. The meeting was chaired by President George Kaplan. Also present, in addition to the Insurance Agents, were Mrs. Anita Braceland and his children, Lisa and Eric. Another son, Robert, is presently in training with the Green Berets.

His co-workers, Lt. Charles Feeley, Paul Golden, William Sheehan, Rosanne Douglas and Paul Cummings, were also present.

Jobs seminar held June 18

Unemployed professionals, recent college graduates, and those wishing to change jobs will be able

Seminar on June 18 from 9:30 to attend a jobs skills to 4' sponsored by the Jewish Vocational Services.

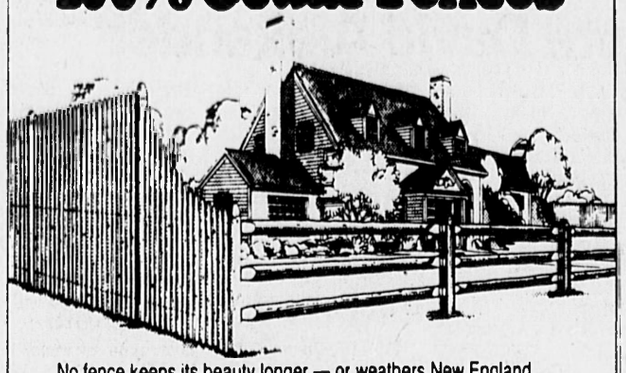

The seminar will be held at the JVS office on 31 New Chardon St., Boston, near Government Center.

Stephen M. Richmond of Brookline, JVS president, said that the seminar is held monthly and that preregistration is required.

" JVS is different that the agency's staff evaluates and readjusts the program based on the needs of the participants, something other employment agencies cannot do," Richmond said.

Gerald D. Goldstein, executive director of JVS, said the goals of the seminar are to help enrollees maximize their job finding potential, help them learn about the hidden job market, he8lp participants build more effective resumes and guide them toward more productive interviewing techniques.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria

Appearing as a big jewel perched atop the South China Sea, Hong Kong is a dreamland of gilded palaces, soaring pagodas, ancient dynasties, floating villages and houses sitting on stilts. The red batwinged sails of antique Chinese junks, colorful kites and banners and carved jade and ivory are dazzling to the eye. Housing for Peirce gets state financing

NEWTON — The Massachusetts Housing and Finance Agency (MHFA) has approved funding for reuse of Peirce School in West Newton.

A total of $1.2 million has been earmarked for reuse of Peirce School as mixed-income elderly housing.

Plans approved by the Board of Aldermen two years ago call for the creation of 34 dwelling units including three studios, 24 one-bedroom and seven two-bedroom apartments for the elderly. A total of 34 parking spaces would be provided, and a small, landscaped park for neighborhood use will be created.

The old Peirce School, built in 1894, was designed by architects Stickney and Austin and was included in the National Register of Historic Places in 1979.

It was one of the first three brick architect-designed schools in Newton built to repace the city's earlier 24 wooden schoolhouses.

The school's architecture will be preserved as approved exterior changes to the building's facade are minimal.

Newton gets a new health commissioner

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann announced this week that Bernice R. Joyal will take over as city health commissioner July 1.

Ms. Joyal, currently the district health officer for the Northeast Regional Office of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, succeeds Dr. J. Carolyn Zavarine.

A native of Newton, Ms. Joyal is a registered nurse (RN) and certified health officer. She has a master of education in health education and a master of science in public health nursing administration, both from Boston University.

Her professional experience includes four years as executive director of the Newton Visiting Nurse Association from 1958-62, after which she began working for the state Health Department.

Dr. Zavarine is leaving after four years as health commissioner to enter a postgraduate training program in adult medicine at Waltham Hospital.

Mayor Mann credits here with a reorganization and updating of the Newton Health Department and expansion of several programs during her tenure, including the senior health maintenance program.

Boys' Club holds awards ceremony

NONANTUM — Michael Leone, son of Mr. & Mrs. Joseph Leone of 211 Adams St. Newton, was awarded the Newton Boys' Club BOY OF THE YEAR TROPHY at the 26th Annual Awards Dinner held at the Newton Catholic Cafeteria.

Michael, 14, will be entering his sophmore year at Newton North High School this fall. He was presented the Newton Kiwanis-sponsored trophy emblematic of this prestigious award.

More than 300 people crowded the school cafeteria to its capacity to cheer and witness some 145 boys and eight young girls (Girls Activity Program) receive awards in company of their parents, friends and invited guests for their participation and outstanding achievements accomplished through the 1979-1980 season.

Past President Michael J. Antonellis was the toast master and welcomed the gathering in attendance and presided over the evenings festivities.

Antonellis introduced the newly elected president, Eliot K. Cohen, who in turn congratulated the parents and friends for their interest and participation to bring about such an evening. Msgr. John J. McManmon pastor of Our Lady's Church, gave the invocation and the closing benediction.

Other outstanding awards of the evening went to the following: Knights of Columbus 167 Trophy for the Best Camper to Richard Leone. Our Lady's Parish Trophy for the Most Progress to Kevin Lynch. Sons of Italy Umberto Lodge 1069 of Newton Trophy for the Unsung Hero to Joseph Cotoia. Newton Lodge of Elks 1327 Trophy for the Athlete of the year to Dennis Berube. Newton Rotary Club Trophy for Sportsmanship to James Hill.

personally inspect the site and report to the DPW Board of Commissioners. A final decision is expected by June 25, Freeto said.

On a 6-2 vote, the committee decided to send a letter to the DPW requesting a curbcut within the 300-foot stretch cf road. The Planning Department has also urged approval of a curbcut.

Atty. Peter Harrington, representing the church, said he doubted the DPW would allow construction of a driveway leading to Route 9 because the department bases its decisions on very strict, statewide, uniform standards.

An alternative plan for Route 9 access presented by Freeto that would involve significant construction of driveways across the site would be an unreasonable condition to impose on the project Harrington said, and the committee showed little interest in the plan on Tuesday.

Aldermen must act on the proposal within 90 days or it will be automatically approved, according to state law. A.pparently there was a verbal agreement to waive the time linit, but a letter from Harrington to the committee suggests it was not an open-ended waiver. Harrington said Tuesday he expects there should be final action on the proposal by July 16.

Before dropping the discussion until July 1, the committee made some changes to the parking proposed parking layout.

Brandeis award honors late David Alexander

WALTHAM — A Newton man who graduated from Brandeis University in May of 1979 and was killed seven months later in an automobile accident, was honored by students at the university during recent commencement activities.

The David Alexander Memorial Award for Social Consciousness and Activism was created by the Brandeis student body as a tribute to the late son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Alexander of Newton Highlands.

It is the first award of its kind to be established by students at Brandeis and will be presented annually. Steven M. Fischbach of Bayside, N. Y. was named the first recipient of the Alexander Award, given during ceremonies on campus attended by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander; Brandeis president Marver H. Bernstein; and Mark Oppenheim, president of the Brandeis Student Senate who represented the University's undergraduate classes.

Fischbach received his bachelor of arts degree cum laude during Brandeis' 29th commencement exercises.

Ducks to die for testing

MYSTIC, Conn. (UPI) — Mystic Marinelife Aquarium has received permission to kill a number of wild ducks to determine if the birds are carrying a bacteria which causes a disease sometimes fatal to some marine mammals.

Aquarium spokeswoman Julie Quinn said Monday some of the wild mallard ducks which land at the facility's outdoor exhibits would be killed and blood samples taken to check for the bacteria which causes pasteurellosis.

If the bacteria is detected, the blood samples will be sent to the University of Rhode Island and U.S. Navy Biomedical Research Center in Berkeley, Calif., where research is being done on developing a vaccine for the disease.

New lease on life for Newton Corner

The Goren-Leeder Building

NEWTON CORNER— The gateway to the city and one of the cities older urban areas,8 Newton Corner may get a facelift which will give it new and spirited life.

The Druker Co. of Boston has presented ' , plans to city officials and residents for a major revitalization of Newton Corner which include the demolition of the Goren-Leeder properties and a parking garage at the cost of $29 - $34 million. . . . City officials say the revitalization project will generate jobs, encourage private investment and provide elderly and middle income citizens with sorely needed housing. housing. The Druker plan includes construction of eight new buildings, including 325 units of elderly and middle income housing. The area involved in the project is east of the Paramount theater on Washington Street, going around the corner and involving both sides of Centre Street. Stressing the important location of the area, Newton Corner Alderman Robert Gaynor said, "This is the best project to be undertaken by the city since I've been here." Gaynor added, "I think the project will act as a catalyst for the remaning area." Gaynor said the development project will mean a tremendous increase in economic vitality, noting that real estate values should increase considerably. Steve Gartrell, the Newton Planning Department's liason with Newton Corner, said the response to the project has generally been favorable. D "The only direct opposition I have run into is with tenants from the Goren-Leeder properties." Gartrell said the project could mean 200 - 400 new jobs for Newton.

Gartrell asserted that the project has started on a "positive note" and praised Druker Co. for being sensitive to neighborhood concerns.

Citing the decay in Newton Corner as a "disgrace ," Mayor Theodore Mann said that the revitalization "potentially means many millions of dollars to residents of this county."

Mann said, "The future of the people and the lives of the people who live there are veryseriously threatened by the decay of the Newwton Corner properties.'

Mann added that he has requested "maximum consideration" be shown tenants of the Goren-Leeder properties.

"This should be a showcase for community involvement. It does not mean everybody will agree, but it does mean the right to be heard will be observed."

Mann said the project will "act as a counterbalance to inflation" and allow the city to provide many vital human service programs.8

The Druker Co. already has an option agreement to purchase the Goren-Leeder building. The cost of . the building is estimated at $1.2 million.

Stressing that the plan is still in preliminary stages, Ronald Druker, president of the Druker Co. and a longtime resident of Newton, said the company wants to maintain the existing quality of residential neighborhoods.

Druker said the revitalization plan will the improve pedestrian safety and reducespeed and volume of traffic in the area. ! ;

The Druker plan includes approximately . 325 units of elderly and middle income housing;100,000 - 150,000 square feet of office space; and 30,000 square feet of retail space.

In addition, the plan includes a parking garage which would hold between 350 -500 vehicles and include one or two underground parking levels a park on the Nonantum side and a tot lot on Charlesbank.

Druker said the plan is geared toward maintaining the "existing neighborhood fabric," noting that the Goren Leeder building would have to be demolished because it is not structurally sound.

Druker said he recognizes his responsibility to relocate residential tenprovideants, and interim or permanent housing for tenants.

Although Druker is not required to relocate . business tenalso work ants, he said he will relocation plans.

Druker "ideally" hopes to break ground for the project next spring and complete the project two years later.

Values updated, say ex-assessors

NEWTON — Three former assessors disagree with Assessor Harold J. Brady's claim that little has been done to update property values in reccnt years.

Brady recommended last week that the city hire a commercial appraisal firm to do a complete revaluation of city property at a cost of as much as $900,000.

A revaluation by the firm of Cole, Layer and Trumble (CLT) completed is in 1975 is, for the most part, useless, Brady said. The study cost $345,000.

Former Chief Assessor Leonard Aronson now in the private sector, former assessor William Hendrickson, assessor in Yarmouth, and former assessor Henry Bertelon, assessor in Milton, dispute a number of Brady's claims.

All said property values have been updated and equalized in recent years, that Brady is underestimating the value of the CLT figures, and all said a complete revaluation is unnecessary and that the estimate of $900,000 is inflated.

6rady, supported by state Bureau of Local Assessnent Chief Jane Malme, told aldermen there has little progress eince been the city was ordered to revalue property at full and fair cash value in 1973 by Superior Court Judge Henry Chmielinski.

The Bureau of Local Assessment has given the city about one week to submit a timetable for revaluation that is acceptable to the department. If the timetable doesn't meet the state deadline for revaluation by 1982, Malme said, the state will hire an appraisal firm on behalf of the city and deduct the cost of the work from the city's state reimbursement.

Aronson was the city's chief assessor between April, 1976 and September, 1979, and now heads his own firm in Brookline. He was replaced by Brady.

Aronson said the court allowed the city four extensions to comply with revaluation because the city was making progress. Efforts to revalue property were monitored by John Crimmins, a court-appointed master.

In September most property values had been equalized, Aronson said, and the city could almost have applied a factor to property values and complied with the state law.

"The easiest thing to do is say the last administration, did a bum job," Aronson said, "but it does bother me the city thinks it has to spend $1 million (for revaluation)."

Aronson said property values could be brought up to full and fair cash value at a cost of $100,000 to $200,000. Several persons wouid have to be hired, including a draftsman. The program would take two years, and would only involve transferring current assessments to the CLT card system.

Hendrickson and Bertelon agree with Aronson that manpower has

Chestnut Hill Country Club neighborhood plan approved

NEWTON — The city Monday agreed to purchase some 71 acres of the Chestnut Hill Golf Course for $700,000.

The action by the Board of Aldermen, coupled with approval of a 42-unit townhouse development on the balance of the course, caps more than one year of effort to preserve the land as open space.

After an unsuccessful proposal for highrise apartments, a group of neighbors purchased the club land at auction in April, 1979, for an initial payment of $50,000.

During the intervenin9 year, the state Gffice of Environmental Affairs agreed to reimburse the city $125,000 in federal funds toward purchase of the land as open space. The city's portion of the original 81-acre parcel will be used as a public 18-hole golf course.

Alderman Lisle Baker was instrumental in developing a betterment district including nearby properties that will generate $200,000 over a 20-year period.

And the Land Use Committee has held marathon sessions recently to draft conditions with Barkan Properties, the developer, that are acceptable to neighbors.

Support for the city purchase was unanimous' as was the support for zone changes to allcw the townhouse development. The board supported the needed special permits and site plan approvals to complete the project on 19-1 votes.

The only dissenter was board Preoident Matthew Jefferson who objected to the provision for low-income family housing included in the agreement with the developer.

A city ordinance requires a developer to set aside 10 percent of his units for low-income housing in exchange for a density bonus.

In the case of the townhouse development, Barkan has agreed to provide four low-income family units; one on site, and three somewhere in the city. But the developer is allowed to substitute a low-income unit in the ward for the on-site unit.

Jefferson said "The whole concept of low-income on the site is being destroyed." Other developers have provided low-income family housing on the site, Jefferson said, but predicted low-income tenants would never live in the townhouses.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan said the initial townhouse proposal was for 60 units, and that a low-income unit on the site would not be economical.

Alderman Cynthia Creem earlier moved to require Barkan to decide whether he will substitute an off-site unit for the low-income townhouse before tenants moved in, and that motion failed on a 6-13 vote.

Voting in favor of the motion were Alderman Wendell Bauckman, Paul Coletti, Creem, Robert Katz, Edward Richmond and Jefferson.

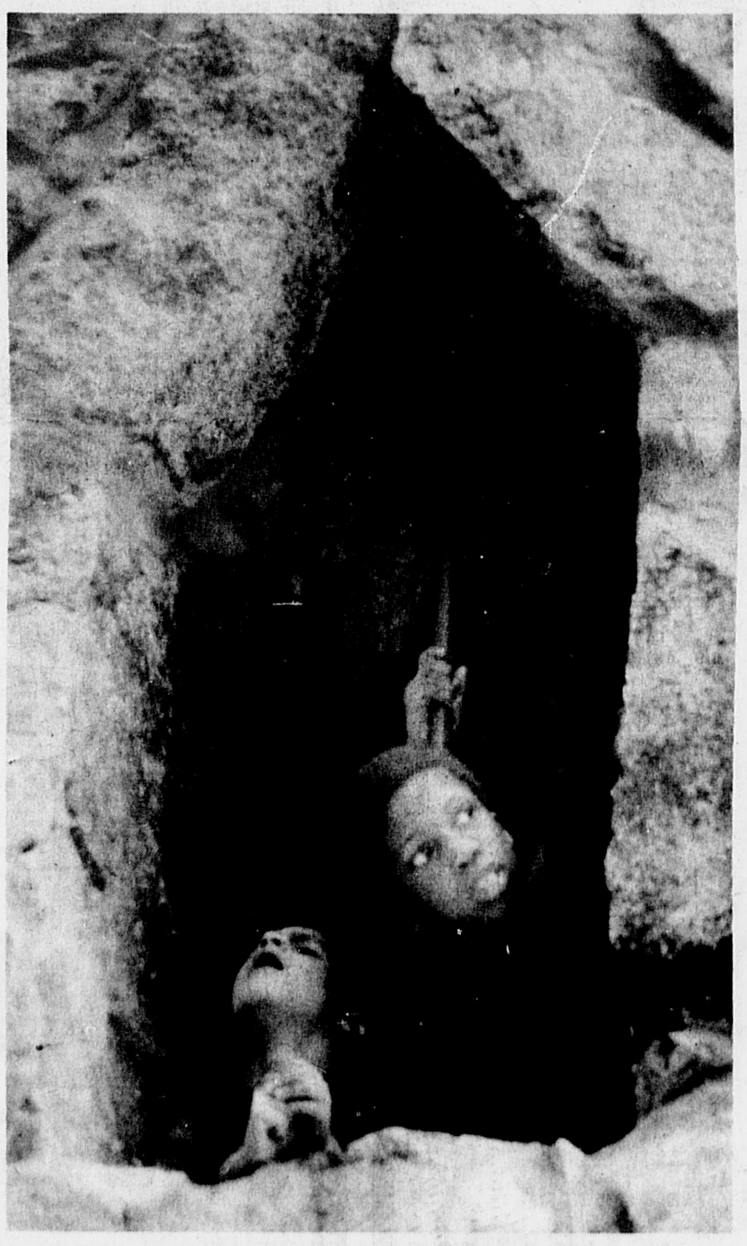

Voting against were Aldermen Baker, Rodney Barker, Donald Budge, Ernest Dietz, Robert Gaynor, Edward McGrath, Terry Morris, Susan Schur, Carol Ann Shea, Ethel Sheehan, Dominic Taglienti, Robert Tennant and Mark White.

Seventeen townhouses are planned on Kenrick Street; 25 on Algonquin Road. The package approved Monday by the board imposes numerous conditions on the developer regulating the construction phase and the final appearance of the townhouses.

The developer will be required to construct a new access road, clubhouse and parking lot for the golf course.

Approval of the complex package will bring more than 71 acres of the original course to the city at a price of less than 25 cents per square foot.

Nurses' strike settled

The Newton-Wellesley Hospital's nurses' strike ended Monday evening with a tentative settlement reached between hospital administrators and the 380 striking nurses. According to Richard Montalbano, assistant executive director of the hospital, both sides have agreed to abide by the decision of the National Labor Relations Board on whether or not the hospital should recognize the Massachusetts Nurses Association as the bargaining agent for the Newton-Wellesley nurses, which has been the main issue in the labor dispute.

Montalbano said both sides voted unanimously in favor of the agreement after meeting together.

The nurses and hospital administration met for the first time last Friday to discuss a settlement to the strike. The talks then were described as cordial and productive by Montalbano. Negotiations were deadlocked until then because the nurses wanted an MNA representative at the meetings, though the hospital refused.

When hospital administrators agreed to have an MNA representative present, nurses saw it as a victory for them and interpreted it as hospital recognition of the MNA. Montalbano would not confirm this, saying that recognition was not an issue at Friday's meeting. According to the settlement agreement, duty on "as needed" basis was to begin calling nurses back to NWH beginning yesterday. The hospital opened its cardiac, intensive care, and pediatric units, which had been shut down since the strike began May 28, according to Montalbano.

According to Montalbano, the issue of MNA recognition will rest until June 30. If the NLRB has not made a decision by then, conditional negotiations will begin, Montalbano said. But if the NLRB should later rule in favor of the hospital, then the contract will be null and new contract negotiations will then begin.

Renaissance ambience revived

For Joanne Lyons and Susan Lunin, both of Newton, costume designing has been quite an experience.

In an attempt to re-create the Renaissance period, Bardcraft Productions Incorporated, founded by Lyons, her husband Mitchell, and Lunin and her husband Mitchell, will hold an eight day Renaissance Fair where 159 participants will be dressed in 15th century clothing June 28 to July 20.

Lyons and Lunin are making 25 of the costumes and are supervising and advising on the others. It has been an especially difficult task for them since both are mothers of young children and both hold other full time jobs outside the home." The difficulty is in trying to fit it into everyday life," Lyons says.

The costumes are an important part of the fair, they say, because," We're trying to create an atmosphere."

All types of 15th century characters will be represented, Lyons says, including a king, a queen, ladies-in-waiting, jesters, noblemen, beggars, pickpockets, nymphs, a sheriff, an executioner, a monk, a gravedigger, a preacher, lepers, and a witch. While some participants will be attending game booths and concession stands, many of these characters will be mingling with the crowd to create a living theater. The designs for some of the costumes came easier than others. While doing research on 15th century attire, they found that little information was available on the clothing of those other than upper class and nobility." We used a lot of imagination for the beggars, thieves and pickpockets, for instance'" Lyons says. Certain modern sandals and some old shirts and rags worked well for these costumes Lunin adds.

The upper class and nobility were very extravagant and ornate in their attire, though" Lyons notes.These costumes are colorful outfits of tapestries and velvet." We want them to stand out," Lunin says.

Dubbed " Katherine" by Lyons and Lunin, the queen will be wrapped in yellow brocade with gold threading creating designs throughout the dress. Obviously pleased with her work, Lunin flaunts the dress about the room, and says, " Katherine will be the only one in yellow because she's the queen."

Patterns were used for many of the costumes though alterations had to be made." A little higher there and a little lower there, for instance, and we had a 15th century dress'" says Lyons. "We used alot of creativity for all these costumes," Lunin adds.

Lunin, a seventh grade teacher, and Lyons, a systems analyst, have no professional sewing experience, though both admit a talent for sewing." It's been a great learning expeThise for me. I never really knew what went into a theater production, the fittings, the deadlines,' Lyons says. Says Lunin of costume designing," It's really heightened my creativity."

Bardcraft was formed four years ago. For nearly a decade prior to that, Lyons says the idea bounced around in her head. " I always had an interest in the Renaissance period," Lyons says. " While my husband and I were in California, we attended a Renaissance fair and I thought it was a great thing," she adds. Finally, four years ago, the Lyons and the Lunins were at the Lyons home and decided to try it. " Why don't we try, we said."

Their first project was last year when they held the Shakespearean Fair at the Commonwealth Armory in Boston. This summer's fair, at the Miles Standish State Forest in Plymouth, will be similar to last year's fair. There will be 15th century games such as medieval bowling and some modern creations by Lyons and Lunin, such as zonk the king. There will also be many items for sale, all handmade and of outstanding quality, Lyons says. Entertainers will also perform including jugglers, mimes, and musicians.

" It's a fun period to work with, " says Lyons as she admires the king's

Trash Talk
Does recycling save?

By BETSY LEWENBERG

Recycling question of the week: Does recycling save energy?

Yes, recycling saves energy, according to numerous studies made by both government agenices and private institutions. The energy savings of reycling in metropolitan areas such as this one has the potential of saving "226.5 trillion BTU's or 1.8 billion gallons of gasoline, enough to make nearly 7 million trips a year from New York to San Francisco on the basis of 13.3 miles a gallon. "

Aluminum recycling shows the most dramatic energy savings. Recycling aluminum requires about 5 percent of the energy needed to produce primary aluminum, an energy savings of 95 percent. Aluminum, however, represents a small percentage of waste from communities like Newton.

Paper is the largest component of urban waste. Close to half our trash is paper. According to the National Association of Recycling Industries, the use of recycled fiber rather than virgin pulp in papermaking results in energy savings ranging from 60 to 70 percent.

There is also energy savings in recycling glass and steel cans. It requires two to three times the energy to manufacture a steel product with virgin ore rather than with recycled scrap. And according to a spokesman from the Glass Container Corp. in Dayville, Conn., "the recycling of old glass reduces air pollution, saves fuel and prolongs furnace life."

Recycling our trash saves energy for several reasons. When materials are recycled, the energy expended in the initial extraction process is "reused" rather than duplicated in further extraction for new products.

Furthermore, recycling is an industrial activity with markets close to the source of supply. Most paper and metals are collected and processed for recycling within short transportation distances from the consuming mills. Most virgin materials, however, are produced far from the final manufacturing facilities they serve.

In Newton, we recycle only about 15 percent of the bottles, cans and paper that could potentially be recycled.

In this era of energy shortages and high prices, we must strive to do better. Increased recycling is a simple first step.

For further information on the Newton Recycling Program call 552-7221.

If you have any suggestions for recycling questions of the week, submit them to this newspaper.

Where there's smoke...

WEST NEWTON — A Newton Corner man, sitting in the front row of the spectator benches at Newton District Court Tuesday, allegedly decided to roll himself a "joint" while he waited, Police said Wednesday.

Police said Officer James Keegan Jr., while working the lobby of the court house Tuesday afternoon, was informed by an unidentified person that there was a man sitting in the court room who appeared to be "rolling a joint."

According to Police, Keegan went into the court room, saw the man holding rolling papers in one hand and a bag of what was allegedly marijuana in the other.

John O'Sullivan, 42, of 156 Tremont St., was arrested by Keegan and charged with possession of a controlled Class D substance.

Options for Newton DPW

NEWTON — Consultants presented four options for restructuring Public Works Department yards at City Hall Thursday.

Public Works Commissioner Charles Thomas said the four options are only suggestions for debate at this point.

The firm of Camp, Dresser and McKee have been hired to recomnend a more efficient organization of Public Works facilities.

The first option would see a major central facility at the Rumford Avenue landfill site. Both Crafts and Elliot Street yards would function only as bases of operation for the existing Highway Divisions. The existing sheds would be demolished and new salt and sand storage sheds built. All other yards would be abandoned in this scheme.

The second scheme would get the most out of existing buildings and yards. Major buildings at the Crafts, Elliot, Auburndale and Watertown Street yards would be renovated. New structures would be built at Rumford Avenue for the Equipment and Sanitation Divisions. Small satellite maintenance garages would be built at the Crafts, Elliot, Auburndale Avenue and Watertown Street sites. The sheds at Crafts and Elliot would be demolished and new storage sheds built.

The third scheme is designed to increase efficiency in the various divisions without using the Auburndale Yard.

New facilities would be built at Rumford Avenue for the Equipment Division, Sanitation Division and the sweepers group.

Small satellites would be built at Crafts, Elliot and Watertown Streets maintenance garages. The major buildings at Crafts, Elliot and Watertown Street would be renovated.

The sheds at Crafts and Elliot Streets would be replaced with new storage sheds for salt and sand.

The final option represents a more ideal grouping for the DPW divisions, according to planners, but the Water and Sewer Division would remain split under the proposal. The amount of new construction and renovation work would remain the same as in the third option.

Newton woman found guilty of assaulting meter maid

WEST NEWTON — A Newton woman was found guilty of assault and battery in District Court Tuesday in charges stemming from an altercation with a meter maid in March.

Police said Wednesday Myrna Swartz of 121 Cotton St., was found guilty of slapping meter maid Olympia Pasquarosa on Union Street in Newton Centre Square March 15 after Mrs. Pasquarosa had given her a ticket for double parking on Union Street.

According to police, Mrs. Pasquarosa found Mrs. Swartz' car double parked on Union Street and asked her to move it. The woman complied, driving away and returning a few minutes later and double parking again.

When she saw the car double parked a second time, Mrs. Pasquarosa began to write a ticket, and the driver allegedly started yelling at her.

Mrs. Pasquarosa put the ticket on the windshield, which police said the driver took off the windshield and threw at the meter maid.

Meanwhile, police said, a crowd was gathering and traffic was piling up on Union Street.

Mrs. Pasquarosa decided it would be best to go on about her work, walked across the street, and the driver then followed her and slapped her, police said.

Judge Monte Basbas found Mrs. Swartz guilty and gave her one year's probation and $200 in court costs.

Neighbors oppose acquisition

NEWTON FALLS - The two ' houses on Grove Street do not look unusual.

However, the houses which are on land owned by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, are the center of a dispute between area residents and officials at St. Mary's Episcopal Church..

The houses, which are scheduled to be torn down, are on 5,615 square feet of land located behind the church cemetery. Church officials want to buy the land and extend the cemetery.

Abutters of the property argue, however, that extension of the cemetery will be an eye-sore and have submitted a petition to the Newton Community Development Authorityand the Planning & Development Board in an effort to block the sale of the land.

The petition calls for the land to be sold to8 Lynna and Michael Rosbash, residents of Grove Street, who own the house directly adjacent to the site in question.

The Newton Community Development Authority will hold a public hearing in an attempt to settle the dispute Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Hamilton School.

Mrs. Rosbash said there are 10 - 13 families in the area who oppose the sale of the land to the church.

Citing the purchase of the land by the church as "radically different than the original plan for the area," Mrs. Rosbash stressed that the residents are angry because the grounds behind the church have not been properly maintained. "If the cemetery was beautiful on our side of the street," she said, "we would be delighted if they extended it." .

If the land is sold to the Rosbash's, they claim they will landscape and maintain the property with the help of their neighbors. In addition, Mrs. Rosbash claims the land will be open to all neighbors and essentially be made "public. "

Grove Street resident said if the church got the land the cemetery "would be right smack on the Rosbash's driveway."

" How would you like a cemetery right beside your front step? " she asked. ,

Residents of Grove Street, which is a one way street, are also concerned the value of their property will be decreased considerabl8y if the cemetery is extended. . Jason Rosenberg, attorney for the church, said the church has proposed a plan to solve the dispute, which includes selling the Rosbashes a 15 foot wide strip of land down the depth of the lot to act as a "buffer zone."

Church officials have also proposed to landscape the property and install curbing along the entire length of the site.

In addition, the church has proposed that no upright memorials will be put in the cemetery extension. Church officials have also indicated they do not plan to use the lot for 20 years.

Members of the church have also responded to the abutters on Grove street by circulating their own petition to gain suppo8rt for the church.

Rosenberg stressed that the church needs the land desperately. "The church is completely out of cemetery space. It does not have any land elsewhere. It is essential for the church to have that land," he said.

Rosenberg said the community must ask the question whether the Rosbashes can maintain the area?

He added, "The Lower Falls community is by no means united in this effort. There is a substantial amount of support for the church."

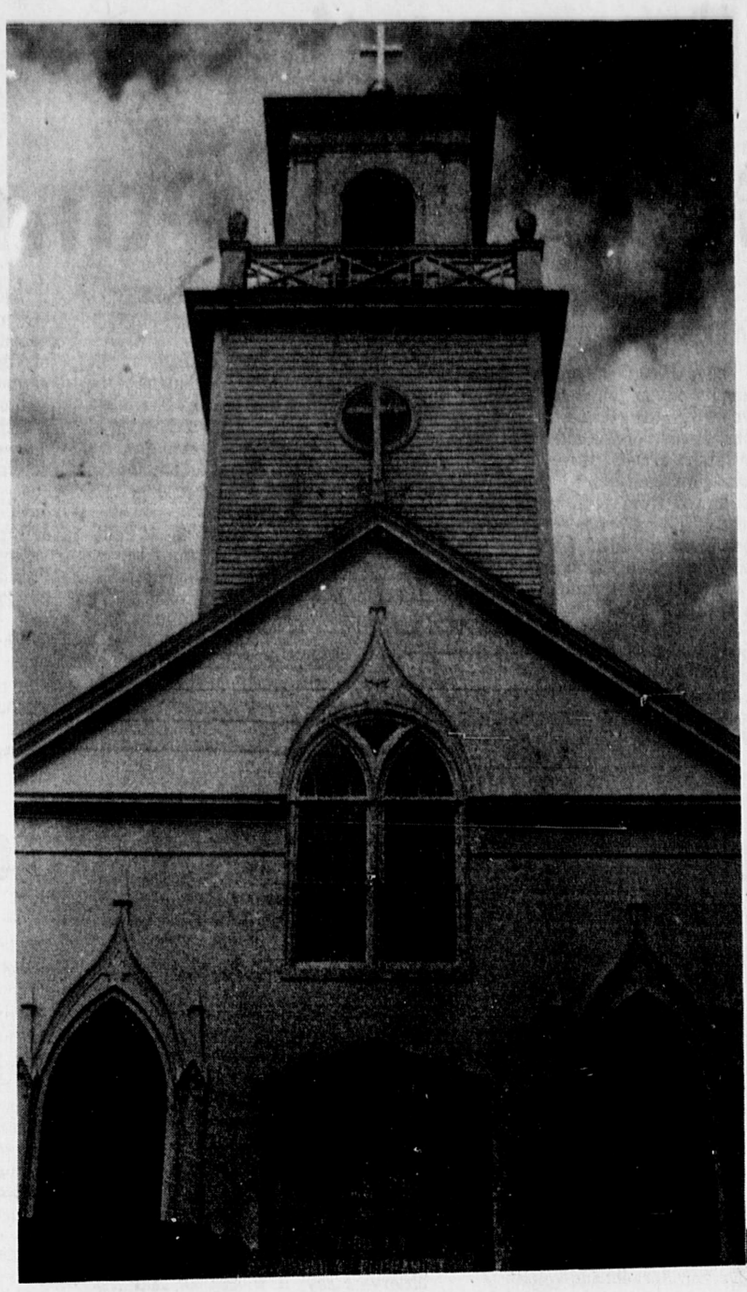

Newton Donald Budge, who is Ald. a member of the church and has done legal work for them in the past, said that the Newton Redevelopment Authority indicated in 1968 that the church would be able to buy the land if it was sold.

Budge contends that if the land sold to the church the area would be improved.

Budge added, "I am entitled to my opinion just like any other member of the Newton Lower Falls community."

Chairman of the Community Development Authority Barry Canner, who will have to make the initial decision on the dispute which must then be approved by the planning board, said he would like to see a compromise.

Canner said he would like to see the dispute settled Thursday night. come.

Nonantum Post parking is backed

NEWTON — The Planning Department is recommending zone changes and special permits to allow Nonantum Post 440 to expand parking.

The 46,270-square-foot lot has been used informally by the post for parking. It is bare, unusable during wet weather, and a dust bowl when the weather is extremely dry.

The land is the remainder of Victory Field which once contained a 3.4-acre playground that the Recreation Commission declared surplus in 1969.

The city subsequently sold 83,650-square-feet of back land with minimal frontage

California Street to Post 440, and on 19,000-square-feet fronting on Eustic Street that was developed as townhouses.

With construction of the post came a 116-space parking lot that has not been sufficient. When permission was granted in 1971 for construction of the clubhouse it was estimated, based on zoning ordinance requirements, that 346 spaces would be required.

After an attempt by the former Newton Housing Authority to develop four townhouses which failed because of a lack of federal funding, the city sold the remaining land to the post for additional parking.

Consolidation of the parcels will allow the post to develop a parking area with 185 spaces.

The proposed site plan details a landscaped island along Calfornia Street. The Planning Department is recommending plantings at least 3.5-feet in height. Rhododendron are planned and the department feels there should be 75 plants along the street.

Experimental bus routes funded by Aldermen, 15-3

NEWTON — Funding for two experimental bus routes was approved by the Board of Aldermen Monday.

The $14,000 appropriation was approved on a 15-3 vote. One of the opponents was Aldermen Mark White, principal supporter of last year's unsuccessful Upstart bus route.

White based his opposition on what he claimed was a city policy of only limited support for public transportation experiments. He said the Upstart bus never had a chance.

White was most concerned about a $9,000 city subsidy for a route that would provide service between Chestnut Hill, Thompsonville and Newton Centre, as did former MBTA route 59. The planned route would also serve the Needham Street-Nahanton Street industrial area.

"Will the policy be that we will only fund self-sustaining bus routes,', White asked. "Will we only have public transportation subsidized by business?" He claimed the routes could be redesigned to serve the northern portion of the city.

Of the total appropriation, $2,500 is earmarked for advertising and marketing of each of the routes. Only the Chestnut Hill-Needham Street route will be subsidized. will provide

The second route service between Auburndale, West Newton, Newton Centre and the Boston College area. Both routes will begin in September.

Alderman Cynthia Creem told White the failure cf the Upstart bus experiment has nothing to do with support for additional experimental programs. And Alderman Carol Ann Shea said a supporter of public transportation should look for progress in ',small strides."

The city cannot expect to have a transportation intrastructure overnight, Mrs. Shea said, and suggested the city should ,'look for money where we can get it."

The Mayor's Committee on Supplemental Transportation has received pledges of $7,000 in private funds from businesses for initial operating subsidy of thc Chestnut Hill-Needham Street bus.

Alderman Rodney Barker went a step farther and decided White had presented the "weirdest" arguments he had heard recently. '.They are sneeringly called the 'shoppers routes' but there is nothing degenerate about going to shops. We all do," Barker said.

But White picked up support from Alderman Matthew Jefferson who said intracity transportation will not work unless the city is willing to subsidize the venture. He said the nayor's committee should be working toward city-subsidized routes. The third vote in opposition to the funding was Alderman Wendell Bauckman who did not speak on the issue.

Volunteerism award for city

SEATTLE — Mayor Theodore D. Mann last week accepted a volunteerism award for Newton at the opening session of the Annual Conference of Mayors.

Newton was one of 13 cities in the United States to receive special recognition in a national program to promote volunteerism.

The mayor called the award, "A special tribute to the many volunteers in our community who have made our efforts a success.

"The uniqueness of Newton lies in its cause orientation and reputation for being in the forefront in such areas as the arts, community services, technology and education."

Keep an eye on tax limits

There is a clear recollection of benefits promised from Question No. 1 on the ballot in the 1978 state election. Property taxpayers were supposed to get a break from assessment classifications, a system that has been adopted.

Unfortunately, it is still waiting to be implemented in most municipalities. That's because fair market valuations, loosely defined as 100 percent, had to be established first. Progress toward full value has continued at a snail's pace, as it has since the 1974 Sudbury landmark decision.

More recent court orders haven't increased the pace notably. Older, congested cities with low assessments and high tax rates have been the most laggard. No appreciable benefits are apparent, therefore. Confusion and inequities still abound.

This fall, the same arguments about relief will be advanced in behalf of ballot questions dealing with tax limits. The principal one is Proposition 2 ½, which has been around quite some time in the aftermath to California's Proposition 13.

Citizens for Limited Taxation, the sponsor group, had no difficulty acquiring petition names. Who can resist a chance for tax relief? The small print details of what is sought make it more complicated, raising a number of questions from skeptics.

A principal one is how to effect the tax slash prescribed and maintain the level of services. The CLT plan would require gradual reduction of property taxes to 2 ½ percent of fair value. The limit could be raised by a two-thirds local vote in a general election.

Take a municipality with a current valuation total of $700 million, averaging 40 percent of real worth, and a budget of $50 million. Even with a doubling of the market value, the municipality would be looking at a budget limit of $35 million.

Where to do the curtailment of services? Law enforcement, fire protection, garbage-rubbish collections and education would face cutbacks which doubters charge make it a "preposterous" measure. It is indeed if the proponents can't come up with a rationale.

The 2 ½ is also to be applied as an annual cap on tax increase. School Committee autonomy would be wiped out and fire-police binding arbitration limited. Local revenue from excise taxes would be cut from $66 per thousand to $25.

Public employees, understandably, are in the forefront in opposition, but there is a growing citizen awareness as the subject gets into serious discussion.

Three other propositions to establish tax limits have surfaced. Two ways to achieve restraint are available, one by constitutional amendment in the Legislature and the other by voter mandate. The General Court has its own ideas on tax caps, so the avenue most likely to be effective has to be by referendum.

Cities and towns will do well to undertake thorough inquiry. We strongly suggest open forum-type meetings sponsored by civic organizations like the League of Women Voters.

Perspectives

Gold watch time in Peking

By DON GRAFF
national columnist

There have been some amazing developments out of China in the few short years of its turnabout from xenophobic keeper of the ultra-radical communist faith to cooperative member of the world community.

It has turned from reviling the industrialists of the capitalist world to inviting their business and advice.

Instead of slamming its door on the outside world, it is now promoting itself as a tourist attraction.

After decades of squaring off against the American paper dragon, it is now a virtual ally.

An authoritarian society in which there is only one truth and that is the one laid down in Peking, it even briefly experimented with semi-free speech.

But the most amazing may be yet to come.

Deng Xiaoping, the diminutive vice premier who is the political giant of the post-Mao regime, has repeated his intention to retire from his government post shortly. To be sure, he will remain Communist Party vice chairman and thus in position to continue exercising real power.

But even this job he intends to relinquish by 1985. By that time, he anticipates he won't be functioning so effectively and, as he recently told visiting American journalists, he wishes "to live a little longer."

An attitude that many Western leaders, political and business, will find not the least bit inscrutable. Deng by then will be 81, so there is nothing unusual in thinking of retirement.

But there definitely is so in the context of Communist leadership. In opting for voluntary withdrawal from the active exercise of supreme power, he has for all practical purposes no predecessors. If communism's strongmen are known for one thing other than the ruthlessness neccessary to achieve power it is their determination to hold on to it until the end — ultimate in the form of departure from this earth, naturally or otherwise, or forced abdication.

Lenin, Stalin, Mao and even heretic Tito went with their official boots on. Brezhnev appears intent upon following suit. Khrushchev, Poland's Gomulka, Czechoslovakia's Novotny and other lesser lights had to be shown the door. The pattern holds largely true even among the non-governing parties of the West.

Deng's phased retirement is reported to have a very practical purpose. He wants to position in power younger pragmatists of his own bent well before his final departure in order to ensure against a return of the hardliners.

In so doing, he is turning once again to the West, employing a tactic democratic leaders have often found of use in promoting continuation of policies.

And if he carries it off, he will be doing more than effecting a turnabout of Communist custom. He also will be going against thousands of years of Chinese custom. Emperors and dynasties, like commissars and central committees, traditionally have hung on to the bitter end.

And in a past-conscious culture, where today's communist rulers have just rehabilitated the reputation of the last emperor, that could be the more challenging reversal.

Dukakis wants to come back

By LORING SWAIM
state columnist

Former Governor Michael Dukakis was enormously invigorated by Bill Masiello's gratuitous praise of the integrity of the Dukakis administration, says an associate.

Quite unexpectedly, as he was winding up his testimony before the Ward corruption commission, Masiello volunteered that to get contracts for his architectural firm, he could no longer grease palms under Dukakis as he had under Governors Sargent and Volpe.

No sooner had this hit the papers than a "new influx" of support was registered for Dukakis.

At this juncture, there's no question Dukakis wants to return to office. Sources say the signs are all there: a careful cataloguing of everyone who has written him since he left office in 1977, people who are potential new activists in a campaign to regain the governorship: careful scouting of talent for a return to power.

The marching orders, says this source, are "restraining till the next election," i.e. low-key things till 1981. Dukakis won six years ago after two solid years of campaigning at first "sotto" voice and then all out. He lost a reelection bid because he took it for granted that his good works would shine so brightly, he didn't need to hit the campaign trail as he had before. He remained gubernatorial till it was too late.

Evidently he won't make that mistake again.

However, despite wheeler-dealer Masiello's imprimatur of respectability on his administration, as some observers say, it wasn't all that lilly white. There were some campaign irregularities that came to light, but they were never developed into scandals.

Sources say that the behind-the-scenes skirmishing among Massachusetts Republicans for delegates seats at the July GOP national convention would make one's hair turn gray.

Diehards in the defunct campaign of Cong. Phil Crane are maneuvering to get to the convention by becoming Reagan delegates. Some long-term Reaganites like Bill Barnstead are going to the convention as, of all things, Anderson delegates or alternates. And some Anderson delegates will, in fact, attend and vote for George Bush (unless his candidacy folds).

Displaced Republican state committee chairman Gordon Nelson, a closet Crane operative, had done his best to gerrymander the state's caucus districts to benefit Crane, only to find his plans thrwarted by newly-elected chairman Andrew Natsios who neutralized his Crane tilt in several key districts.

The Crane conservatives are trying, says one source, to get to the convention and land on the platform committee so they can implant their ultra-right philosophy in case anything happens to Ronald Reagan.

If Massachusetts officials are single-minded and impartial in their efforts to rid the Commonwealth of wrongdoing, why doesn't the Coast Guard steam out of its Cape Cod harbors and apprehend those U.S. trawlers operating illegally offshore by pair-trawling for their catches.

Laws governing commercial fishing in our territorial waters specify that trawlers must operate single, casting and dragging their nets solo.

But landlubbers on the Cape constantly spot twin trawlers on the horizon operating in tandem, a huge net strung between them sweeping up a far bigger catch than either could collect alone—and splitting the take.

Sources say the Blue Ribbon Commission investigating contract corruption has been informed about the mysterious $50,000 consulting fee Governor King reported on his ethics commission filing but so far has refused to identify in terms of where or whom it came from.

It is also believed the Commission has a lot more names in its files than it is revealing, or should have mentioned to date. The Commission's "restraint" should cause pause for some politicians who think they are home free.

Bill Masiello, whose fresh home-made Italian bread is a sensation around Hyannis, got a contract to bake 90 dozen dinner rolls last weekend for those well-heeled participants in the annual Hyannis to Nantucket "Figawi" yacht race.

Positive difference

By FRANK SARGENT
state columnist

Everybody agrees that this is the strangest political year in memory, so maybe we shouldn't be surprised if the final winner of the White House proves to be— John Anderson.

What will be surprising, though, is if he wins because he's the only candidate who accentuates the positive while everyone else pounds away on the negative.

Right now, it looks like Anderson is the only one who plans a positive campaign, one that tells the people what he's for rather than who he's against. Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan seem on the brink of a name-calling, mud-slinging "anti" campaign that may turn off the majority of the American people.

If that happens, people might turn from Republican Reagan and Democrat Carter to Independent Anderson as a candidate with something positive to say.

Campaign experts predict we're about to see one of the most "negative" presidential campaigns in our history, most of it played out in paid media.

"Negative" advertising is a fairly new development. Coke never used to admit Pepsi existed; now, you can see Coke ads knocking Pepsi. Same thing with soap-suds; you not only learn that Duz does everything, you also hear that Wisk isn't as good at anything. The style is not only to say your product is wonderful, but that the other guy's is no good.

That's happening in politics too. "I expect this to be the most negative media year we've ever seen," says Jimmy Carter's pollster, Pat Caddell. "Politicians have seen that negative works, and most will have a go at it," says Republican strategist John Deardourff.

Sure, it's fair game to point out a candidates' mistakes, or inconsistent statements, or switches on a particular issue. But it's something else just to belt him around because he happens to be running for the same job you want. That's what seems in the offing between Carter and Reagan.

Reagan's going to claim Jimmy Carter's over his head and hasn't got what it takes to be President, and Carter is going to claim Reagan doesn't know anything about foreign affairs and has domestic programs that are oversimplified and out of date.

In the midst of all that, anyone saying, "Yeah, okay— but what are you guys for?" is liable to be ignored. And, if so, a lot of people may turn to John Anderson who won't be wasting his time attacking Carter and Reagan, but will, instead spend his time presenting his view of where America should be headed.

Maybe the arter people know that, and that's why they're running a different sort of "negative campaign against Anderson already, reportedly budgeting more than $200,000 in legal efforts to knock Anderson off the ballot in major states. One such effort is underway in Massachusetts, where a legal challenge has been brought against the 100,000 signatures collected to put Anderson on the Bay State ballot in November.

Old pros in the Democratic party like Carter campaign Chairman Robert Strauss know that kind of thing can boomerang, can "make Anderson a martyr", as Strauss put it.

So, too, can a lot of negative advertising this fall backfire on Reagan and Carter. As John Deardourff says, "There may be an opportunity for Anderson to say 'All we're hearing from the other two candidates is how bad the other guy is— and I want to spend my time talking about what we can do'."

If Anderson takes the high road, and Reagan and Carter the low, Anderson may be such a difference he might get himself elected.

Disinheriting your children

By the Editors of Psychology Today

Older parents are disinheriting their grown children these days for new motives, ones that are likely to increase because of current social changes.

Jeffrey P. Rosenfeld, a sociologist at New York State's Nassau Community College, reached that conclusion after studying the wills filed for probate between 1973 and 1978 in Nassau County, a suburban area near New York City.

The proportion of wills involving disinheritance was small — only 3.5 percent of the total. Some involved a pattern of motives that has been familiar throughout history: a desire to punish children for longstanding differences. But a significant number of wills reflected a newer rationale.

Thirty-one percent of the disinheritances in the study were what Rosenfeld calls "benevolent." The will-writers had been motivated at least in part by a feeling that other people needed the money more than their children did.

One 79-year-old widow wrote, "I specifically have in mind but make no provision for my son, Randolph, who has been amply provided for by me during my lifetime. I know my son will understand, but there is a friend of mine who could use the money more than he."

Almost half of the people in this category were living in retirement communities. Most of their legacies went to friends or neighbors in the same community, though one person willed a substantial legacy to a friend who was so ill he could not continue living there.

Twenty-two percent of the disinheritances fell into a pattern that Rosenfeld calls "disinheritance by default," because of the uninvolvement preceding it. Most of these parents had no current idea of where their children could be reached.

Though this mode of disinheritance was not necessarily prompted by feuding, there was little or no evidence of an amicable relationship. Parents and children in this group had been out of touch for an average of eight years, and one mother had not seen her son for close to 17 years.

Close to three-quarters of the parents in this group had been living as "social isolates," without meaningful ties to other people, or had been receiving long-term nursing care at the time they wrote their wills. Their beneficiaries tended to be friends they had met in their hospitals or nursing homes. Parents who disinherit seem to be older than parents who do not, Rosenfeld found. Of the will-writers in the study who bypassed family heirs, 63 percent were 75 or older.

The story behind the award

(Editor's Note: The following is a speech given by Marcia Ratner, an English-as-a-second-lanquage teacher at South High and was sent to the Graphic by Mrs. Philip Richmond of Newton Highlands for publication):

The Katherine E. Torrant Award is presented annually to a member of the senior class who has contributed significantly to international understanding.

The 1980 recipients are Xoumoua Mouacheupao and Stephen Tsang.

Just four years ago, a young man arrived in our country from Hong Kong with a smattering of English learned at a bilingual school. He came in search of a better high school education and the chance for college.

In striving for that education at Newton South, he has adjusted to a new language, new foods, new climate, customs, new family and friends.

His unerring good judgment, his even-tempered, good nature, and his willingness to learn combined with his modest demeanor and good humor have made faculty and peers alike enjoy knowing him.

In the computer lab he has gone out of his way to explain the work to other students and has volunteered to help teachers there.

Unobtrusively, he has aided other foreign-born students in their adjustments to the United States, advising them about course work, and, most recently, how to succeed at disco roller-skating.

He has actively participated in the International Club. During the May Arts Festival dinner, he worked early to late, lending a help hand.

He offered to act as an interpreter for a group of Mainland Chinese educators visiting our school, bridging not only cultures, but political viewpoints.

Brandeis in the fortunate recipient of this future diplomat: Stephen Tsang.

Never before in the history of Newton South had a student arrived with no formal education. Never before had a student arrived who was a member of a tribe with no written language.

Then in 1977, just such a student entered. She came from northern Laos, from the mountainous region called the Plain of Jars where her extensive family, Hmong people, had farmed rice and corn.

She had worked in the fields weeding, had walked miles to visit a marketplace, had learned to sew ever-so-tiny, intricate, colorful patterns on traditional long black skirts, and had lived in a thatched roof bamboo house with a fireplace for heat and cooking.

It was a peaceful, slow-paced, agrarian way of life. She had never been to school, had never seen a traffic jam, ice-cream cone, Tv show or snow.

Her life changed radically when Viet Cong soldiers overran her village and ordered her father to leave. When her father refused, she saw a soldier put a gun to his head and kill him. The family, mother, two older brothers, their wives and children; two youngers sisters and a younger brother, was forced to leave. Her two married sisters remained behind.

For many weeks the family walked over treacherous terrain; exhaustion, hunger and fear of meeting Viet Cong or Communist soldiers plagued them.

In the dark of night, they paddled across the Mekong River on a bamboo raft into Thailand and freedom. A refugee camp was their home for about 18 months until a Newton Centre church sponsored the family.

When she came into my office, she looked numb with fear and bewilderment. Smiles and more smiles, thousands of words of encouragement, broke down all reserve. We began to communicate, through pictures at first, then the alphabet and the intricacies of English grammar, including the irregular verbs.

We read books, took trips to a drugstore and to libraries, to Plymouth Rock and Salem. We used dictionary, maps and an atlas.

I remember my joy the day I learned to say and spell her name, and her amazement the day she learned the earth was round and that there were oceans and the first day she saw her country, Laos, on a map.

Her motivation to learn was is enormous.

In three years she has been able to compress aspects of 12 years of education. She now speaks of college. This year she graduates, no longer a frightened refugee. She has enjoyed helping to teach English to our newest Laotian refugees and serving as a translator for them. She has offered to plan and participate in International Club activities. She has looked for and found a job in a nursery school. She has enriched the lives of all of us —students, faculty and administration—speaking openly of her experiences. There is an old Laotian adage about the Hmong people that says they are too tough to cry. I've never seen tears, only smiles, and an occasional giggle of delight from a delightful ambassador of cross-cultural understanding— Xou Mouacheupao.

Scout News

Cadeites in Troop 537, meeting at the Busy Bee's in West Newton Square, recently participated in a number of educational and leisure activities.

Some of the Cadettes spent two mornings of their April vacations completing a babysitting course at the Faulkner Hospital where they learned the basics of first aid, safety measures and telephone protocol, as well as making entertainment boxes for the children they care for.

Certificates were issued to: Kimberly Baldi, Vicki Cecchinelli, Dawn Cetrone, Teri DeStefano, Cheryl Luce, Tina Seimering, Laurie VanBuskir and Lisa Wentzel.

All of the Cadettes invited their mothers to the investiture ceremony that featured a potluck supper. A cookbook is being put together as a result.

One of the highlights for all the girls was the trip to "Annie" in Boston, paid for by profits from calendar sales.

Showing concern for the environment, the girls did a survey on noise during May. The information will be used as part of a current study on noise pollution in Newton and Brookline.

If there is unreasonable noise pollution in your neighborhood, Mona Thaler of the Brookline Conservation Commission, 232-9000, would like to hear about it.

A clinic on making lawn mowers more quiet will be offered shortly and noise posters and buttons will be distributed.

Memorial Day

May was gloriously ushered out with the girls proudly marching in full uniform in the Memorial Day parade. Carrying flags, they were joined by Junior Girl Scouts from Davis School, Troop 607: Debbie Clark, Sandra Baldi and Janey Moore.

Brownies in Chestnut Hill Troop 614 come from Park, Bowen, Heath and Mt. Alvernia schools. Leader Susan Record relates that the people at Ponkapoag Reservation let the children experience what it is like to tap trees.

The girls helped split wood, stoked the fires under the boiling sap. Their "thank you" was to get samples of maple syrup.

Recently, the mostly second graders planted a vegetable garden in Chestnut Hill, which they will take turns caring for and harvesting during the summer.

Their service project for the year took place when the troop raised money through doing chores and donated it towards Goodwill Industries Thanksgiving dinners.

Co-Leaders Helen Mooney, Joanne Greeley and Lilian Tyer were proud to see their entire Brownie Troop 826 of Horace Mann School "fly up" to junior Scouting in a ceremony and end-of-the-year picnic at Wares Cove in Auburndale.

Their service project was to make felt cutouts and felt boards to be used as teaching devices.

Workshop

An excellent workshop at Boston College is coming up July 7-11 for adults , especially good for leaders and assitants to come to to learn what various handicaps are like.

With such training, the leader could sensitize children to the feelings of people who live with handicaps.

Call 332-2085 by June 20 to register.

Carr Troops

The Brownie troop and junior troop at Carr School had a series of interacting activities.

Brownie Leader Ellie Gentile told how both troops baked cookies, took to them to the Veteran's Hospital, and got a tour of the place.

Brownie Kristen Svarstrom sold the most G.S. cookies at Carr.

Both troops planned and carried out a May mothers' party. It was a variety show in which Brownies and juniors entertained all in attendance. The Brownies marched in the Memorial Day parade and bought a wreath for Magni-Coletti Park.

Carr School junior troop, led by Kathy Elias, had a good time this year earning four badges, skating, cooking, needlecraft and hospitality.

All 14 members of the Mason-Rice Brownie Troop 362 "flew up."

They can look back on a year that included a visit to the African exhibit at the Peabody Museum and a behind-the-scenes look at McDonald's.

They made a couple of creative art projects and drawings to give to elderly residents of a Newton nursing home.

During Earth Week in April, all learned about recycling, how to make soil compost and sang and listened to Barbara Herson.

Notes from Nick

My personal advice to the Board of Aldermen is, pay up the Middlesex County payment, you have mulled this long enough.

The park in West Newton Square is finished, and guess what, I figure it would be an honor to sit there. It would cost the taxpayer $7000 to $8000 per seat because it cost between $150,000 and $200,000 to build and can only seat about 20 people.

I like the cement blocks. It looks like a wharf. I've still got the string of beer cans for the ribbon-cutting ceremony.

What we need in Newton to represent us is more liberals. These are people who like to spend other people's money, but not a penny of their own. This goes for Mofenson, and Frank and the others.

Don't forget, voters, if you vote for these people, you and I will pay and pay.

I personally will not. I bet these debates will not center around employment because the subject is hot. Let's pick on the MBTA. Big deal.

I have not heard about the School Committee doing anything about anything. I hope we are not going to close another school building.

It's nice to say to a small group of people of Newton, "here is a golf club. If you don't run it right, don't worry, the taxpayer will foot the bill."

This mayor and others involved (we'll never know) are giving me the 19th hole. If there isn't a 19th hole, the taxpayers of Newton have one now.

Appreciate support

To the Editor:

The 1980 "March is Red Cross Month" campaign has drawn to a successful close. Thanks to the support of your newspaper, Red Cross chapters throughout the Mass. Bay area are assured of continued community services for the coming year.

We appreciate your support in helping tell the Red Cross story. As you are aware, we depend on the public's generosity for volunteer services and financial contributions.

Your assistance is gratefully acknowledged—not only during March and April, but throughout the year as well.

Teeth-chattering low temperatures

By United Press International

Temperatures dipped to teeth-chattering lows in the upper Great Lakes region, setting aside visions of summertime with unseasonably cold weather and dusting gardens with a touch of frost.

Shortly before dawn, Chicago's temperature dropped to 42 degrees to break a record low of 47 degrees set in 1959. In Cleveland a reading of 40 degrees broke the record low of 41 degrees set in 1964.

Scattered frost was reported in Michigan, and the National Weather Service forecast overnight lows dipping to 40 degrees or colder from northern Minnesota through western Pennsylvania and New York state.

Camping for teens

Teenagers can have an intensive two-week camp experience in the High Adventure Program this summer at Morgan Memorial Fresh Air Camp.

The co-ed camp for teenagers 13-16 is located on 500 acres in South Athol and runs from June 23-Aug. 19. Eighty slots are available for twoweek periods.

Morgan Memorial provides all transportation to and from camp.

The High Adventure program includes basketball, tennis, track, volleyball, campcraft, nature trails, campouts, mountain climbing day trips, overnight trips, a ropes course, and water sports (sailing, canoeing and swimming instruction).

red velvet robe and matching hat. She then holds up the jester's green and white stripped outfit of brocade and velour, shaking the pants so the bells at the feet ring." I find it very interesting she adds with a smile.

Suddenly Lunin appears with a black mask covering her head and face and an axe in her hand." We'll have an executioner on hand too," she says with a laugh. " We had to make sure we had all the right accessories," says Lunin," such as the gravediggers cart and the executioners axe," Lyons adds. " A great deal of detail goes into this type of costuming" she says.

Lyons says that many of clothes worn now can be adapted for their use. Some of the participants will have a costume a rubber band, and puffing by cutting jeans at the knees, putting in them out so they look like pantaloons. " There's a costume," she says. But regular jeans are a no-no, Lyons adds. Also some leather boots, sandals and clogs can be worn as 15th century footwear.

The major difference in their costumes and actual 15th century attire, Lyons says, is that they used very heavy fabrics in the 15th century. "We want everyone to be comfortable so the fabrics we used are much lighter, since it will be very warm in July," Lyons says.

Eight-month-old Genna Lyons 4-year-old Zachary Lunin and 6-year-old Samuel Lunin will appreciate that. All three will be properly attired in 15th century bloomers and hats, specially made by their nothers.

Nurses' strike settled

void, he said. Montalbano added that if the NLRB rules in favor of the nurses, then, " We've just gotten a jump on the negotiations." When asked if the hospital has now recognized the nurses association, which is how the nurses are interpreting the settlement, Montalbano said no. " We don't consider this rec ognition," he said. these specialty units may refuse a recall offer for any shift prior to the shift commencing June 20 at 7am' and still retain their recall seniority position. But if a nurse refuses a recall offer subsequent to that date, such a nurse will placed at the bottom of the recall seniority list.

Nurses within the non- specialty units may refuse a recall offer prior to June 27 at 7 am. A nurse refusing a recall offer subsequent to that date will be put at the bottom of the recall seniority list. All nurses must be recalled by July 4.

Montalbano said patients will be admitted to the hospital at a rate of approximately 25 a day until ' its normal 275 quota is filled. The hospital now has 100 patients who are not seriously ill' Montalbano said.

Montalbano said that there could be some animosity crossed between nurses and hospital employees who the picket line." There is anxiety on both sides," he noted. Those staff members who crossed the picket line were sometimes harassed, according to Montalbano. He added that statements such as," We want Newton-Wellesley closed down forever," were made.

" We have 1800 employees who have to get used to each other again.Doctors and nurses have to work with each other, nurses and therapists, ect.," Montalbano said. " There could be some hard feelings'" he added.

Twenty Newton Wellesley Hospital nurses went back to work yesterday, according to Montalbano.

"We honestly don't know if there will be a problem.This is a new situation for all of us," hesaid.

Values updated

always been a problem in the Assessing Department. Three assessors (the city only has two) cannot update 24,000 parcels in two years even working full-time, Hendrickson said.

Hendrickson also agrees with Aronson a complete reva uation is not needed. He said Brady's estimate of as much as $900,000 for a complete revaluation by an outside firm is out of line. In 1978 assessors sought proposals for computer-assisted revaluation, and Hendrickson said there were about five bids and "the numbers never approached $900,000."

Bertelon said of the CLT work, "whatever was put on cards and measured at that time primarily still exists. Houses just don't shrink'" and said most of the CLT information is still accurate. He also said the problem is manpower.

Brady told aldermen "The bottom line is every piece of property will have to be reviewed . . . My understanding is that none of the CLT figures have been kept up." He also said 8,000 building permits had not been included in the figures.

Although Brady recommended a complete revaluation by an outside firm, the also presented three other options; an in-house effort at a cost of about $400,000, or revaluation of only commercial or residential property by an outside firm.

Aronson said the court originally allowed extensions because of weaknesses in the CLT system, because the system was based on assessments of cost minus depreciation without consideration of sale price.

Aldermen have asked Mayor Theodore D. Mann to prepare a report for June 24 outlining how the city should proceed with revaluation.

Bringing the Nautilus back to New England

By JAMES V. HEALION

GROTON, Conn. (UPI) — Frank Scheetz believes in striking while the iron is hot.

The iron in question is the USS Nautilus, the world's first atomic-powered submarine, which made history crossing beneath the geographical North Pole in 1957.

Scheetz says the big sub already has been deactivated by the Navy and he says if it isn't brought back to Connecticut now, there's no telling what will happen in the two years it may take to prepare its display site at Goss Cove.

President Carter has approved returning the submarine to its birthplace here as a national monument, but Scheetz says Carter left it to Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo to give his final blessing.

"Carter could be out of office by the end of the year. If that happens, we'd have to have all these stumps to dig all over again with the Republicans in there," Sheetz said.

The Nautilus is tied up at the Mare Island shipyard in California and that's not doing Scheetz and people like former Gov. John N. Dempsey of Groton much good as they try to raise money for the local site, Scheetz said.

"When you go to a businessman and say 'I want a couple of hundred dollars to help create a site for the Nautilus,' the standard reply is, 'When you get her closer to home, I'll think about giving you $200.'"

Sheetz, who never finished sixth grade but worked in the Pennsylvania coal mines until he was 12, retired as a Navy chief after 21 years.

It's a fight he has fought, and won, before.

He persuaded the Navy to let his non-profit corporation display the USS Croaker, a conventional World War II submarine, as a memorial. That site is three miles down river on the Thames from the Navy's sprawling submarine base and Goss Cove.

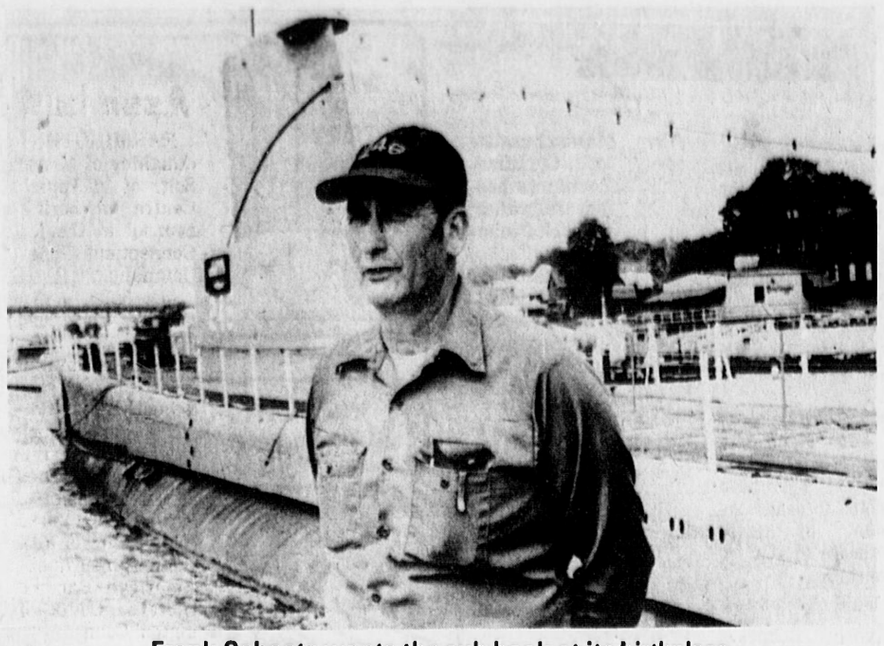

Sheetz says it would be fine to tie up the Nautilus next to the Croaker temporarily.

"What we're proposing to do is to bring that boat back here, tie it up at the Croaker mooring, and weld her hatches shut so it's secure. Then it will be so much easier to raise funds. People will be able to see something tangible," he said.

The Navy wants to maintain physical control of the submarine for a number of reasons, mainly security. Parts of the boat are still classified. It plans to keep two officers and a 22-member honor crew aboard at Goss Cove.

Recently Sheetz pushed back the blue baseball cap with the yellow number 246 on the crown — the Croaker's number — and explained to a visitor that an estimated 90,000 people visit the tourist attraction annually, many of whom come from the historic Mystic Seaport nearby. Admission proceeds are used for the Croaker's upkeep.

The old sub's popularity may fall off with the Nautilus' arrival and Scheetz said, "If things get really rocky down here, the only thing I can do is petition the government to put the Croaker next to the Nautilus at the base. I need this like a hole in the head."

Frank Scheetz wants the sub back at its birthplace.

Spending not solution, Moakley tells Chamber

NORWOOD — This nation must find " new directions for American capitalism" to come to grips with economic problems that today offer no easy solutions.

That note keyed the address of Ninth District Cong. John J. Moakley, Democrat Monday night at Norwood Airport at the Norwood Area Chamber of Commerce annual meeting.

He said the adoption by Congress of a balanced budget last month was one important step in reducing the psychology of an overheated economy that saw inflation rise from eight to 19 percent in two years.

"We need confirmation of 'people remedies' " with a spirit that shows " all working towards a solution," he said.

The congressman stressed the need for a serious "program of conservation of all our resources" and stimulation of domestic production of oil."

Moakley named three theories of the causes of inflation noting that each has contributed to creating the economic phenomenon the nation now is experiencing.

The theories include deficit spending by government, policies of the Federal Reserve system, and excess demand for goods by consumers.

The congressman rejected two ways to fight inflation, the first being a "serious recession"and the second wage and price controls.

" One thing we have learned from inflation," he said, " is that we cannot spend our way out of economic difficulties without creating more problems down the road."

Newest Navy guided missile frigates

'Porsche' of the destroyer fleet

AT SEA ABOARD THE USS MORISON (UPI) — For years, Larry J. Anders has wanted a Porsche — a fast, maneuverable sports car.

Gazing to the horizon from the wrap-around bridge of the new guided missile frigate Samuel Eliot Morrison, the Navy captain now feels he has something even better: a sleek and powerful frigate, the newest of its kind.

"This is the Porsche of the destroyer fleet," he said. "I can't believe I'm being paid for this ... The Navy ought to charge me for this experience."

Anders, 42, of Pasadena, Calif., is a 20-year Navy veteran. His previous command was the minesweeper Dominant. Now he is the prospective skipper of the 445-foot Morison, seventh of a new class of 54 computerized escort ships designed to clear sea lanes for convoys in wartime.

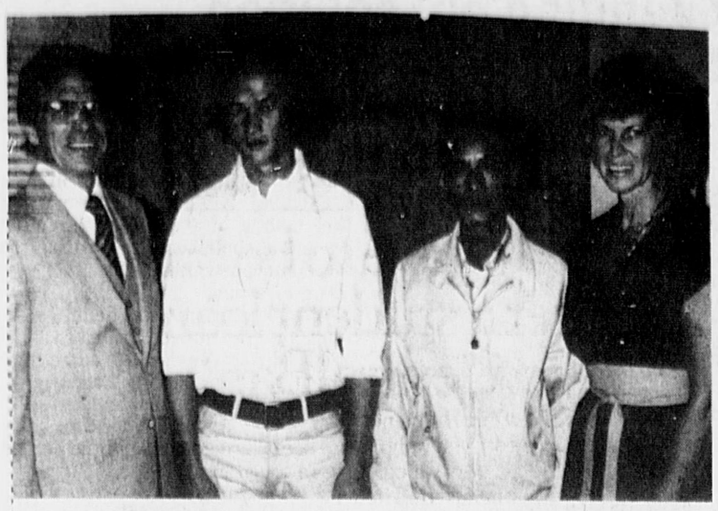

It is so automated that under wartime steaming it can operate efficiently with just 22 of its 150-man crew on watch. Its two main gas-turbine engines can reach more than 30 knots.

The ship, named for the late Harvard scholar, admiral, and Pulitzer-prize winning naval historian, underwent two days of rugged testing in the Gulf of Maine by men of the Bath Iron Works, shipbuilders for the Navy since 1890.

Anders prowled the vessel, poking into every nook and cranny, asking knowledgable questions in a quiet, crisp way.

"We're going to have to learn to put this ship to its best advantage. We just know what she's designed to do and she meets the design criteria," he said.

He spoke of the Morison's vast technical capability and of the expertise of its basically hand-picked crew. "It gives you a good feeling inside if you to go out there and do your thing," he said.

Headmaster chosen

His Eminence, Humberto Cardinal Medeiros has appointed Rev. Charles K. Riepe Rector Headmaster of St. Sebastian's Country Day School in Newton.

A priest from the Archdiocese of Baltimore, Fr. Riepe att ended the Gilman School in Baltimore and the University of Innsbruk, in Austria where he served as an assistant to the late liturgical scholar, Father Josef A. Jungmann, S. J. Fr. Riepe revised and edited the one volume edition of Jungmann's Mass of The Roman Rite, now in its fourth American edition and is, himself, the author of Living the Christian Seasons.

Fr. Riepe chaired the John Carroll School's religion department for four years and served as the Catholic Prepator school's president from 1968-78. The coed school enrolls nearly 900 Baltimore area high school students.

St. Sebastian's new headmaster also served on numerous national and international liturgical committees, wrote for The Catholic Review, organized economic and social development activities for Harford County, was the director of development for the Baltimore Archdiocese, the rector of the Cathedral of Mary our Queen, and is the Director of Chaplains for the Maryland State Police.

In his first address to the St. Sebastian's student body, Fr. Riepe said he was "grateful and enthusiastic: about his appointment and "eager to work with (the students) in making St. Sebastian's the best Catholic preparatory school in the Boston area, if not the country." He will deliver the Commencement address at the 1980 exercises and address the student's parents during a June assembly.

29 European teenagers seek homes in Newton

This summer 29 young Europeans will be part of an AcademicHomestay Program sponsored by the Pacific American Institute.

Each morning they will be taking classes in English and American culture. Afternoons are filled with a variety of activities such as learning softball, touring Harard and the JFK Library, going to the beach.

The students would like to be part of an American home while they are here. Host families provide the student with meals and a place to sleep and are invited to participate in as many of the activities that they have time for.

Costly meter replacement asked

NEWTON — Water Commissioner Verne Porter wants to replace 23,000 of the smaller water meters in the city at a cost of $1.8 million.

Three-quarters of those meters are at least 20 years old and many are 40 years old, he said. As the meters age, they measure less water, and the city looses revenue.

The replacement, Porter says, even under current water rates, would result in an additional $170,000 annually in billings, and savings of $104,000.

Although Porter said "This will pay for itself. This won't cost the city a cent"' Alderman Paul Coletti said the overall replacement program is necessary because the meters were not maintained over the years.

Coletti said the proper approach may be to fix leaks that contribute to the loss of 30 percent of the water in the system. Porter said the leaks are important, but that faulty meters also account for the missing water.

When Quincy switched to new meters compatible with a computer as Porter plans, a reorganization of the water department was necessary. The computer system is very complex, Alderman Richard McGrath said, and created some problems while solving others.

Porter said the reorganization in Quincy was partly due to the new meters, but also because the department was "in shambles." He also said the computer in Quincy does not have the capabilities of the Newton municipal computer.

South student wins grant

Jennifer Norton was one of 24 Massachusetts students to receive a grant for a Total Immersion German Weekend at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) campus this June.

The program offers small group workshops geared to student's interest. The activities are built around sports, popular music, films and skits.Norton will have contact with native German speakers her age and college faculty members. Norton has been studying German for two years at Newton South High School with Mrs. Clark, a native German speaker. The German weekend is sponsored by the Massachusetts Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of German, with MIT and the Goethe Institute offering hospitality. The AATG offers the immersion weekend to carefully selected young and talented students.

New elderly services

The Jewish Vocational Service of Boston is establishing outreach services to Older Workers at the Brookline-Brighton-Newton Jewish Community Center located at 50 Sutherland Rd. Brookline.

The office hours will be Tuesdays and Thursdays 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Fridays 1-5 p'm.

The office is designed to serve the counseling and job placement needs of persons aged fifty and up, who are seeking full time or part time employment, for financial reasons or just to remain active. The JVS has on file many professional and non-professional jobs available. Those applicants with clerical or secretarial skills are especially in demand.

JVS will provide specialized intake, vocational counseling and placement assistance. Inquiries and appointments may be made by contacting Laurie Sandler at the BBN office at the stated hours (734-0800) or at the JVS Boston office (723-2846).

Belated tag Newton North catcher Gail Cole applys the tag to Saugus's Jill Arsenault, but the tag was too late and Arsenault scored the 11th run for the Sachems.

North girls ousted by Saugus power

A three-run homer in the first inning by Marlene Monto put the brakes on the Newton North High girls' softball team's chase after the North Sectional Division 1 tournament8 crown.

Saugus went on to win the game, 12-10, in the semi-final round of the tournament on Thursday at Concord Avenue Field in Belmont.

At on point the Tigers trailed, 11-5, but they never let up scoring five in the fifth to close to within one. Senior righthander Janice Casey got stung early in the ball game. In the first, after walking two, Monto drilled her offering to the gap in left-center and cleared the bases.

Newton North went down in order in the first and then struck for three runs in the second. Catcher Gail Cole rapped a single to left-center to lead the inning off, and then advanced to second when Casey walked. Co-captain Diana Proia laid down a perfect bunt and all runners reached base safely. Patty Antonellis hit into a fielder's choice to drive one in, and Patty McCabe reached on an error to knock in another. Carole Summers then hit a grounder to second that caused a mixup and a run was able to come home.

The bottom of the second saw Saugus rack up four more. A pair of singles drove in three and a two-base error allowed the other run to cross the plate and the Sachems took a 7-3 lead.

The Tigers added single tallies in the third and fourth, but Saugus totaled four more runs in those two innings.

With one out Casey singled to left and Antonellis followed with a single over second. Laurie Goldenberg pinch-hit and drew a walk to load the bases. Pinch-hitter Donna Yaffe then walked in a run. Sue Armstrong hit a shot to the shortstop who tried to make a play at third and threw the ball away allowing two to come home. Debbie Quinn then hit a pop to second that was misplayed into a two-run error.

Saugus added an insurance run in the bottom of the sixth and North went scoreless in the seventh.

Saugus pitcher Chris Hofman, 8-1 during the regular season with a 1.90 era and the winner of all of the Sachems tournament games, scattered eight hits and struck out two in a fine performance on the mound.

The Tigers stranded 10 runners during the game, Newton North couldn't get the key hit when it was needed. Cole turned in a strong showing behind the plate, stoping countless pitches that were in the dirt.

Newton North had to play without the sevices of regular third baseman Patty Ackerley who injured her thumb.

Saugus didn't play flawless ball and its offense made up the difference. "

""Defensively we were not that sharp," said the coach of the year in Division 1 Diane Bena. "When you can play that way and win it's great."

"If you play a tournament game like this and still win, it builds confidence in your team," said Bena.

In the 1:30 game of the Division 1 tournament Billerica won a come from behind game over Beverly, 6-5, and will now face Suagus for the championship.

Sue Durnan tossed an eight-hitter and Diane Busnach knocked in the winning run for Billerica. Center fielder Busnach also cut down the tieing run at the plate in the last inning to preserve the win.

Billerica and Saugus will face off on Saturday to decide the championship of the North Sectional Division 1 tournament. The summary:

SAUGUS (12)—M. Wall 3-2; S. Flynn 4-0; K. McCormack 3-1; M. Monto 4-2; J. Tilly 3-1; J. Arsenault 4-2; S. Rouleau 4-3; K. Emberley 3-2; C. Marotta 3-0; totals—31-13.

NEWTON NORTH (10)—S. Armstrong 3-0; D. Quinn 5-1; J. Gladu 3-1; G. Cole 4-2; J. Casey 2-1; D. Proia 4-1; P. Antonellis 4-1; P. McCabe 2-0; L. Goldenberg 1-0; C. Summers 2-0; D. Yaffe 1-1; totals 31-8.

Struck Out by—C. Hofman 2, J. Casey 1, S. Armstrong 1.

Final out Newton North Tiger Jackie Gladu ripps a line drive out to left and ends the game and Newton North's tournament chances, as the Tigers lost, 12-10, to Saugus on Thursday.

New England pole vault champ

Magliozzi adds another jewel

Newton North's Jim Magliozzi added the New England pole vault championship to his already impressive list of credentials as the Tigers finished third Saturday in the New England Track and Field championships at Gardner.

Maqliozzi, already the Massachusetts, Class A and Suburban League champ in the vault, won Saturday's event in dramatic style by reaching 13-6 in a bump-off to edqe MasconmeNt's Don Studer.

Heights had been low during conpetition dme to a faulty take-off box which was removed , leaving the poles. athletes only a cement base from which t plant their Hence, Magliozzi and Studer completed the event tied at the top with recorded helghts of 13 feet. "That was definitely a factor," said North coach Fred Yaitanes.

In the jump-off, which is actually suddendeath, Magliozzi cleared 13-6 on his first attempt, giving him the title.

The Tigers' 24-point total placed them behind winnsr New Bedford (34) And runner-up Ayer (30).

NeWton North sent three other competitors to the New England's and they all placed. Glenn Goldman took third 1n the 100, Mike Pendergast did the same in the 880 and Dave Vona finished fifth in the mile.

Goldman, one of three Tiqer captains this year (Vona and Magliozzi being the others), ran a hand-timed 10'27, thus addinq this to his fourth place finish in the All-State meet and his second in the Class A meet.

Pendergast's 1:56'86 was a personal best in ths 880. Vond, the holder of eight school individual and relay records, posted a 4;23 in the mile.

"These boys provided leadership for us all year," said Yaltanes, referring especially to his out-goinq trl-captalns. "We'll mlss them."

Watertown's Bob Monroe also placed in Saturday's meet, taking third in the shot put with a throw of 55-5.

Harvard tennis letter for Auburndale man

CAMBRIDGE — Newton's Greg Kirsch will receive a varsity letter for his contributions to the Harvard men's tennis team this season.

The racquetmen ended an impressive 16-5 season with 9-0 victories over Cornell and Army at home.

An 8-1 Eastern League record placed the Crimson second behind the Tigers of Princeton, who were unbeaten in nine EITA matches.

A freshman-dominated Harvard squad easily outdistanced Ivy foes Yale and Princeton earlier in the year to capture the New England championships' winning five of six individual division titles.

"As the only senior on the team, Greg had an important leadership role," said Coach Dave Fish. "He was our hardest worker, and really set an example for the younger boys."

Kirsch competed almost exclusively as part of Harvard's third doubles team, paired with freshman Mike Terner, but came through with crucial singles wins against Brown, Columbia and Dartmouth.

A 1975 graduate of the Rivers School, Kirsch played soccer and captained the tennis team. He graduated from Harvard June 5.

Kirsch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kirsch of Auburndale.

Canada founded, explored

French explorer Jacques Cartier is generally regarded as the founder of Canada. But his exploration of the Gulf of St. Lawrence in 1534 followed by 37 years the sighting of Newfoundland in 1497 by English seaman John Cabot. Centuries prior to that, increasing evidence shows, Vikings had reached Canada's Atlantic coast and Newfoundland.

We believe that today's economy shouldn't cost you the opportunity to purchase a car, attend college or make home improvements.

Earlier this year the Federal Government made it known that we Americans must be more prudent and cautious when using credit. Shawmut agrees totally. Credit must be used wisely by This, as bankers, and you, as consumers.

We also believe that credit for essential purchases must be available. This year, many of you must buy cars, pay tuition or make home improvements. At Shawmut we understand that. We want you to know that we're here with the funds you need to make these necessary purchases.

In today's economy, we're the one you'll stay with. Because, even in times like these, you're the one we'll stand by.

Kosowsky homers twice, Mosca cops 4th straight

Steve Kosowsky blasted two three-run homers and drove in six runs to pace Mosca Club past Auburndale Sports Shop, 13-5, in Newton National Division play on Monday at Del Ryan Field.

The win extended Mosca Club's winning streak to four games and gives it a perfect 4-0 record.

Center fielder Kosowsky ripped his two shots in Mosca Club's five run second inning and seven run fifth. Kevin Castellanos went the distance, giving up four hits and striking out five, to up his record to 2-0. Bob Mosca chipped in a two-run single for the winners. Mosca Club jumped out to a 6-0 lead after the top half of the second only to see Auburndale score five runs in the bottom half of the inning. Mosca Club rapped the game up with its seven runs in the fifth. Larry Kelly drove in a pair for the losers. Bill Uberti scored on a passed ball in the fifth inning to give Newton Boys' Club a 3-2 win over C & K Components on Monday in Newton National Division play at Howard Ferguson Field.

Uberti reached on a fielder's choice, was balked to second, stole third and broke a 2-2 tie when he scored on the passed ball.

Steve Fucci won the game in his first outing of the season for Boys' Club. grabbed Boys' Club a two-run lead in the first inning. Dennis Berube double to start the rally, and stole third. Jim Corsi doubled him in and went to third on a ground out to first. Corsi trotted home on a wild pitch for the second tally.

Fucci walked four straight batters in the in the second inning to give C & K Components its first run. C & K added another in the fifth when Don Precopio doubled and scored on John Corsi's single.

Day Junior nine City champ

Day Junior High reigns as baseball champion of the city after shading Warren Junior, 6-5, in a showdown battle Thursday at Albemarle Field'

The two schools went into the contest with identical 6-1 records against intra-city opponents. Day had lost only to Warren. Meadowbrook was the only previous rival to have outscored Warren'

Trailing by a 5-1 margin going into the fifth inning, Day got back three runs helped by Jeff Gramada's two-run single.

Still behind 5-4 going into the seventh, Joe King singled to get a rally started. An error on Kevin Hill's grounder let in the tieing run. Tim Mulvey and Tim Brandon were walked intentionally to load the bases.

The next batter, Gramada, bounced a roller to the second baseman. The throw came to the plate too late and Hill scored the tie-breaker.

Mulvrey and Brandon had two hits apiece as Day upped its record to 7-1 and 9-3 overall.

Catcher Natale had three hits for the losers.

Boule boosts St. Bernard's

David Boule pounded a three-run triple to spark a five-run final inning as St. Bernard's bested Sacred Heart, 13-10, in Newton International League play at West Newton Common.

Third baseman Boule, a 13-year-old hitting .733, added two singles to his triple to drive in four runs on the day.

With one out and trailing 10-8 John Coppola walked to started the inning off for St. Bernard's. A fielder's choice was followed by a John Santagati walk and a Bob Gannon single to load the bases. Boule cleaned the bases with his triple and scored on an error. A bases loaded walk8 to Jay Giccone pushed the fifth run across. Kevin Hilt had a pair of singles for Sacred Heart. St. Bernard's is now 3-1. The Auburndale Warriors trounced Newton Sports Center, 11-1, on Monday at West Newton Common. Steve MacKay hurled a four-hitter and fanned four to earn the win. Third baseman Ed Cohen stroked two singles and a double to drive in three runs'8 and Robert LeConti picked up twO rbi's for the Warriors. Don Fox blasted a two-run triple to aid the winning cause.

Newton Sports Center scored its only tally when Gene Lindsey singled and scored on an error.

Ray Gladu hurled a one-hitter to lead the Elks Red Sox to first win of the season, 13-3 over the Upper Falls Lions on Monday in International League play at Upper Falls Field.

The 13-year-old righthander had a no-hitter until the fourth inning when B. Brackett singled to left-center. Gladu whiffed four and yielded six walks.

Catcher Chris Noble hit a line shot two-run home run to leftfield for the Red Sox. First baseman Bill McHugh collected a pair of singles and Doug Zito walked four times and scored four runs to aid the winners' attack.

Hibos nip Post 440

Righty Brad Cohen, making his first start for Newton Legion ran into control trouble in the seventh inning and wound up a 3-1 loser to the Watertown Hibos in a Stan Musial League game Monday night under the lights at Albemarle Field.

Cohen was going along superbly and had blanked the Hibos over the first six innings on three hits. His trouble started when Jim Coiley drew a leadoff walk. After Joey Gentile flied to left, pitcher Jim Corsi slapped a double to right-center to bring home Coliey with the tying run.

Chris Chaloff replaced Cohen on the mound and had even greater difficulty finding the plate. Successive bases on balls to Mike Kelly and Steve Fleming forced in the go-ahead run.

Pete Centola was hit by a pitch and a sacrifice fly to centerfield by Clougherty brought in the final marker.

Post 440 registered its lone run in the fourth canto. Gary Sementelli got aboard on an error by the second baseman and rode home on a three-bagger by southpaw swinger Jack Ryan, a drive down the left field line. Corsi, throwing with plenty of heat, piled up a dozen strikeouts while allowing only three hits. The Newton Legion nine will play a make-up game Thursday, 6 p.m., at Framingham. The summary:

WATERTOWN (3)—Kelly 2-0; 8 Fleming 3-0; Centola 3-1; Clougherty 3-0; Pendleton 2-1; Donovan 3-0; Colley 2-1; Gentile 3-0; Brennan 2-0; Corsi 1-1; Tot. 24-4.

Lassie League

The finalists in the 1980 Lassie League season were the Corpus Christi Bears and the Turtles. Finals this week completed another successful season.

New soccer league at Newton YMCA

The Family YMCA in Newton will begin a Youth Soccer Program in the fall for boys and girls aged 7-12 in mid-September.

Co-sponsored by the North American Soccer League, the program will parallel the YMCA's Youth Basketball Association campaign, initiated at the Newton YMCA this past winter. It will feature instruction in the fundamentals and the finer points of the sport, sportsmanship, development of character and body, and value education. Boys and girls, YMCA members and non-members, regardless of individual skill, ability or experience, will have a chance to play the game.

League games will be played on the YMCA grass field adjacent to the YMCA building in Newton Corner.

Nationwide, nearly 100,000 boys and girls are enrolled in the local YMCA-administered soccer program, representing over 200 units. The Newton YMCA program, designed by the National Development Department, will be under the supervision of Michael Kozal, Newton YMCA youth director.

More information on the soccer program, starting dates, and other details may be obtained at the Newton YMCA, Newton Corner, or by calling 244-6050.

Walsh fires no-hitter

Lefthander Mike Walsh tossed a no-hitter at the Oak Hill Cubs and led Sacred Heart to an 11-2 win Sunday at Albemarle Field.

Walsh fanned 11 as the Cubs' two runs were unearned. The winning pitcher also cracked a single and a double to knock one in.

Sacred Heart, now 3-0, scored two runs in the first and second innings to lock the win up early.

A three-run sixth inning powered the Auburndale Warriors to a 6-2 victory over the Elks Red Sox Saturday morning at Albermarle Field.

Robert LeConti yielded four hits and struck out eight en route to the win.

Fred Dalicandro led the sixth off with an error on the first baseman, went to third on Don Fox's double to right and scored on a passed ball. Steve MacKay scored another on an infield hit to third and ' the third tally crossed the plate on a wild throw to first.

Butt smuggling route is almost snuffed out

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — The longtime, multi-million dollar cigarette smuggling route from Virginia and North Carolina to New York is on the verge of being nearly snuffed out, a New York official said Wednesday.

Alfred Donati, director of special investigations for the New York State Tax Department, said this week's crackdown against two major smugglers, coupled with a 1978 federal anti-bootlegging law, is driving many out of the trade.

"The federal act scared off several bootleggers and what we did yesterday and the mopup operations underway, will practically eliminate the cigarette bootlegging business in New York," he said in a telephone interview.

New York and federal authorities Tuesday crushed two major cigarette smuggling rings that transported an estimated $15 million worth of cigarettes the past four years from Virginia and North Carolina to New York.

The crackdown was hailed as one of the biggest ever and was the result, in part, of a six-month, federal undercover operation in nearby Chesapeake, Va.

The federal bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms estimated the two outfits made up to $20,000 per week profit since 1976 while costing New York about $6.5 million in lost cigarette tax revenue.

Federal indictments were brought against seven persons and officials said charges were pending against an undisclosed number of others from additionalbootlegging operations.

Smugglers have long been lured by the huge disparity in state cigarette taxes in Virginia and North Carolina, compared to New York — a difference they turned into quick cash.

The state cigarette taxes in Virginia and North Carolina are the lowest in the nation, 2.5 cents and 2 cents, respectively. The levy is 15 cents in New York and 23 cents in New York City.

Since the mid-1960s, smugglers have hauled cigarettes from Virginia and "arolina to New York, where they sold them for an estimated annual profit of $10 million to $20 million.

Disjointed state efforts failed to place any real dent in the business but in 1978, at the urging of New York Tax Commissioner James Tully, Congress passed the Cigarette Contraband Act.

The measure brought ATF into the business of investigating bootleggers and also stiffened fines and prison terms.

This week's crackdown was the first under the act.

Nolan Douglas, special agent in charge of ATF's Virginia district, agreed with Donati that the bust will be a deterrent, but reserved judgement on how big.

"This will definitely put a crimp into the business, but it's not going to take all the steam out of it," he said. "I'm not sure whether it will stop some of the hard core."

Donati said since the act took effect last spring, New York has already noticed an impact. He said cigarette tax revenues have risen about 10 percent and attributed most of the rise to reduced smuggling.

GYPSY MOTHS

by JOAN A. SIEGEL

If the leaves on your trees nave holes, they may not be sick. More likely, they have been eaten by a Gypsy Moth caterpillar. These insects come out every year, but this season they seem particularly bad.

Eventually it will become a moth, but at its present stage, "the Gypsy Moth is a caterpillar," states Mrs. Joan Irish, from Public Service Information at the Massachusetts Audobon Society. The caterpillar goes through four basic stages. From the end of August until the beginning of September the female lays several egg cases on various hard surfaces outdoors. These egg cases are a brown/tan color and suede looking. They are about the size of a quarter, but are oblong, not circular. They stay on the surface until April.

Sometime around the end of April, the eggs hatch, around the same time as the shad bush blooms. During this period molting occurs and continues until the end of June, when the final growth occurs.

This is the pupa stage (which lasts two weeks), when the caterpillars appear as hard, brown, ball-like objects on the trees. In the second week in July, the caterpillars become moths. The females are white and remain on the trees. They don't fly because they are heavy with eggs. They emit pheromone, a "perfume" which attracts males, (who are small and tan) and after mating, the female lays the eggs and both die.

Right now, the caterpillars are in the molting stage, which is their most damaging stage, when they eat through leaves. At this point, there isn't anything you can do, aside from sweeping them into an ammonia and water solution.

There are several control methods for the other stages. For the egg cases, Mrs. Irish recommends scraping them off and putting them into a container, which you should either bury or burn. A good tool for this is a coffee can, bent to the shape of the tree. Another method is to "paint" the egg cases with either turpentine or kerosene.

During the early part of the molting cycle, you can use Dipel (trade name), which is a bacterial preparation. This is only harmful to moths. However, Mrs. Irish warns, "Some people are allergic to it."

In the pupa stage, the pupae can be scraped off and put into the ammonia and water mixture.

As moths, these insects are not harmful. They are an outside insect and do not eat clothing.

Day camps set to open

NORFOLK — Natural history day camps will get under way at the Massachusetts Audubon Society's Stony Brook Nature Center, Norfolk, June 30.

The opening session for two weeks, Monday through Friday, is for campers entering grades 1-3.

This will be the first time youngsters entering the first and second grades will be included in one of these summer programs.

Following the first session which concludes July 11, are three more camps: Session II for children entering grades 3, 4 and 5, July 14-25; Session III, for those entering grades 5, 6 and 7, July 29-Aug. 8; and Session IV, for youngsters entering grades 7, 8 and 9, August 11-15, a one-week camp.

Bringing the Nautilus back to New England

By JAMES V. HEALION

GROTON, Conn. (UPI) — Frank Scheetz believes in striking while the iron is hot.

The iron in question is the USS Nautilus, the world's first atomic-powered submarine, which made history crossing beneath the geographical North Pole in 1957.

Scheetz says the big sub already has been deactivated by the Navy and he says if it isn't brought back to Connecticut now, there's no telling what will happen in the two years it may take to prepare its display site at Goss Cove.

President Carter has approved returning the submarine to its birthplace here as a national monument, but Scheetz says Carter left it to Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo to give his final blessing.

"Carter could be out of office by the end of the year. If that happens, we'd have to have all these stumps to dig all over again with the Republicans in there," Sheetz said.

The Nautilus is tied up at the Mare Island shipyard in California and that's not doing Scheetz and people like former Gov. John N. Dempsey of Groton much good as they try to raise money for the local site, Scheetz said.

"When you go to a businessman and say 'I want a couple of hundred dollars to help create a site for the Nautilus,' the standard reply is, 'When you get her closer to home, I'll think about giving you $200.'"

Sheetz, who never finished sixth grade but worked in the Pennsylvania coal mines until he was 12, retired as a Navy chief after 21 years.

It's a fight he has fought, and won, before.

He persuaded the Navy to let his non-profit corporation display the USS Croaker, a conventional World War II submarine, as a memorial. That site is three miles down river on the Thames from the Navy's sprawling submarine base and Goss Cove.

Sheetz says it would be fine to tie up the Nautilus next to the Croaker temporarily.

"What we're proposing to do is to bring that boat back here, tie it up at the Croaker mooring, and weld her hatches shut so it's secure. Then it will be so much easier to raise funds. People will be able to see something tangible," he said.

The Navy wants to maintain physical control of the submarine for a number of reasons, mainly security. Parts of the boat are still classified. It plans to keep two officers and a 22-member honor crew aboard at Goss Cove.

Recently Sheetz pushed back the blue baseball cap with the yellow number 246 on the crown — the Croaker's number — and explained to a visitor that an estimated 90,000 people visit the tourist attraction annually, many of whom come from the historic Mystic Seaport nearby. Admission proceeds are used for the Croaker's upkeep.

The old sub's popularity may fall off with the Nautilus' arrival and Scheetz said, "If things get really rocky down here, the only thing I can do is petition the government to put the Croaker next to the Nautilus at the base. I need this like a hole in the head."

Exhibit features jazz era

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Devotees of the big bands of the 1920s and '30s will get a chance to relive pleasant memories this summer at the "Goin' to Kansas City" exhibit in the Kansas City Museum. The exhibit, featuring the great mid-American jazz era, is produced by the museum and Mid-America Arts Alliance.

After the exhibit closes July 31, it will tour with the winner of the "Battle of the Bands" to Tulsa, Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Omaha, Dodge City, Salina, Kans., Hutchinson, Kans., and Magnolia, Ark.

Amendment defeated

Of the proposed amendments clarifying individual's and state's rights in the Constitution and originally submitted to the states by the First Congress in 1789, two were not approved. These related to the apportionment of representatives to Congress and compensation of members. The 10 amendments that were adopted are known as the Bill of Rights.

4,596 inscribed

To commemorate those who died in American coastal waters during World War II, The American Battle Monuments commission erected memorials in New York City and San Francisco. The memorial in New York's Battery Park is inscribed with 4,596 names, the one at the Presidio of San Francisco carries 412 names.

Disney co-stars

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Margaret O'Brien and Kathleen Nolan, both veteran actresses when they were in their teens, will co-star in Walt Disney Productions' two-hour TV drama "Amy-On-The-Lips."

Co-starring with O'Brien and Nolan will be Jenny Agutter in the title role of a young woman who teaches hearing impaired children at a school for the deaf and blind.

Filling out the cast are Barry Newman and Nanette Fabray.

Ike's farm now open to public

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The Gettysburg farm home of the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower was opened to the public on June 14.

The farm adjacent to the Gettysburg Civil War battlefield was the only home Eisenhower and his wife Mamie ever owned and was where he spent much of his time after leaving the presidency. The Eisenhowers officially transferred the property to the government in 1967 and it was designated a national historic site, but Mrs. Eisenhower had the use of it as her home until her death last year.

To see the Eisenhower farm, visitors should go to the Gettysburg National Military Park visitor center on Taneytown road. Free tickets are distributed on a first-come, first-served basis until all scheduled tours for the day are filled; no advance reservations may be made.

A shuttle bus will then take visitors to the farm. Cost for the round-trip bus ride is 70 cents for adults 16 and over and 50 cents for children. At the site tourists may view the house a nd grounds at their leisure.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

CAMELOT(S)
DON'T HAVE TO COST A LOT
Make your winter dreams come true this summer by building your summer home on the finest location on the "Gateway to the Cape".
There's a lot of Camelot on this 30,300 sq ft of prime waterfront land in Wareham. It's on a beautiful, breath-taking knoll overlooking the sparkling Weweanic & Marion shore.
Yet it's only a 50 minute drive from the Greater Boston area even on the busiest of traffic weekends since you don't have to go over either of the clogged Cape Cod Canal bridges.
This Camelot is the nicest area left on the Upper Cape. A one minute walk to a private sandy ocean beach on one side while there's just a saltmarsh between you and the river on the other.
You can build your own private dock riverside or just stroll across the road to an Atlantic inlet and a spectacular view of Buzzards Bay.
Land has 165 feet fronting on water with 200 feet bordering on rustic road. Asking $30,000 and at that price it's the last bargain left on the Upper Cape. Shown by appt. only by ROD MERRILL, Realtor, Wareham. 1-295-4443.

RTE. 1 NORWOOD 762-7200

Dionne Warwick thought Red Cross was only about hurricanes.

A Public Service of This Newspaper & The Advertising Council

"True. I always thought of Red Cross as a kind of rescue force in times of disaster and little more.

"Then I learned that in towns and cities across America, Red Cross gives the kind of help to individuals that you rarely hear about, because it doesn't make headlines in the newspaper.

"Red Cross, for instance, helps elderly people get to doctors' appointments... and even to the store. They help veterans get back on the track. They teach kids to swim... and how to save lives.

"I found out that if you added up all the different humanitarian jobs Red Cross does in different towns, the number comes to over 100!

"That's why I'm helping to keep Red Cross ready. And why I hope you do, too."

Keep Red Cross ready.

Henneberry in race for Middlesex sheriff

NEWTON — Chief Civil Deputy Sheriff of Middlesex County Edward Henneberry has formally announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the office of Sheriff of Middlesex County.

In six separate press conferences — Framingham, Newton, Cambridge, Malden, Lexington and Lowell — Henneberry stressed his strong commitment to the Middlesex County Sheriff's Office during the past 15 years. For the past six years he has been in charge of the Civil Process Division which is one of the two basic responsibilities of the sheriff.

The second major duty of the sheriff is to administrator the House of Correction and Jail in Billerica and Henneberry stated his goal is to operate that institution as "a safe and secure facility, at a cost taxpayers can afford."

Henneberry said that the inmates at Billerica can be divided into two categories, those serving a sentence in the House of Correction and those awaiting trial in the jail.

The important thing to remember when dealing with prisoners in the for crimes they are accused of committing. Henneberry said that they are not on bail because they cannot raise the necessary amount or the bail House of Correction. he said "is that that will be getting out of prison very soon, with a choice for to or contributing to their future, either contributing their criminal records. How we deal with them at Billerica can greatly influence that decision," Henneberry continued. "I believe we must deal with them firmly but fairly. We must instruct with discipline as well as with interest in rehabilitation. The use of human service programs should be encouraged but they must not be abused."

Most importantly, he believes that inmates should not be idle during the day. Henneberry is in favor of their working in programs that can either help pay the cost of their incarceration or make restitution to the victims of their crimes. To this end, he declared that one of his priorities would be the re-opening of the county farm at Billerica.

As for the jail portion of the facility, the prisoners there are awaiting trial has been set high because they are a poor risk to return tore return to trial.

"I am in favor of improving the speedy trial system in the criminal courts to help reduce the overcrowding problem burdening the institution at Billerica and to strengthen the due process system of justice as it applies to the individual awaiting trial behind bars."

Renata Selig (left) of Waban, co-chairwoman of campus hospitality for the Wellesley College Alumnae Association, discusses its recent summer symposium, "The Spirit and the Flesh: Exploring the Middle Ages," with Katharine Evans (right) of Newtonville, co-chairwoman of special events, who was in charge of the medieval banquet.

The Family YMCA of Newton is now holding registration for its summer program.

Interested parties may sign up at the Y Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

There are many new courses. They include a course on jewelry's function in art, culture and symbolism, modern dance with jazz music, recreational ballet, and contract bridge and contract bridge review, which will teach the fundamentals of bidding, responses, and strategies.

A course in yoga and assertiveness training for women will also be offered. Swimnastics, an aquatic exercise program, will be offered to both swimmers and non-swimmers. Tennis instruction will be offered to beginners, advanced beginners, and intermediates. Aerobics will also be offered.

For more information, call 244-6050.

They want their street back

NEWTON — A lot of people come to City Hall to get their streets accepted; Neshobe Road neighbors want the city to give theirs back.

The request is unique, but not the first precident in the case of Neshobe Road. It was one of the first streets the city ever accepted that was not completed.

The Public Facilities Committee Wednesday recommended rescinding the Board of Aldermen order accepting the street and committee Chairman Richard McGrath said it was a case of reaping the harvest of a hasty decision several months ago.

Alderman Carol Ann Shea said when the board accepted the street some of the conditions in the board order were not legal. One of the conditions called for extension of a traffic island on Washington Street to impede through traffic on Neshobe Road.

The board had no control over the traffic island, and when the state rejected the request to extend the island the issue of acceptance rekindled.

Neighbors objected to the cost of the betterments that come with the acceptance of the street, estimated at $80,000 by one resident. Land takings are also necessary for acceptance and are unpopular.

One resident said he has suffered water damage in the basement costing more than $4,000 since the street has been accepted and regraded, and he objected to the plan to remove a number of large trees.

Once the city did a rough regrading of the street, basically to fill a ditch in the road, traffic increased, other neighbors said.

McGrath said the Neshobe road Road petition had been before his committee for more than a year. It was finally accepted, he said, without debate, under a suspension of the rules, and before the street had been completed.

City departments recommended against accepting the street, McGrath said, and contractors have already bid on the project. A number of streets were accepted at the same time as Neshobe Road.

"I hope a lesson has been learned that the proceedure of accepting the betterments was definitely improper," McGrath said.

Also of concern to neighbors is the possibility of development of a 2.5-acre parcel at the foot of Neshobe Road. It was suggested that improvements to the road increased the possibility of development.

Red Cross blood services dedicates new building

The American Red Cross Blood Services, Northeast Region, will be dedicating its new regional headquarters at 60 Kendrick St. Needham, on June 25.

More than 300 volunteers and staff from across the two-state area are expected to attend. The dedication ceremony, to begin at 4 p.m., is part of an all-day annual meeting which will include workshops, displays, an awards luncheon, and tours.

The new facility is the headquarters for blood service to patients in nearly 200 hospitals across Massachusetts and Maine. It houses region-wide management services, is the base of operations for mobile blood collections in Eastern Massachusetts, and provided central supply and vehicle maintenance services to the entire region.

For example, the Northeast Region is the largest of the 57 Red Cross blood services in the country, collecting more than 360,000 pints of blood a year. This enormous volume of blood is managed by the use of an inventory control system developed here which constantly monitors the age and location of every unit of blood collected, and carefully schedules blood collections to match projected patient needs.

CETA has many jobs for youth

People ages 14 to 21 who are out of school may be able to find a job this summer through Newton area CETA.

The Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) has many jobs available . Along with placements for out of school youths, CETA can help economically disadvantaged youth and those on public assistance. Handicapped youth are eligible redgardless of family income.

SYEP runs from June 20 to August 28. All participants will be placed in public and private non- profit organizations and paid $3.10 an hour for full time work. Workshops, and special programs will be available to help individual counseling' participants plan for future employment.

People who must attend summer school will be paid for the time spent in school. For more information, call 964-4800.

CETA jobs for disabled

The Newton area CETA office is looking for handicapped 14-21-year-olds who are interested in summer employment.

CETA's Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP) has a number of placements available in the area for young people who may have difficulty finding a job because of a handicap or disability. People served by Chapter 766 or those who have a disability which is a vocational barrier qualify for SYEP regardless of family income. They still must live in one of the ten towns, though, and be between the ages of 14 and 21.

The jobs pay $3.10 an hour and run from June 20 to August 28. There is a wide variety of jobs available, including office jobs and jobs in hospitals and libraries. Workshops will be offered for all the participants in looking for work after the summer, good work habits, and other necessary skills. For more information, call 964-4800.

Funds help elderly

West Suburban Elder Affairs Services Inc. (WSES), a home care and nutrition program, will make available approximately $150,000 to organizations and programs whose purpose is to help older persons living at home.

The funds come from the federal government (Title 111-B of the revised Older Americans Act), to the State Department of Elderly Affairs, to WSES. Programs will be selected for funding in July, with proposals due to WSES on Tuesday, July 8.

Over the past three years, the services WSES has been able to fund from this source include: legal assistance, outreach, employment programs, health and nutrition education, medical screening, day care, transportation, special services for deaf elders confined to institutions, and a sheltered workshop.

These Title 111-funded services are in addition to information and referral, case management, homemaker, chore, case aid, counseling, employment and nutrition services provided on an ongoing basis through WSES.

If you are interested in submitting a proposal, call Robert Schaffer at WSES at 332-2133.

Crime rate down on "T"

Operation Rainbow, the MBTA'S new anti-crime effort, has reduced robberies on the Orange Line by 60 percent after being in effect for a month, Acting Police Chief Robert Cochrane announced today.

Robberies were also lowered 33 percent systemwide after May 7 when the program was initiated. A Boston man has been sentedced to a year in jail after being apprehended by "Rainbow" officers.

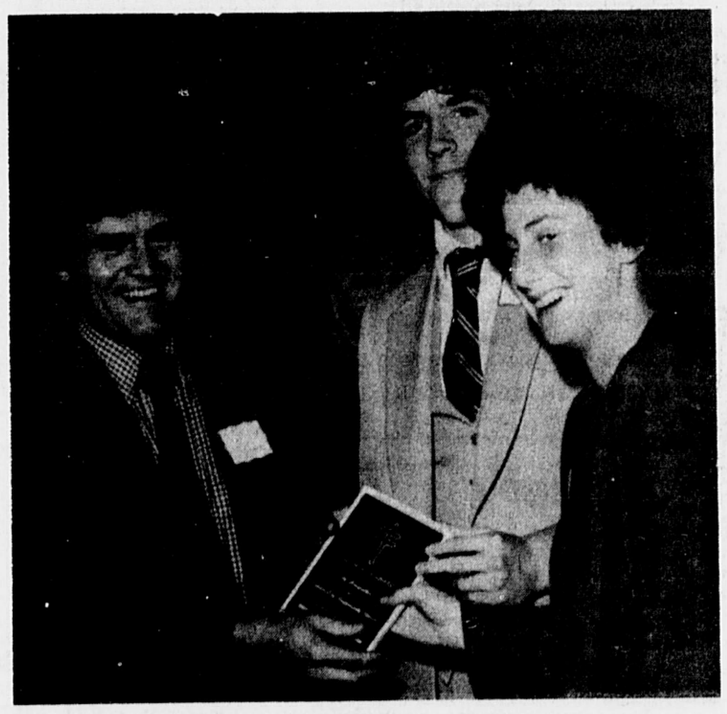

Operation Rainbow places undercover male and female police officers on trains and in stations.

The second phase of Rainbow involves speedy prosecutions by the District Attorney's office and the recommendation for punitive sentencing.

During April, the month previous to the "Rainbow" strategy, there were 37 robberies reported on the Orange Line. During May, robberies were slashed to 15 on the Orange Line and four of those robberies occurred prior to May 7 when Rainbow commenced.

The systemwide robbery count was reduced from 61 in April to 40 in May.

Cochrane said, "Operation Rainbow has been highly effective in reducing crime on the T and making our mass transportation system safer to ride. I am especially pleased with the close cooperation the MBTA has been receiving from District Attorney Flanagan's office and the Boston Police in making this joint effort successful."

Peter F. Donavan

NEWTON — Funeral Services will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in Central Congregational Church, Newtonville for Peter F. Donavan of W. Newton, 91. A retired auditor with the Boston & Albany Railroad, he died Tuesday in Middlesex County Hospital after a long illness.

Born in Springfield, Mr. Donavan had been an auditor for the B & A for more than 50 years. He retired in 1953. He was a longtime member of the Central Congregational Church.

He leaves his wife, Ann (Lanigan); two sons, Peter F. Jr. of Bennington, VT and Dr. Ellis J. Donavan of Needham; two daughters, Janice Meal and Polly Hoover both of West Newton; and 19 grand children and 15 great grand children.

Berniece Huberman

Berniece (Riback) Huberman of Key Biscayne, Fla., a former Newton resident, died Wednesday, June 4.

An alumna of the University of Missouri School of Journalism, she worked in advertising in New York City. After marrying Kenneth Huberman, she joined him in directing two camps in New Hampshire.

While a resident of Newton she was on the board of Temple Shalom and a president of its sisterhood.

After retiring, she was active in mental health organizations.

Mrs. Huberman is survived by her husband; three daughters, Mary Ann Huberman, Marcia Lawler and Sylvia, Scholnick; and three grandchildren.

Margaret Durbano

A funeral mass was to have been celebrated Thursday, June 19, in St. Bernard's Church for Mrs. Margaret L. (Warner) Durbano, 64, of West Newton.

Mrs. Durbano died Monday, June 16, in Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a brief illness. She worked as a school traffic supervisor in Newton for 20 years before retiring.

Wife of the late Robert Durbano, she is survived by her son, Robert, of Shrewsbury; two sisters, Mrs. Anne Cary of Florida and Josephine Warner of Newton; and two grandchildren.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery.

Children's museum helps the deaf

Deaf persons with access to a TDDTTY machine (telecommunications device for the deaf) can now call the Boston Children's Museum directly for information.

The museum recently installed TDD equipment which enables the museum's switchboard operator to talk directly to a TDD user who is deaf or hard of hearing.

Messages are typed on a keyboard and appear at the other end on a digital display screen or on paper.

Museum staff are currently conducting a mafor study of museum access by people who are hadndicapped, and the TDD installation is part of the project, which is funded by a grant from the Massachusetts Developmental Disabilities Council.

"One of the critical problems facing people who are deaf is the difficulty of communicating with the hearing world, " says Janet Kamien, director of the study. "Our new equipment is both a practical and symbolic step to improving their access to the museum."

To use the museum's TDD system, call 426-6500. Users of the new solid state TDDs are asked to depress the space bar when a connection is made with the museum operator. This alerts the operator that a TDD call is in progress.

Newtonite wins competition

Newton North High School's The Newtonite has been named one of the seven winners in a competition on newswriting about the uses and history of energy development in the city.

Articles prepared by Nicki Davis were declared a winner in the competition sponsored by the New England Scholastic Press Association and the Distrigas Corporation.

More than 1100 junior high school and senior high school publications and communication programs were eligible.

Ms. Davis was awarded an electric typewriter, having been selected by her fellow students as the individual making the greatest contribution to the winning entry.

Unitarian membership up 20%

At the 132nd annual meeting of the First Unitarian Society of Newton, on June 10, The Rev. Gerald R. Krick praised the congregation for its efforts.

" In my 20 years in the ministry, I have never before served a church whose members have displayed such energy and commitment," Krick said.

He reported that within the last eight months, the average Sunday morning attendance has increased 26 percent, membership has increased by approximately 20 percent and that pledges have almost doubled over the last year.

Krick, who became the society's minister , in November of 1979, attributes the past year's success to the members. Elections were held. Mellissa Texiera was elected chairwoman of the board of trustees for 1980-1981, replacing Barabara Hayes, who is retiring but will remain as a trustee. Douglas Oesterheld of West Newton was elected vice chairman. The newly elected trustees are Anne Hartman Newtonville, Marion Kaufman of Newton Highlands, Edward Lerner of Waban, Claire Karlson of Newton and Diran Heller of Auburndale. John Pobst of Newton Centre and Billie Sue Sanders of Newton Highlands will remain as trustees.

Other officers elected are Peter Witt of Newtonville, moderator,; Carol Pooler of Newton, clerk; KatherynHolgate of West Newton, treasurer; Henry Whitmore of Auburndale, and Faith Kreider of Newton Centre, assistant treasurers. John Gurry of Newton was re-elected to the boeard of investment, joining Sanford Pooler of Newton and Peter Norstrand of Auburndale.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria
Before leaving on a trip, it is a good idea to take a few precautions. Have the post office hold your mail and discontinue all services such as milk and paper delivery. Notify the police department that you will be away and ask them to drive by the house occasionally. Timers for house lights are a good idea. Have them set to go on and off and make sure that they light alternately. Never have the same lights on each night. Insure that your luggage is properly identified with name and address on each piece.
Proper planning is essentail for a safe, successful and happy sojourn. The key to proper planning is BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner. We are concerned that your mode of time of travel be what you desire; that your accommodations upon arrival are ready and waiting; and that all incidental details along the way happen spontaneously so that your enjoyment and satisfaction are complete. When you travel with us, you never travel alone. Open 9-5:30, Mon.-Fri., 'til 8 Thurs., 9-1 Sat. Tel. 244-8460. All standard credit cards accepted.

Children's exhibit now at main library

A special exhibition of crafts by children is on view at the main library, 414 Center St., now through the end of June. .

The show consists of mobiles, puppets, and recycled art and jewlery. The children also made holiday decorations, papier-mache faces, and drawings. Photographs of childre's programs and creative crafts from fabric are also included in the exihibition.

The artists, between the ages of eight and twelve, created their work during the regularly schedueld programs planned by the children's librarians in the child-ren's rooms of the Newton Free Libraries throughout the city. Marion Bremer, Nonantum Branch librarian, coordinated the exibit.

Art Association presents awards

The members and friends of the Newton Art Association ended the 1980 season by attending their annual dinner, held at the Sidney Hill Country Club.

Awards were presented to those members whose paintings won prizes at the Spring Exhibit, and new officers were elected.

The officers for the 1980-81 season are: President, Frances Merton; Second Vice-President, Joseph Briand; Treasurer, Henry Schoenberg; Assistant Treasurer, Rebecca Stahl; Recording Secretary, Emilie Sheehan; Corresponding Secretary, Beatrice Hurwitz; with Roberta Selleck as Assistant Corresponding Secretary. One-Year Governor will be Leonard Walton, Two-Year Governor will be Sophia Jablonsky, and Eugene Faucher will be Three-Year Governor.

Rosalyn Barron, Past-President, will be on the Board of Governors, and Honorary Member Ruth Palmer will be advisor for the coming year.

The 31st Annual Art Exhibit was held at Bloomingdale's Fashion Store at the Chestnut Hill Mall in April, and the prize-winning artists were presented with their awards during the dinner. The Roy A. Randall Memorial Award was given to: 1st prize, Walter Marks, for oil painting "Will"; 2nd prize, Estelle Mason, for her sculpture "Nubian Head"; 3rd prize, Alfred Garibaldi, for oil painting "Teasels and Thistles". Honorable Mention: Alice Carlston for oil painting "Holly". Honorable Mention: Leonard Walton for oil painting "Splashdown".

The N.A.A. Memorial Fund Award, in memory of Lester Peterson, for best watercolor: 1st prize, Rosalyn Barron, "Destination Unknown"; 2nd prize, Emilie Sheehan "Talland Bay, England". Honorable Mention: Alice Carlston, "Cactus Garden".

The Holly Bowl for Best Winter Scene: 1st prize, Harold Putnam, for oil painting "First Snow". Honorable Mention: Barbara Stackpole, oil painting "After the Storm". Honorable Mention: Robert Davis, for watercolor "A Christmas Card".

The Spring Exhibit was arranged under the leadership of Beatrice Hurwitz, Exhibit Chairperson.

Carol Hsiung, Newton South High, won the $250 scholarship which is given each year by Mary Holzwasser. Carol is entering Cornell University in the Fall, where she plans to major in either Fine Arts or Architecture. The Newton Art Association Scholarship of $300 was given to Andrew Kessler, of Newton South High School, for photography. He will attend the Rhode Island School of Design, and will study Commercial Photography.

This summer's dance program is scheduled in order to provide the flexibility of hours and days needed to accommodate students' summer commitments.

$350,000 to reassess Newton property by '82

NEWTON — The Board of Assessors last night asked for $350,000 to revalue property in the city within two years.

If the Board of Aldermen authorizes the appropriation, and the plan is acceptable to the state Bureau of Local Assessment, new property values will go out with the June, 1982, property tax bills.

The Bureau of Local Assessment has ordered the city to submit a tinetable for revaluation by June 30. During a special meeting of the board Tuesday, Mayor Theodore D. Mann told aldermen City Solicitor Daniel Funk has decided the state agency has the authority to demand the city's compliance.

Bureau Chief Jane Malme told aldermen at a June 11 meeting that if the city's timetable doesn't meet the state deadline for revaluation of property at full and fair cash value the state will hire an appraisal firm on beha,-f of the city and deduct the cost of the work from Newton's state rcimbursement.

By hiring 11 additional workers in the Assessing Departnent, the city will complete a revaluation process in 280 days that was ordered by Superior Court Judge Henry Chmielinski in 1972 as the result of a citizens' suit.

To comply with a recent state law that requires the Bureau of Local Assessment to verify every two years that communities are at full cash value, the Assessing Department will require two additional full-time workers at an annual cost of $60,000.

The board asked the mayor to present a plan to meet the state deadline after Chief Assessor Harold J. Brady said little has been done to update property values in recent years, and after he recommended the city hire a commercial appraisal firm to do a complete revaluation of the community at a cost of as much as $900,000.

Later the mayor said Brady made his comments without fully considering the information that remains from a 1975 revaluation of the city by the firm of Cole, Layer and Trumble (CLT).

Although Brady was at Tuesday's meeting, Mann said Thaddeus D. Jankowski, Jr., the city's other assessor, would be the spokesman for the revaluation program until a program manager is hired. The third spot on the Board of Assessors has been vacant for some time.

When Alderman Mark White asked why Brady wasn't answering the questions, Mann said ',This is just the way they decided to do it."

Brady said he has had more time to study the data, and concludes some of the CLT material is valuable, but he still contends assessors will have to visit every home in the city.

The question of why it has taken the city seven years to get to this point surfaced several times during the discussion. White asked how the city can be revalued in two years when Newton's has successfully argued before Chmielinski for six years that the process should be delayed. The judge has granted four extensions.

Newton loses on cherry sheet

NEWTON — The budgetary impact of reduced local aid and increased assessments from the cherry sheets will mean a loss of more than $1 million for the city, according to Mayor Theodore Mann.

After a preliminary review of the cherry sheet figures yesterday, Mayor Mann said that the reduced local aid and the increase in assessments alone will mean a $3 increase in the city's tax rate.

Mann said city estimates indicate that before collective bargaining there could easily be a $12 - $15 increase in the tax-rate and speculated that the increase could be as high as $20. Mann said,

"There will be a substantial tax-rate increase because of this and inflation."

The key factor in the loss of $1,100,000 for the city from last year's cherry sheet figures are an increase of over 30 percent for both MBTA and county assessments and a 53 percent reduction in receipts from the county for the highway fund, according to city officials.

City Budget Officer David Wilkinson said the increase in MBTA assessments amounts to $750,000; the increase in county assessments amounts to $400,000; and the loss of aid from the highway fund amounts to $270,000.

Mann said, "The state clobbers the city of Newton on the cherry sheets. That is what happened." Mann said the cherry sheet figures are another example of the state dictating "do8 not do as I do, do as I say." Mann said the city did not predict the increased assessments and decrease in local aid and called it "Unprecedented."

Wilkinson stressed that the city is still analyzing the cherry sheet figures and the that they are based on the budget which the Governor must still sign.

The Massachusetts Senate agreed to give Gov. Edward King more time to review the $5.9 billion state budget Monday.

Although King has 10 days to sign the budget it is reported that the legislature will get the budget sometime today.

Wilkinson explained that the cherry sheet figures are still tentative and could change. ' Wilkinson said the city is investigating the figures to see if $12 million from the MBTA is included which the city is presently contesting. Wilkinson said the city is a plaintiff in a suit with several cities and towns

Cable T.V. award challenged

NEWTON — The awarding of Newton's cable television license to Continental Cablevision Inc. will be appealed to the State Cable Commission.

Warner Amex Cable Communications Inc., one of three finalists competing for the Newton license, filed an appeal of Mayor Theodore Mann's decision on a license this week.

Warner charges that the Newton Cable Advisory Commission followed a set of guidelines issued by the State Cable Commission that contain errors of law in reaching its decisions on the nominees and Mayor Mann deviated from the other specifications of the state commission in reaching his final choice for the license.

H.I. Grousbeck, president of Continental Cablevision, said Thursday his firm thinks the Warner appeal "lacks merit and will be denied by the Massachusetts CATV Commission."

"Warner's charge that the mayor of Newton erred in his conduct of the licensing process is unfortunate," Groubsbeck said. "The City of Newton conducted its cable licensing process in a most thorough and conscientious manner and in complete accord with state regulations."

A total of eight firms submitted bids for the Newton CATV license. After a series of meetings and hearings, three were selected as finalists by the Newton Cable Advisory Commission and recommended to Mayor Mann, the licensing authority, for a final determination.

The three were Contintental, Warner and Teleprompter.

On May 19, Mann issued a report declaring Continental the winner.

During proceedings before the Newton Cable Advisory Commission, another of the eight firms in contention, Newton Metrovision, questioned the legality of certain "in-kind benefits" being offered the city by some cable bidders.

Four firms, including the three finalists, offered' over and above cable television service, in-kind benefits such as a $1 million media center, to be paid for by subscribers, from Continental, and $800,000 over 15 years from Warner to help the Newton Free Library system.

On May 2, the State CATV Commission issued an advisory opinion, in response to a request for clarification from Mayor Mann that said, "No prejudice can be attached to the in-kind offers of the three applicants (Newton's three finalists) reviewed herein."

However, in Mayor Mann's report on the awarding of the license, he took great pains throughout to emphasize "in-kind benefits" had not been considered when reviewing the applicants, perhaps in anticipation of a challenge by Newton Metrovision, not a finalist, if he did consider them.

Warner now contends that the cable licensing process is similar to a bidding process, and to eliminate arbitrarily one portion of a bid changes the nature of that bid unfairly.

The State CATV Commission must now set a hearing date for Warner's appeal. Warner has also, in its complaint, retained the option to appeal the state commission's ruling, to state or federal court.

Howard Levine, attorney for Warner Amex, explained Thursday that the company is concerned about clearing up gray areas in licensing guidelines and has challenged the awarding of the Newton license partly with this end in mind.

"This is not sour grapes," Levine said. "The company really feels it has a credible case."

Community Center use of Davis tied to other West Newton needs

NEWTON— The city is presently negotiating with the Newton Community Service Centers (NCSC) to complete the sale of the vacant Davis School.

The Board of Alderman last month asked Mayor Theodore Mann to sell the Davis School to the NCSC for $225,000.

The Mayor shocked aldermen by seeking proposals for the reuse of the building. Under ordinance, details of the sale rest with the Mayor.

Mayor Mann said last week that he will not be "stampeded" into selling the school to the NCSC.

James Hickey, the city's chief administrative officer, said the major point of disagreement with the NCSC is the move of the West Newton Library to the Davis School.

He said, "If the decision is made to sell the building we want to make sure the West Newton Library is included in the existing library space of the school."

Hickey added, "It would be an asset to the city if we were able to sell the existing West Newton Library."

Mayor Mann has confirmed that the city is considering the Davis School or parts of the building as a home for the West Newton Library, the police department, the health department and the community schools program.

Hickey said the city is still considering "all options" for the police station, including an addition and renovation of the department's existing building in West Newton and the possible use of the Davis School.

Hickey said the city is conducting a "general analysis" to determine if the Davis School will meet the needs of the police department.

Police Chief William Quinn has indicated he is interested in the use of the Davis School for the department.

Public Facilities Chairman Richard McGrath said the plans for the $1.3 million addition and renovation of the police ,held and reevaluated" at the department are being ' administration's request.

Recent rumors that the future of the police station, the Davis School, and perhaps the West Newton Library are connected were bolstered last Wednesday when Police Chief Quinn did not appear before the public facilities committee to argue for the addition.

McGrath believes the administration will request funds to hire a consultant to assess the needs of the police department. .. The sale of the West Newton Library land would return

. the parcel to the tax rolls. The Mayor estimated that the land is worth $250,000. n

If the police department moved from its Washington Street building next to the Courthouse. That building might become a professional office building, the Mayor said.

At one time it was proposed that the court use the Davis School as an annex but that plan wasvetoed by the state, according to the Mayor.

The Mayor has indicated that he wants a larger portion of the Davis School for city use. The agreement for the sale of the School drafted by the Board of Aldermen called for the

Reaching across the language barrier

When 19-year-old Xoumoua Mouacheupao, a recent graduate of Newton South High School, arrived in Newton, she was a frightened Southeast Asian refugee who spoke no English, knew no written language, and had no contact with modern society.

But after attending South High School for three years, where she was taught to speak, read, and write English as well as adjust to a new environment by her teacher and friend Marcia Ratner, she is no longer a frightened refugee.

For nearly all her life, Xoumoua, now known as Sue, lived on the family farm in northern Laos where she farmed corn and rice, worked in the fields weeding and made long, traditional skirts.

Sue had never been to school, or seen a shopping mall or highway. The closest marketplace was several miles away. Sue led a peaceful, agrarian life.

But it changed dramatically when communist soldiers overran Sue's village, killed her father when he refused to leave, and forced the other members of Sue's family to leave.

After walking for weeks through dangerous terrain, jungles, and mountains, always fearing that they would meet Viet Cong soldiers, Sue's family arrived in Thailand, free.

Her family spent 18 months in a refugee camp before they were sponsored by the Baptist Church in Newton Centre and journeyed to Newton.

Sue, who married a Laotian man several weeks ago and now lives in New Jersey, was taken to South High School after one year at the International Institute in Boston. At the high school, she was introduced to Ratner, who teaches English as a second language.

Says Ratner of her first meeting with Sue, " When she came into my office, she looked numb with fear."

Sue still spoke no English, according to Ratner. Sue and Ratner first communicated through pictures before using the English language, said Ratner, who does not speak a second language herself.

"I spent one classroom period with her each day, one more regular period, and also spent a lot of time with her independently," says Ratner. "There was just so much this girl had to learn."

Ratner took Sue to drugstores, supermarkets, department stores, and banks. "She had to learn what she could buy in a drugstore, for instance," Ratner says. She also taught Sue the use of banks, which Ratner was anxious to do since another refugee family she knew was robbed of their savings which had been hidden under a mattress.

Sue and Ratner visited museums, libraries, restaurants, and shopping malls. Sue learned to use public transportation, how to find books in a library, and how and what to shop for in stores.

"One time I took her back to my house and taught her to use a vacuum cleaner, broom, and mop. I thought that was important, too," says Ratner.

Ratner helped Sue with all her studies by translating text books into simple English. Sue learned quickly.

"Her motivation to learn is enormous. In three years she has been able to compress aspects of 12 years of education," says Ratner.

Although Sue had become an excellent student who was deeply involved in school, particularly through the international club, there were still signs of the girl who had learned to withstand so much pain and hardship. One Friday afternoon, Sue had fallen on a patch of ice, striking her neck and seriously injuring herself. Although she was in pain, she did not tell anyone, according to Ratner.

When she came in to school the next Monday, Sue was still in pain, and Ratner took her to Newton-Wellesley Hospital. The pain was diagnosed as a bruised neck, with injury to the vocal chords as well.

"It was in her background to act this way," says Ratner. Sue is a member of the Hmong tribe, who, according to Ratner, are reputed to be very strong people. There is a saying, she adds, that Hmong people are too tough to cry. "She is a very happy person, always a smile on her face."

"Sue loved to learn," says Ratner, whose undergraduate degree is in English and speech and hearing therapy and whose master's degree is in speech and hearing therapy. She recalls Sue's amazement when she learned that the earth was round and that there were oceans, and the first time she saw Laos on a map. "All she really knew was farming and sewing," says Ratner.

Edward Richmond.

Newton maps open space

NEWTON — The Planning Department has a draft Open Space Plan that includes a five-year projection of improvements and acquisitions throughout the city.

Conservation Commission Executive Secretary Helen Heyn said the plan has been expected for six years and it must be submitted to the state Division of Conservation Services by this summer to avoid funding problems.

Missing from the 140-page document are recommendations on parcels larger than 20 acres, such as golf courses and larger wetlands. It is not known when the information on the large parcels will be available.

Land acquisition proposed for next year includes 9.7 acres on Staniford Street; more that 3 acres of Temple Beth Avodah land on the south side of Saw Mill Brook; 4 acres bordering the Charles River in Upper Fallo; and more than 21 acres on Winchester Street bordering South Meadow Brook. Another large acquisition, 14.5 acres of Mt. Benedict Cemetery land bordering Saw Mill Brook is proposed for 1983.

The five-year plan calls for conservation restrictions on 21 other spots throughout the city including a restriction to assure permanent public access to Hammond Pond.

Other sections of the plan propose the dredging of Silver Lake, Bullough's Pond and the City Hall ponds, the development of passive recreation in conservation areas, completion of the southside relief sewer infiltration study and improved catch basis maintenance.

Some of the active recreation recommendations include improvements to the Crystal Lake swimming area, preparation of the Novitiate land for use as a public park, and development of ball courts at Cold Spring Park.

Improvements are proposed for Hunnewell Playground, Allison Park, Winchester Street Park, Richardson Playground, Brewer Playground, Joseph Lee Playground, and additional tennis courts are planned for Meadowbrook Playground.

Cabot Park is scheduled for lighting in 1984, and development of playground and playfield facilities at the old city dump site on Pine Street is scheduled for 1981.

Some of the passive recreation projects for the next five years include construction of a Charles River Pathway and acquisition by the city of some necessary easements.

Neighbors oppose cemetery growth

NEWTON — The Community Development Authority will go ahead with plans to demolish two Grove Street houses but the future of the land remains undecided.

to extend its cemetery by purchasing the 5,615-square-foot lot from the authority.

But some neighbors object to extending the cemetery and support sale of the land to Lynn and Michael Rosbash, a direct abutter on Grove Street. Rosbash claims the land will be landscaped and maintained by neighbors.

A compromise seemed possible last week that would see the church acquire the property but with a number of conditions acceptable to neighbors, but disagreement over the distance of the setback blocked progress.

Authority Chairman Barry Canner suggested restricting the sale of graves for 20 years, limiting the lot to 100 graves, and requiring flat markers and a four-foot hedge.

The Planning and Development Board, which must vote on the sale of the land, was deadlocked when Chairman Margaret Smith broke the tie and postponed the sale.

Planning Board member David Lurenski said at one point he thought the compromise would be acceptable but that the church was not willing to agree to the 17-foot setback from the street requested by neighbors. The church was willing to accept a 10-foot setback.

Another vote on the controversial item is not planned, and Lurenski suggested the church and the neighbors will have to get together and try to reach an agreement on their own.

There are reportedly between 10 and 13 families in the area who oppose the sale of the land to the church.

Newton woman a victim of elderly abuse

NEWTON — An 81-year-old woman recently became a victim.

She was not the victim of a thief or a mugger, but was reportedly the victim of a young, professional woman she employed due to a heart ailment.

The woman, whose name is being withheld by police for her own protection, was allegedly the victim of elderly abuse, a growing problem in the state and country.

Human service officials throughout the country are becoming increasingly aware of physical and verbal abuse, neglect and exploitation of senior citizens, often by their own families.

A state official said the elderly are abused in 85 percent of the case by a family member or a friend and that abuse occurs 75 percent of the time in their homes or places of residence.

Officials also noted that the instances of abuse tend to be recurring.

City Director of Human Services Howard Lipton said there have only been six reported cases of elderly abuse in Newton in the past year.

However, Lipton explained, there are many case that go unreported.

Lipton said there are limited services that can be provided, adding the situation can often be abated by providing a homemaker to help care for the senior citizen.

Lipton stressed that counseling is also very important.

"We must get people to recognize the problem," he said.

In a survey conducted by Legal Research and Services for the Elderly, funded by the state Department of Elder Affairs, 55 percent of respondents said they had seen a case of elderly abuse.

Fairlie Dalton, a spokeswoman for the organization, located in Boston, said people who encountered elderly abuse most frequently were homecare professionals and visiting nurses.

Ms. Dalton said, "We are trying to get the message out that the elderly do not need to take this abuse."

She said many senior citizens are ashamed and afraid to say they are abused. Less than 25 percent of the cases were reported by the senior citizen involved, she noted, because the senior citizen fears retaliation from a relative who is the caretaker.

In addition, the survey showed that in 75 percent of the cases the abuser was experiencing some kind of stress; often financial burdens and other constraints with regard to care of the senior citizen involved.

Ms. Dalton said in one case a family was going away for a weekend and tied the senior citizen to the bed.

A senior citizen's best chance for help is passage of Senate Bill No. 2162, which was filed earlier this year by State Rep. David Mofenson (D-Newton), State Sen. Jack Backman (D-Newton-Brookline) and State Sen. John King (D-Danvers), Ms. Dalton said.

The legislation would provide counseling and services for abused senior citizens and make it mandatory for physicians and other professionals who recognize the problem to report it to the Department of Elder Affairs.

In , the bill would help protect senior citizens in long-term-care nursing homes. Myrna Malec, an aide to Rep. Mofenson, who helped work on the legislation, said, "I think we have seen only the tip of the iceberg on this problem." Ms. Malec pointed out that with more publicity, it will become apparent the problem is widespread. According to statistics, 500,000 elder persons are being abused in the United States each year. Officials urged senior citizens to contact the Department of Elder Affairs, or a local agency, if they believe they are subject to abuse, neglect or exploitation. —S. Burke

YMCA camp on target

EAST BROOKFIELD — Evidence that the West Suburban YMCA's Camp Frank A. Day is on target in its on-going efforts to maintain and even improve the quality of its services comes from a just completed evaluation conducted by the Y, Sid Krasnoo, Chairman of the Camp Day Committee said today. The exhaustive study covered every aspect of camp operations.

Camp Day is a coed resident camp for youngsters 7-14 owned and operated by the West Suburban Y. Located in East Brookfield, Ma. on beautiful Lake Quacumquasit, Camp Day is a place that jumps with action, excitement, and fun.

The Y used the new National YMCA Camping Standards as a yardstick in measuring the present performance of its camp. "As a result, Camp Day will be placed on the 1979 national listing of YMCA Day, Resident, and Travel Camps having completed the tough self evaluation process," Krasnoo said.

Among the areas studied were camp administration, personnel, program, health, safety, campsite, facilities, equipment, transportation, and sanitation.

Richard McKnight, Director of Camp Day, indicated the New National YMCA Camping Standards used by local Ys to measure performance were developed by the YMCA National Board's Camp Standards Revision Committee, which drew heavily on the skills and experience of camp directors across the country in designing the process.

51 right-on-red signs come down

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen has approved a Traffic Committee recommendation that signs prohibiting right turns on red be removed from the majority of the city's intersections.

Of the 57 intersections where RTOR is prohibited, 51 signs will be removed. Signs will be left at six intersections where it would be dangerous and confusing for both drivers and pedestrians, according to city traffic engineer David Tannozzini.

The traffic committee originally suggested that four intersections be excluded from the proposal, though the Board of Aldermen added more to the list: Waverly Ave. at Kendrick St. and Woodward St. at Chestnut St.

The four intersections proposed by the committee to be excluded are: Wachuset Rd., northbound on Commonwealth Ave.; Homer St., westbound at Walnut St.; Park St., northeast-bound at Centre St.; and Stuart Rd. at Waverly Ave.

Discussion on the proposal began in March when the Massachusetts Department of Public Works (DPW) changed its standards regarding the RTOR Ordinance, according to Tannozzini. "The DPW left the decision up to the aldermen," Tannozzini said.

The committee futher recomnended that the changes take place during the summer of 1980 so the police department would have ample time to educate children on crossing at the intersections.

The main argument of the proposal is that there is a lack of uniformity in having some intersections with signs prohibiting RTOR and other intersections where it is not prohibited. "Drivers have to make too many decisions when they come to an intersection," Tannozzini said.

The police department has already educated children throughout the city on the new ordinance, according to Officer Robert Braceland. Braceland visited all the private and public schools in the city three months ago, when the police department first heard that the DPW was changing its standards.

Braceland said he does not anticipate safety problems. "All the other states in the country have it and it doesn't cause any problems," Braceland said.

Robert Sandman, chairman of the Newton Energy Conmission, spoke in favor of the proposal, noting that the commission would support the measure because it would be a step towards energy conservation.

Upper Falls restaurant plan fails

UPPER FALLS — Plans for a restaurant in the long-vacant building at the intersection of Chestnut and Oak streets have been abandoned.

Boston restauranteur John Polcari Jr., who hoped to open a pizzeria there, has withdrawn his request for a special permit to waive parking requirements.

A 70-seat restuarant would be allowed by right, but Polcari sought permission for a 92-seat restaurant.

Insufficient parking was the primary concern of residents during a series of recent public meetings.

Some involved in the discussions said Polcari had not anticipated opposition and decided to withdraw when neighbors appeared unhappy with his plan.

Polcari had entered into an agreement with developer Jack Antaramian who has built townhouses nearby and who plans a four-story office building on an adjacent parcel.

The pllan called for the restaurant to use 31 sparking spaces behind the office building.

MBTA tracks separated the proposed restaurant from its parking area, and some area residents contended the spaces would not be used because of the length of the walk to the restaurant.

Antaramian also offered to blacktop land to be leased from the MBTA for additional parking.

Deadline set for school reuse report

NEWTON — The School Committee requested a report for the potential reuse of three north-side junior high schools and several elmentary schools.

The committee unanimously approved the request for a formal report from the Planning Department and set Oct. 1 as the deadline for the report.

The elementary schools that will be involved in the study along with the three north-side junior high schools are Cabot School, Claflin School, Zervas School and Mason-Rice School.

School Committee member Howard Spergel of Ward 1 speculated that it is likely that by 1983 at least one of the schools will be forced to close because of declining enrollment.

Spergel said, "What we are doing now is getting an early examination of the options if any of the schools are closed."

Evaluations help teachers, administrators do better

NEWTON — The School Department's tenured staff evaluations are helping teachers and administrators to do a better job,

This is the message Hope Danielson, assistant superintendent for personnel for the department, gave to the School Committee Monday night.

Ms. Danielson said that as a result of the evaluation process, which was implemented in 1975, the strength and weaknesses of the professional staff are being more clearly defined.

The evaluation is not related to declining enrollment or a reduction in personnel but is solely to determine the needs of the staff in the area of professional development, according to school officials'

Two years ago 133 members of the staff participated in the evaluation, while this year 164 participated.

Ms. Danielson said that approximately 90 percent of the tenured staff who were evaluated and responded felt that the evaluation process was helpful.

Mowever, she pointed out that many staff members felt that the evaluations would be more effective if the"evaluation had been more closely followed."

During the staff evaluations the supervisor works with the staff member to evaluate performance and to identify strengths and weaknesses. The staff member is given a copy of the criteria to be used in the evaluation.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink stressed that the evaluations are intended "as a vehicle for communication."

Fink said,"One of the things we have been very much concerned with is that it is not viewed as a punitive evaluation, but one that brings people together."

Fink added, "We are trying to create a climate where people are not fearful of the evaluations." Fink said that the evaluations are essential for a continued improvement of the city's educational program and assured School Committee members that negative evaluations are "follOwed up on." School Comnittee member Honora Kaplan questioned the viability and impact of the evaluations asking if they "really affect change?" Fink responded by enphasizing that the primary focus of the evaluations is to help teachers and administrators improve.

Fink, who is evaluating nine principals this year, also revealed that members of his central staff have not been evaluated in the past two years, noting that given "limited resources" it is more important to spend his time evaluating principals.

Fink said he meets regularly and has consistent contact with his central staff.

School Committee Chairwoman Ann Berwick said the purpose of the evaluations "is to help people improve skills and nothing more or less than that,"

In another action the committee transfered $277,000 for METCO reimbursement for regular class tuitions to the city.

METCO is a one-way voluntary busing program through which black and other minority school children are able to attend suburban schools. It is funded by the state,

Norman Colb, assistant superintendent of programs, also reported to the committee on the work of the 12 curriculum advisory committees which were established in the fall.

The committees, which are made up of students, experts and interested citizens and teachers, assist in reviewing current issues in the different disciplines taught in city schools.

Colb said, "My general sense is that the committees spent most of the time learning who they were and defining goals." evaluations, burke, levant 444

Colb said he is encouraged by the work of the cOmmittees and expects them to demonstrate their "solid importance next year."

The committee voted 6 to 0 to go into executive session at 10:30 p,m. to discuss negotiations for the contract with the city's teachers.

'Dial-an-Atheist' comes to Newton

NEWTON — Literature publicizing the group American Atheists, of Stoughton, and listing a telephone number for "Dial-an-Atheist'., was distributed in the Newton Centre municipal parking lot this week.

Police Department spokesmen said no permit is required to disseminate the material. Community Services Officer William Sheehan said "It's a free country."

The News-Tribune received several phone calls from shocked residents.

"I don't want to come out to my car and find something iike this," said one woman accompanied by children.

"I don't want my children to see this type of thing.

"I try to brinq my children up with a sense of religion and then to find something like this...." said the women who preferred not to be identified. "How can they do this, she asked."

A male caller said he was stunned to find the literature attached to his car which was parked this week in the municipal lot. "I was shocked. I've never seen anything like this," he said.

Several residents were confused about the oriqin of the literature, some of vhich carried the words "press release." Some thought this meant the flyers were somehow sponsored by a nevspaper.

It was explained that a "press release" is information that is given to the press media for possible publication. The atheists' material is in no way connected with a local newspaper.

Carter wins Maine toss

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — A coin toss gave Maine forces for President Carter the state's only seat on the Democratic Party's national platform committee. But the seatholder broke with the president on several key issues.

Retiring House Majority Leader James E. Tierney, D-Lisbon Falls, said Wednesday, "Carter was allowed a certain number of slots and Kennedy a certain number of slots.

"Unless I felt very strongly about something, I deferred to the president's position," he said.

But Tierney felt strongly against funding for the president's $32 billion MX mobile missile system, which narrowly survived a committee vote.

And he supported a moratorium on new nuclear power plants, a plank proposed by supporters of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass, that made it into the platform.

Among the president's views Tierney voted for was opposition to wage and price controls, as proposed by Kennedy.

Carter and Kennedy both received 11 national convention delegates from Maine. Gov. Joseph E. Brennan, the nation's only governor to back Kennedy, is chairman of the Maine delegation.

Maine was allotted one seat on the platform, rules and credentials committees.

Priority bills on King's list

Since the legislative leadership is now pushing for a windup before the July 4 holiday, the rush is on to obtain priority for favored bills. Gov. King has made it known that he has ticketed eight measures for affirmative treatment.

MBTA reorganization has to be well out front. If the two houses agree on a bill that greatly bolsters management rights, shifts more of the deficit burden to the state to prevent service cutbacks, and puts more budget control in the hands of the Advisory Board, count us with the governor on enactment.

Relating the allocations of deficit to local service makes considerable sense. It could discourage a trend toward the establishment of community self-service bus lines, either by expanding on school bus use or by buying mini-buses.

There is merit in several anti-crime proposals which bear the administration imprimatur. A $19 million capital outlay program for construction projects at correctional institutions, including Walpole and Concord, is sorely needed. Substandard conditions and congestion are breeders of prison violence.

Stiffer penalties for auto thefts already have been endorsed in this space.

King's secretary of public safety, George A. Luciano, is working hard for passage of House Bill 6652, which would provide mandatory terms of imprisonment for major drug traffickers, habitual drug violators, and distributors of dangerous drugs to minors. Jail terms are prescribed on the basis of quantities possessed as well as the kind. Passage could be a telling blow against organized crime.

Condo bill dies

Those communities dragging feet on local ordinances controlling condominium conversions on the chance that a statewide law might be enacted have reason to be disappointed. A model bill will die this session, the House leadership has decreed.

Tenant advocates scored a victory in the rebuff. They felt it would be of no help to low and moderate income renters, principally because it could weaken strong condo laws affording a lot of protection against landlords in Cambridge and Brookline.

Community Development Director Byron Matthews, former Newburyport mayor, drafted the legislation. He agreed with real estate organizations which felt it represented a "healthy start toward establishing uniform, statewide standards."

Along with prohibiting eviction of elderly tenants, the proposed law would require 12-month notice to low and moderate income tenants and all others six months; first refusal on units to existing tenants; permit requirements in cities and towns with more than 10 percent conversions of units.

Sounded pretty sensible. Secretary Matthews should carry the fight into the next annual session.

Capitol Hill Highlights

Nuclear safeguards need a watchdog

WASHINGTON, D.C. — At his inauguration, President Carter pledged to work towards the elimination of nuclear weapons world-wide. Soon after taking office he imposed strict limits on the sale of atomic fuels and wastes. But now it appears he has abandoned this position.

A few days ago the president agreed to sell 38 tons of enriched uranium to India, a country that in 1974 exploded a nuclear device and added a chilling new dimension to that area's traditional rivalries. His decision overruled an unanimous vote of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. The National Security Council and the Council on Environmental Quality also opposed the sale.

Congress now has 60 days to stop the transfer of the enriched uranium to India. I have already cosponsored a Resolution of Disapproval which I hope will have wide support in the House. We must prove to the nations of the world that the United States is serious about nuclear safeguards and non—proliferation.

If this sale goes through, our efforts to discourage other countries such as Pakistan from developing nuclear weapons will be substantially weakened.

Petroleum Reserves

After the Arab oil embargo of 1973, Congress created a Strategic Petroleum Reserve, or SPR, within the continental United States. The purpose of this reserve was threefold: first, to discourage foreign nations from using the "oil weapon" and cutting off oil; second to give America enough oil to withstand such an embargo for at least a few months; and third, to prevent price gouging during emergencies through partial control of the crude oil market.

However, due to pressure from Saudi Arabia, and the administration's efforts to balance the budget, efforts to build the reserve stopped last year. Many of us in the Congress believe that the SPR represents our greatest protection against future OPEC blackmail, and so House and Senate conferees have added to the Synthetic Fuels Bill language instructing the president to continue building the reserve.

I will be voting in favor of the SPR when it comes before the House, and will fight any administration efforts to remove this provision from the Synthetic Fuel Bill.

Social Security

For years I have opposed the Social Security earnings limitation which says that Social Security recipients lose $1 for every $2 they earn above the $5,000 limit. This limit removes useful people from our workforce, and lowers our nation's productivity. It also discriminates against the elderly poor, since people receiving unearned income from stocks, bonds, and pension plans are not penalized.

As a cosponsor of legislation to do away with the earnings limitation entirely, I am pleased that an Aging Subcommittee, on which I serve, will hold hearings on the subject this week.

I am confident that the evidence developed at this hearing will move the Congress towards elimination of this unjust, counter-productive limit on the earnings of older Americans.

Toxic Waste

At Love Canal, N.Y., nassive health problems, including chromosomal damage, have been linked to chemical waste buried beneath homes. Even after the danger was revealed, some families were required to stay on in their contaminated homes while all sides fought over who was to blame. It is clear that the ultimate financial burden for health costs and relocation of these victims should fall on the polluter.

In answer to this problem, I have joined in sponsoring a bill to give the Environmental Protection Agency the power to declare a Hazardous Substance Emergency, and empower the federal government to take the immediate steps necessary to protect the public. The bill would provide for relocation of victims, medical treatment, and financial conpensation to those victims whose income is disrupted.

The bill would also provide the government the right to sue the polluting company to regain the costs that the company is found responsible for.

Love Canal, unfortunately, is not an isolated incident. There are 50,000 other chemical dumps nationwide. We must be ready to protect other families whose health and lives may be in danger.

..Congressman Drinan represents the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Newton.

Sympathy for Anderson

THE SARGENT VIEW
by Frank Sargent

The carter White House doesn't admit it is involved, claiming that the effort to keep Anderson off the ballot is the work of the Democratic National Committee.

Anyone who believes the DNC is acting without White House support also believes in the Easter Bunny and tooth fairy. It's the White House, all right, whatever mask it's wearing.

And no wonder the Carter people want Anderson off the ballot in key industrial states: every vote for Anderson is probably a vote that would otherwise go to Jimmy Carter, even though Anderson has been a Republican. There's no reason to think Anderson supporters would be going for Ronald Reagan, who is too conservative and "over the hill" for their taste.

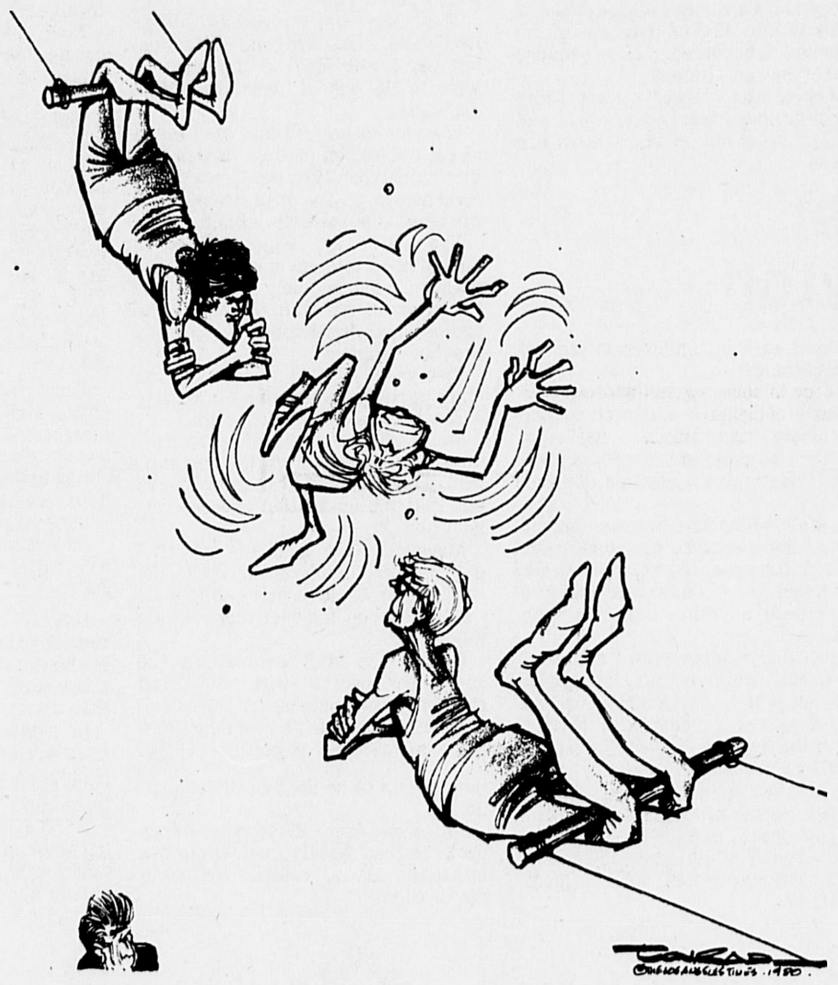

But Carter's critical choice comes down to this: should he try to block John Anderson if he's not positive he can win?

To make the fight and lose will give Anderson a bigger boost than Anderson can give himself.

It works this way...

Knocking Anderson off the ballot in key states would be a big plus for Carter because there'd be no leakage of Carter votes in Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New York, and other states that a Democrat needs to offset Republican strength in the mid-and far West.

But trying to knock Anderson off the ballot and failing will make Anderson more important than he is now. Evidence comes right out of the Anderson camp. David Garth, an Anderson adviser, commenting on Carter efforts to block Anderson, says, "I think what they are doing is terrific."

Why? Because an all-out effort to deny Anderson a place on the ballot creates sympathy for him, calls great attention to his campaign, raises his visibility in a way his own relatively small campaign war chest could not. In a sense, every knock from Carter is a boost for Anderson because it makes it look like Carter is afraid of him, and if the President is that worried about Anderson, he must be a real threat.

Or. as Republican strategist John Sears puts it, "Anderson is in a position where he cannot assist his political standing as much as others can do it for him." And that's just what's happening if the Carter forces wage war to keep Anderson off the ballot. When news leaked that the Demorcratic National Committee had budgeted nearly a quarter of a million dollars to keep Anderson off a number of state ballots, sympathy, money, and public attention started going to Anderson.

Jimmy Carter, along with all his other problems, must sit in the White House these nights and focus on the question: Unless I'm sure I can win this fight against John Anderson, should I get into it at all—because if I lose, I've done Anderson more good than harm.

It's a tough political call for the President to make.

Man can snap back still

Commentary
by Don Graff

A recent brief report from the Mount St. Helens area is in a way more dramatic than the eruptions that are keeping that particular big story on the front pages.

Even as the volcano continues to blow its top, life insists upon returning to its slopes. Vegetation, a National Forest Service biologist reports, is poking up through the ashes.

The survivors are perennial plants that had not yet emerged from winter dormancy at the time of the initial eruptions. Also some hardy varieties that lost their tops but had deep enough, and thus protected, roots to enable them to make a comeback. It is possible that if the agitated peak gets it all out of its system shortly, the area will be green again — admittedly a weedy green for the most part — by the end of summer.

More, returning animal life should not be far behind the plants. Tracks are already being spotted.

Welcome and reassuring news. Apparently there is no disaster so cataclysmic that nature, which includes man, cannot snap back.

And that, if we're lucky, might even include the current presidential campaign.

A too-popular attraction

China has a wall problem.

Not breaking down the political one that for so long separated it from the rest of the world, but keeping a physical one.

The Great Wall.

The 31,000-mile (with all its twists and turns) wonder that has defied armies for a millenium is in danger of succumbing to an unorganized but relentless contemporary horde among whom tourists are prominent.

Xinhua, the official news agency, reports they are carting off sections of the wall brick by brick as souvenirs. Even worse are the depredations of local farmers who are quarrying the historic structure for their own construction purposes, in some cases to make pig pens.

At one point not far from Peking the wall has come under particularly determined attack with some entrepreneurs moving in with bulldozers and tractors to speed demolition along more efficiently.

It's a serious problem for the history-conscious Chinese, one that the West can fully sympathize with. One that may also have some application to Chinese reservations about importing too much from that same West in today's headlong rush to modernize the nation.

If that's free enterprise, it's understandable why they don't much care for it.

But what does it get to a gallon?

The Wall Street Journal, as legions of devoted readers well know, is a gold mine of fascinating information on our times and lifestyles.

And not all of the nuggets are in the news columns.

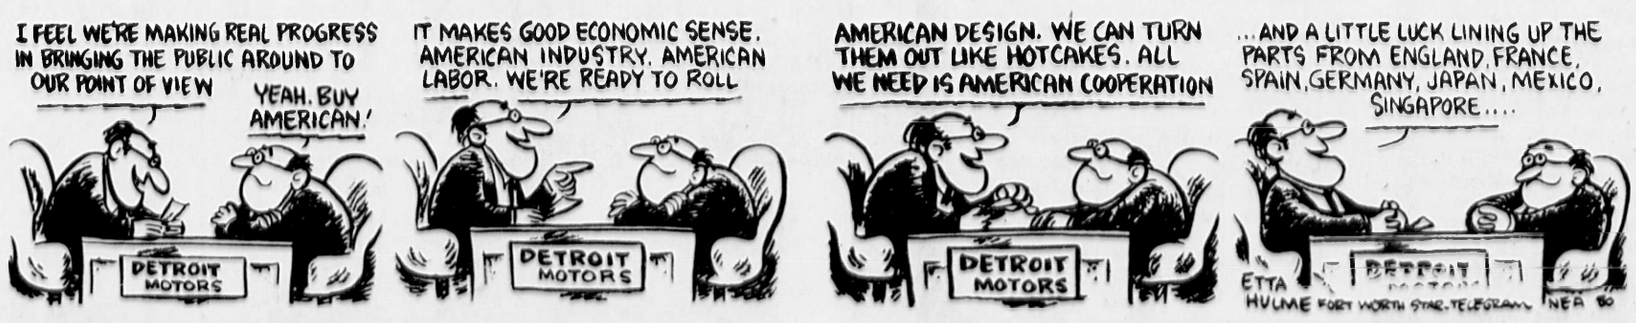

Take the auto advertisement that appeared in a recent edition. It is not just any old set of wheels being pushed to the Journal's readership but a "VIP Security Sedan" that is both bullet and bomb proof. And that's far from all.

Special features include a remote ignition, effective up to a quarter-mile distance, to provide safety against any explosive devices that business competitors of the VIP owner might be inclined to plant in the vehicle. Also a "kidnap recovery system" to track down an abducted passenger and — are you with us, 007? — an "oil slick emission device to deter vehicles in pursuit."

Not to mention a device to detect electronic bugs, recording and emergency communication systems, ram bumpers and a hidden escape vehicle.

Well!

And here, in these geared-down, energy-short times, we've been wondering if we could make do without air co

Remember Mary Lou

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, May 28, Mary Lou O'Halloran was laid to rest in Newton Cemetery after a 5-and-one-half year fight against cancer.

Please print this wonderful tribute to Mary Lou, written by her brother, Michael Coen of Billerica.

Thank you.

Mary Lou's friends.

Dear Lord, let us never forget the memory of Mary Lou O'Halloran.

Mary Lou touched so many people in so many ways. She seemed to attract friends from all walks of life.

The reason was simple: She loved people. She cared about their lives and they soon cared about hers. Mary Lou loved life, and knew how to enjoy it.

She did more living in 45 years than most of us will do in a lifetime. Some people go through life and all they see is crime, corruption and hatred. She could see beyond that. She could see love.

She could see the beauty that nature has bestowed on us. She could see that people had more to offer than what you read in the daily news.

Mary Lou always enjoyed a challenge. Whether it be sports or politics or life itself. She just met her biggest challenge of all, and it took 5 and a half years to decide the victor.

Her challenge was cancer, a disease .that kept her in its grip and wouldn't let go. Mary Lou could not defeat this dreadful disease, but she was not defeated by it either. She showed us courage that comes from within.

An inner strength that never showed us the pain she had inside. An inner strength that is not developed by lifting weights or exercising or running a mile a day. Her inner strength was an example to us all that cancer can be defeated. .

Life is not to be measured in how long you live, but how you live it. Mary Lou lived it to the end. She had the courage to face this final challenge head-on.

She never ran to her many friends for help, but they came to her. Some brought food, some provided transportation and some just came with love and concern. One did all of this and more — her sister Jeanne. She was always there with support, understanding and love.

Dear Lord, never let us forget the memory of Mary Lou and let her be an example for those she has left behind. Have mercy on all of us, but never forget the one named Mary Lou O'Halloran.

Transportation cited as biggest problem for elderly

WEST NEWTON — At two senior forums in late May, over 200 elders from the towns of Belmont, Brookline, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Watertown, Wellesley and Weston gathered to vote on the 10 greatest needs in the area.

The ballots are now tallied. The results show transportation, especially for medical appointments, shopping, and other chores, to be the biggest need by far, with 1,449 points.

In second place, with 699 points is housing for elders with low rents, rent control, alternative housing arrangements and just more housing units being the major concerns.

More affordable medical care is the third greatest need with 599 points. Better coverage by Medicare and national health insurance were the major concerns expressed.

The remainder of the 10 greatest needs as voted by the elders attending the forums were: security, 527 pts.; more personal care-home care, 484 pts.; more group recreational activities, 289 pts.; tax breaks for elders, 278 pts.; better services for the handicapped, 261 pts.; more information and referral, 229 pts.; more visitors to shut-ins, 182 points.

The senior forums were sponsored jointly by West Suburban Elder Services (WSES) and the local councils on aging. The results of the vote will help determine where WSES uses its resources in serving elders. Also, these results will go to the Department of Elder Affairs as one of the first steps in preparing for the White House Conference on Aging scheduled for December 1981.

WSES plans to continue its efforts in this area with future senior forums devoted to the needs which were voted on. For further information, call Robert Schaeffer or Susan Goodman at WSES, 969-0170.

Gratitude

To the Editor:

A few weeks ago I was traveling with a friend trying to find a restaurant in Newton. Our map was of no help, and we felt quite lost until we found ourselves in front of the Newton police station.

I went in and asked for directions. There, I was treated with the utmost of courtesy and assistance.

We want to express our appreciation and let people in the area know that their Police Department plays a positive role in promoting good community relations.

Grateful Women,
Warner, N.H.

LICK INFLATION

Helpful

To the Editor:

I feel we, as a community, owe a big debt of gratitude to the truly dedicated nurses and hospital personnel who cared enough to cross the picket line and keep our hospital operating.

It took their strong convictions and courage to daily run the gamut of verbal abuses, insults and personal threats.

We are very fortunate to have such a quality community hospital and hope none of these events will affect its future quality care.

Revaluation

Mann said the delay has been a benefit to those who would be most hurt by a revaluation, the poor, the elderly and the handicapped. He said the passage of the Classification Amendment that allows assessment by category has softened the impact of revaluation.

The mayor emphasized it was the Board of Aldermen that had passed a resolution urging him to go to court and push for delays.

Some aldermen had other recollections. Richard McGrath, after noting the oldest member of the "administrative family" at the meeting was Fenk who has been with the city for four years, said the mayor has made no attempt to deal with the revaluation problem.

The administration decided revaluation was not a good idea, McGrath contends, after hundreds of residents came to Cith Hall to contest CLT values. The CLT program was "rammed down our throat," he claimed, adding the city is again "under the gun."

The mayor said McGrath's comments were "unproductive hogwash" and suggested "look at the whole litany and let the voters decide who's to blame for it."

Former assessors and the mayor have said information on property has been updated but that the information has not been transferred to the CLT cards. Mann said Monday the information can be retrieved and that it will be in a form compatible with city computers.

Several aldermen criticized the administration for not providing more information about the revaluation plan, and not providing any written material.

The board has asked the mayor to submit to the board the plan that will be submitted to the state sometime before July 9, although Mann said "you have a plan before you right now.', Alderman Robert Gaynor was especially concerned about the lack of details. He asked Funk if he could defend the plan in court.

The city solicitor said "I don't really see that as an issue right now." Funk said if the state approves the plan "that's the end of it."

Gaynor said he lacked confidence in the Assessing Department to go forward with the plan, and he said Jankowski's comment that the city was seeking guidance from the state was "absurd" after a delay of eight years.

Under the schedule outlined Tuesday assessors would begin to collect information in More September and would complete the process in March, 1982. The process essentially allows one month for taxpayer hearings before the new values go out with the tax bills.

Community Schools

NEWTON — Preliminary negotiations are underway for integrating the popular and successful Community Schools program with the School Department.

Principal funding for the program is now shared between city government and the School Department.

Members of the Human Services Committee that oversees the program are supportive but want assurances the program through a merger will not sacrifice its grassroots aspect, its creativity and its emphaeis on volunteerism.

At a committee meetinq Wednesday, Community Schools Commission member Dr. Edward Landy said negotiations are still in an exploratory stage and that even if the concept is approved by the mayor, the Board of Aldermen and the School Committee, the Community Schools Council may decide to maintain its independence.

A primary concern is that the program maintain its autonomy, Dr. Landy said, through local representation on the Community Schools Council.

Program Director William Slotnick sketched a number of financial advantages for Community Schools that would come with a merger. The advantages of dealing with one, rather than three, budget approvals is obvious' he said.

But under the umbrella of the School Department the program would get funding for the first time for its work with handicapped, and would qualify for other state assistance that is geared to local school systems' Slotnick said.

In terms of education, Slotnick thinks both parties to the merger might benefit. Answering Alderman James Miller, Slotnick said he didn't think a merger would spell the end of municipal service programs that are not strictly educational.

After a merger the Community Schools program would be subject to the School Committee, but Dr. Landy said there has always been a strong desire in the Newton school system for autonomy at the local level, and he said that philosophy is deeply-rooted in the community.

cityto retain 1600 square feet in the school now occupied by Community Schools without paying rent.It was also agreed that the building would be used as a polling place and the police department would be allowed to use the gym at no charge.

The Mayor's Advisory Committee on the Reuse of Surplus Buildings also recommended the sale of the Davis School to the NCSC. - D

NCSC plans for the building would leave the third floor vacant. The Mayor said part of this space could be used by the Health Department, adding that in order for the library to be located on the third floor it would require about 3600 feet.

Some aldermen are concerned that the Mayor did not raise the possibility of multiple use of the building months ago and some feel the Mayor may be jeopardizing the NCSC purchase.

The Mayor said he is looking for a "prompt solution" in the negotiations with the NCSC, adding that it is a "firm option" to sell the school to the Center.

However, Mann added, "We owe it to the city to explore every possibility."

Cherry sheet

which contends the MBTA spent $12 million without the approval of the MBTA advisory board. Wilkinson also pointed out that many of the assessments and receipts from the cherry sheets are "sensitive to the state certified equalized values of cities and towns," noting that the city has received a tentative 1980 formula which is currently being appealed." In addition, Wilkinson said the city has been continually in touch with the Governor's Office vigorously lobbying an outside section of the budget which if it is not vetoed will cost the city 50 percent of all increased parking violation fines, above what was collected in the current year. He said, "That is significant to us because of the back-log of summonses in Newton District Court which we hope to resolve in the next fiscal year." Wilkinson said the city will go through the cherry sheet figures to determine exactly what caused the reduced aid and increased assessments.

Map

Special equipment designed for the handicapped will be installed at Newton North High School, Gath Pool in Albemarle Playground, and at Crystal Lake, according to the plan.

One of the goals for the next two years will be to acquire easements or establish regulations for the development of privately-owned golf courses and other parcels.

A city-wide bicycle path is proposed with maps, route and lane markings and the Commonwealth Avenue median strip should be improved for joggers, according to the plan.

The city should encourage cluster development and other zoning techniques such as contract zoning and townhouse development as well as residential conversion provisions in the zoning ordinances,

The numerous recommendations in the five-year plan are only a part of the full report that documents open space in the city.

Shone's new service

Shone Real Estate is offering a new service to area residents, International Referral Exchange. As a member of IRE, Shone is now able to present homes to prospective buyers nationwide. Also, for those moving to any place in the world, information about a new area can be had by calling the toll-free number 1-800-523-2460 extension E374. Seated above are Dorothy and Paul Shone. Standing are Eleanor DeMartino and Robert Ouellette.

The great egg debate

By Gaynor Maddox

A major nutritional controversy has arisen over eggs — specifically, the high cholesterol content of their yolks.

"Eat too many eggs and you increase your risk of heart attack," say some scientists.

"Nonsense," rebut others. "The cholesterol in the egg yolk will not affect your health one way or the other."

Eggs are a valuable food. They supply first-class protein as well as such other nutrients as vitamin A and iron.

Until one side or the other prevails, it will be up to you to decide whether or not to eat eggs. If you decide to do so, you then must determine how many eggs you will eat each week.

The best advice for now is to use common sense. Unless your doctor instructs you otherwise, you will probably be playing it safe by limiting yourself to one egg every other day.

Another advantage of eggs is that they are one of the most economical protein sources. Currently they are near their lowest price of the year.

If you opt for eggs, you may want to try some of the recipes in Robert Ackart's handsome new book, "Souffles, Mousses, Jellies and Creams" (Atheneum, $11.95).

Many of Ackart's recipes combine eggs with vegetables. (No matter what their stand on eggs, all nutritionists advise that we eat more vegetables.)

Ackart's souffle recipes are so clear that almost anyone can be sure of a handsome and unusual dish. Most of the main-dish souffles call for three or four eggs.

Among his recipes are souffles featuring green pepper, watercress, zucchini, winter squash and mustard greens. And green peas, green beans, collard greens, cauliflower, even carrot.

Other souffles include meat, poultry and fish.

Ackart does not limit himself to souffles, of course. He also devotes much attention to cold main-dish mousses. His avocado mousse with watercress, for example, makes a delightful summer dish.

So, egg eaters, enjoy the recipes in Ackart's book. But try to limit yourself to just one serving. That's a practically painless way to cut both calories and cholesterol.

Too hot to eat...

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Chilled soups are a refreshing way to use many fruits and vegetables. They can prove filling and satisfying as appetizers or complete meals on hot days.

Serve this easy-to-prepare chilled cucumber soup with a salad and your favorite rolls and beverage as a switch from your regular lunch.

You can prepare the soup ahead and leave it in the refrigerator for family or guests to serve themselves at leisure during a busy weekend.

CHILLED CUCUMBER SOUP

1 cup condensed chicken broth
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried dillweed, crushed
Dash garlic powder
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 cup sour cream
1 cup yogurt
2 medium cucumbers, peeled and chopped
Cucumber slices
Lemon slices

In blender, combine broth, lemon juice, onion, salt, dill, garlic and rind. Blend until smooth.

Add sour cream and yogurt. Mix until just blended.

Stir in chopped cucumber. Chill.

Garnish with cucumber and lemon slices. This kitchen-tested recipe makes about 4 1-cup servings. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)

Mortgage rate down

BOSTON (UPI) — Home Owners Federal Savings and Loan Association, the largest savings and loan association in Boston, has reduced its conventional mortgage rate by 1 percent to 11.75 percent with 30, percent down.

The mortgage rate at Home Owners has dropped a full percent in the last 30 days. This is the first time since October, 1979, that the rate has been at 11.75 percent.

Outlook good for fishing

CHICAGO (UPI) — It looks like a good summer for fish fanciers.

Earl Swicord, a seafood company executive and president of the National Fisheries Institute, says seafood suppies are greater now than they have been in years. Swicord expects almost all varieties of fish and seafood to be attractive buys for consumers in retail stores and restaurants as the 1980 fishing season opens.

He says government figures show wholesale prices for larger size shrimp are more than 20 percent below this time last year, and halibut, salmon and king crab also at wholesale levels appreciably below a year ago.

Wholesale prices for cod, whiting and rockfish area about the same as last year, Swicord says, adding that this yas the effect of a price reduction, because of inflation.

He expects the fish harvest to be good throughout the summer.

Chicken and pork plentiful

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unusually large supplies of pork, broiler-fryers, eggs, milk, dairy products and limes are expected during June, say U.S. Department of Agriculture marketing specialists. Pork supplies are expected to remain plentiful during the summer. Turkey supplies shuld be 25-30 percent higher than last June, the USDA says, and the lime crop of 1.9 million bushels sets a new rec ord. ——

Carpet going on the walls

MIAMI (UPI) — A home furnishings expert says the time is coming when carpeting will be used more generally on walls than on floors, and bricks instead of carpeting on floors. Louis Gropp made this prediction in a speech at the 21st national conference of the National Home Fashions League.

Miss Ochs, Mr. Camerato married at country club

Debra Ilene Ochs and Peter Francis Camerato were married in an evening ceremony April 20 at the Oakley Country Club, Belmont.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Syd Ochs of Newton Centre; and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Camerato of Newtonville.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Nancy Ochs of Albany, N.Y., the bride's sister-in-law; and bridesmaids were Mrs. Jene Ochs, Frances Camerato and Linda Rome of Newton and Mrs. Nancy Lee of Malden.

The best man was Peter Green of Newton.

Mark Ochs, Neal Ochs, Albert Camerato, Salvatore Camerato, John Camerato and Robert Camerato ushered.

The bride attended Salem State College and is employed by Lou Allen & Sons in Newton. The groom attended Newton Junior College and works for Raytheon in Waltham.

After a wedding trip to England and Scotland, the couple took up residence in Waltham.

Weddings

Marshall-Murphy

Janet Ross Marshall became the bride of James Xavier Murphy June 21 in an afternoon ceremony at Grace Episcopal Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Marshall of Newton Corner and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Murphy of Yardley, Pa.

Maid of honor was Julie Mermus of Auburndale. Bridesmaids were Kelly Murphy, Laura Mermus, Terresa Ann Marshall, the bride's sister-in-law; Susan Kirk and Deborah Teplow.

Clint Gaffrey of Boston was the best man. Duncan, Roderick and Gordon Marshall, the bride's brothers, ushered.

A tent reception was held after the ceremony and relatives from England, California and Pennsylvania attended.

After a honeymoon in the Bahamas, the couple will live in Middletown, Conn.

Paula Goodman marries Paul Fishman of Waban

Paula L. Goodman, daughter of Drs. Ernest and Malka Goodman of St. Paul, Minn., was married Sunday, June 22, to Paul Fishman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fishman of Waban, at the bride's parent's home.

The bride, a graduate student at the Yale University School of Law, was an environmental law clerk for a Minneapolis law firm. An alumna of Amherst College, she worked as a congressional intern for then-Senator Walter Mondale and an administrative aide to St. Paul Mayor George Latimer.

The groom, a graduate student at the University of Minnesota School of Journalism, is the music editor of the Twin Cities Reader and the editor of Trax Magazine.

The couple will be known as Paula Goodman Maccabee and Paul Fishman Maccabee.

Senior woodworkers honored

WEST NEWTON — Six participants in Newton-Wellesley-Weston Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP) were honored recently by children and teachers at the Second Congregational Church Nursery School. The Senior Volunteers, members of the RSVP woodworkers shop, have repaired wooden blocks, chairs, and toys for the nursery school during the past year.

Mrs. Priscilla Burke, director of the nursery school, the teachers and the children wished to meet the volunteers to thank them in person for their work. Mrs. Burke invited the volunteers to a cookie and music party at the school.

When the volunteers arrived at the nursery school they were greeted by the teachers and children from the three nursery groups. The children were eager to meet their guests and then entertained them with music and songs with the volunteers joining in. Afterwards, the volunteers were able to chat with the children and enjoy watching them use the toys and blocks they had repaired and painted. A very pleasant morning for all was the outcome of this intergenerational exchange.

The RSVP woodworking shop began five years ago with a small grant from ACTION. The purpose was to provide handicapped volunteers with an opportunity for meaningful volunteer work which might also be physically therapeutic to the volunteers. Woodworking was chosen as the major activity for the group as it offers nany possibilities for exercising hands and arms while performing various workshop activities. While the original purpose of the workshop was to serve handicapped seniors, the workshop, when non-handicapped volunteers became interested in joining, became a mixed group of healthy and disabled volunteers who share the workshop tasks and enjoy each other's company.

In addition to repairing nursery school equipment the workshop volunteers have constructed toys for needy children (recently for a group of Russian immigrant children), built tables and chairs designed for handicapped children and worked on a variety of projects for non-profit organizations in the Newton, Wellesley, Weston area.

Pinebrook the setting for Rakoff-Chertok wedding

Rabbi Samuel Chiel married Lauri Ruth Rakoff to Brian Stewart Chertok June 1 in a ceremony at the Pinebrook Country Club in Weston.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Rakoff of Chestnut Hill, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Chertok of Chestnut Hill.

The bride's sister Jill was the maid of honor. The groom's sisters, Deborah and Joanne Chertok, were bridesmaids.

Dean Chertok was best man for his brother; and the ushers were Michael Benjamin, Eric Birnbaum, James Howard and John Levin.

The bride attended Rhode Island School of Design and graduated from the Parsons School of Design with a BFA degree. She is a fashion illustrator and commercial artist.

Mr. Chertok graduated from Connecticut College and received an MA from Pratt Institute. He is a graphic designer.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple took up residence in New York City.

Aquarium setting for Hermens-Laube wedding

The New England Aquarium was the setting for the marriage ceremony May 24 uniting Rosalee K. Hermens and Sheldon J. Laube.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Hermens of Banks, Ore., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Laube of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Music for the ceremony was provided by classical guitarist Michael Raskin, a friend of the bride's.

The bride has a BA degree from the University of Oregon and her master's degree from Yale. She is a management consultant.

Mr. Laube is a graduate of Case-Western Reserve and is a vice president of C.M. Leinwand Associates.

After a wedding trip to Bar Harbor, Me., the couple took up residence in Newton Highlands.

The bride will continue to use her maiden name.

Class of '80 has left rose-colored glasses behind

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Principal John H. Lucas of Hillside High School shoved his chair back and slapped a hand on his office desk.

"High school graduates of 1980 are different from those of even a few years ago," he said.

"Several years ago if a student was caught in some minor violation, he probably would have denied doing it. Today he admits it. They are not afraid of life," said Lucas, 59.

One of his vice principals, Mrs. Thelma Battle, 47, said, "I think the class of '80 will do all right. Most won't set the world on fire. But they know what they want."

The other vice principal, Mrs. Helen Compton, 31, smiled. "What they want is to get rich," she said. The three laughed.

But in jest was fact.

Hillside is one of Durham's two high schools. Both are 90 percent black. Lucas and his aides estimate up to 10 per cent have automobiles, live in their own apartments and perhaps have families of their own already.

This is not a ghetto setting. Hillside sits on a leafy hill amid middle class brick and frame houses with manicured lawns. Unlike New York City's schools, the walls are clean of graffiti smear.

There are no police watching the brick school. The hot recent cause was the greatness of Reginald Shaw, a 17-year-old substitute who rose in mid-season to lead Hillside to two unexpected football triumphs. Durham is New as well as Old South — three downtown tobacco warehouses are marked into being High Tech era design apartment houses but, the surgeon general, filters and king size packs, suh, you can still buy Home Run cigarettes here.

Durham might well be typical America. Listen to its graduates.

Kimberly Battle, 16 and by test one of the brightest of the 260 members of Hillside's class of '80, so intelligent that she's bound for Duke University, did not hesitate when asked her aims in after-graduation life.

"Make a lot of money," she said. She paused, summoning up other aims. "To own my own business. And, yes, to help other people on the way to success."

Love? Marriage? "My career is going to come first," she said.

Mrs. Battle, the vice principal, sat listening to her daughter. She said nothing. Neither did Principal Lucas or Mrs. Compton.

Silence. Kimberly, in a wooden chair by Lucas' desk, suggested another graduate concern.

"Our chief concern, what we worry about the most, I suppose, is world security. Will the world last until tomorrow."

Kimberly left. Sheila Butler, 17, took the seat next to Lucas' desk. She said she was going in the fall to the University of North Carolina, study dentistry and "feel pleasure if I do what I want to do and succeed and have pleasure doing it."

But money is the thing. "My great worry is that I may go through all the years of dental training and then not having the money to set myself up in practice."

Bridgette Allen, 17, said, "I see that life will be easy, not all cream. I don't expect anything to be handed me.

She smiled. Then unsmiled.

"The world out there will be a struggle. You've got to fight what is thrown at you. Life is struggle."

Lester Bass, 17, class of '80: "My ambition is to become a doctor. My aim is to make money. Fear? Yes, not becoming rich.

"And I fear there will be a war and I'll have to go. I want to live in a world of Mercedes."

Lester left. Shaw, the substitute quarterback who made good, sat. "I think life will be happiness. There will much fun in life. Girls, sex, all of that."

Lucas smiled. The principal said Shaw, a leader among students, was the boy the girls most wanted to sit next to in the cafeteria.

Shaw's grin was gone now. He was talking of deeper feelings. His life aims were to "be pleasant, to work and support my family and go with God."

In the past year he had begun going to church "mostly to please my mother. Now I go to please myself. It makes me feel good."

Did he have fear? "National security. Can we have two more years without a war? I don't want to fight."

In the office Lucas told Annette Wilson, 18, she will be the class of '80 valedictorian. She hugged him. How did she see the future?

"We all will have to work for what we get. Nothing will be free. The world's a mess, of course. To be able to wake up in the morning is a victory.

"Most of us are ready for the world, though. There are a few who think the future will be a big party."

She smiled. "Poor idiots," she said.

Mariott's Nadeau promoted vice pres.

Colin G. Nadeau, Mariott VP

NEWTON—Colin G. Nadeau, general manager of the Newton Marriott Hotel for the past four years, has been promoted to New England Regional vice president for Marriott Hotels.

Nadeau will assume his new position July 7.

Nadeau has been with the Marriott Hotel Division for 18 years, joining the corporation in Washington as a trainee and then as Assistant Restaurant Manager. He served at both the Key Bridge and Twin Bridges Marriotts in Washington D.C. before becoming Resident Manager, and later General Manager, of the Saddlebrook, New Jersey Marriott.

A graduate of Michigan State University with a B.S. in Hotel Administration, he was with Knott Hotels and Manger Hotels before joining Marriott.

Nadeau is president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, vice president of the Massachusetts Hotel-Motel Association, secretary of the Newton Rotary and is on the board of directors of Lasell Junior College, Newton Boys' Club and Newton Red Cross.

He lives in Dover with his wife and five children.

Her students benefit from her handicap

BETTENDORF, Iowa (UPI) — Kathy Nielsen's handicap gave her a special power to cast light in the dark worlds of the blind and visually impaired children she teaches.

She gives them hope and inspiration unmatched by the average teacher. Her students learn nothing is impossible when their own teacher is blind, too.

"I think it helps because they can see I'm still useful," Mrs. Nielsen said. "If I can manage, they learn they can manage, too. I'm able to philosophize to them and help them with hangups and problems."

Born with congenital glaucoma, a disease which builds up pressure inside the eye, she began losing her sight while attending elementary school. In 1978, both her eyes had to be removed and replaced with acrylic eyes.

"I did have medicine down through the years, but I knew eventually something was going to have to go. And it did," Mrs. Nielsen said.

"It's traumatic. I had one eye removed in the spring and one in the fall. It was a lot harder the second time because I knew I didn't have a spare."

Mrs. Nielsen, who calls herself a "migratory teacher," travels 350 miles each week to schools in Bettendorf, Davenport, Muscatine, Clinton, Wilton and Maquoketa. An assistant drives Mrs. Nielsen to each location and reads material aloud for her to transcribe into braille.

Mrs. Nielsen, 39, instructs her eight students, depending on their degree of blindness, in braille, typing and visual discrimination. Three of her students are totally blind.

"There are some disadvantages because I'm not able to see print, drive myself, and do my own transcribing," she said. "But they're not big hurdles, obviously, because I've been doing it."

In addition, Mrs. Nielsen takes her students on "tactile tours" of places such as the Bettendorf Museum. She gave the museum a four-page braille catalog of museum items which can be touched to encourage more blind people to visit.

Mrs. Nielsen, a graduate of Clarke College in Dubuque, said she decided to pursue a career in special education teaching because she was inspired by another blind teacher, Dorothy O'Leary, who taught her when she attended the Iowa Braille and Sight Saving School in Vinton.

Now one of Mrs. Nielsen's former students is attending college and seeking a career in special education.

Her teaching triumphs also have been recognized by the Davenport and Bettendorf branches of the Pilot Club International, which selected her as the 1979-80 Handicapped Professional Woman of the Year.

Host families needed for students

NEWTON — Host families for 20 French students are needed within two weeks, according to Newton North High teacher David Phelan, coordinator for the North Atlantic Cultural Exchange League (NACEL).

Phelan has already placed some 80 French students who will stay with Greater Boston families between July 5 and July 31. All of the French students have had between four to seven years of English in class and they range in age from 14 to 18 years.

Phelan teaches French and Spanish at Newton North High School.

If host families can't be found, several French students who have been waiting since March will not be able to visit.

Phelen encourged families with teenagers to act as hosts even if the American teens are planning to work.

"The French students are coming here to find out what America is all about and most American teenagers work during the summer. There are usually other family members, relatives or friends to fill the void when teenagers are not available," said Phelan.

Interested families should contact Phelan immeately at 508 Farm Rd., Marlboro, or call him at 1-481-6516.

Phelan added, "The visiting students are expected to become a part of the family during their four-week stay. They can be expected to participate in all of the family activities including vacation trips and the performance of household chores."

Although NACEL is not an exchange program per se, each year more and more American teenagers are invited back to France for a similar program, Phelan said.

Panel backs Mrs. Joyal as health chief

NEWTON — The Human Services Committee Wednesday unanimously endorsed the appointment of Bernice R. Joyal as city health commissioner.

She will replace Dr. J. Carolyn Zavarine who will retire July 1.

The interview with the committee skipped over her lengthy resume to touch on overweight police officers, lice, mosquitos, caterpillars and the middle-aged man.

Alderman Eodney Barker asked Mrs. Joyal if she would support compulsory exercise for police officers and firefighters. Barker said Europeans are shocked at the condition of American police officers. "Some are so fat they can't get out of the cars," he said.

The commissioner-designate said she prefers diet clinics and voluntary blood pressure checks. A voluntary exercise program is preferable, she said, and compulsory exercise could lead to union problems.

Contracts for both departments are under negotiation and the time is right to institute a program along the lines of the Canadian Royal Air Force, Barker said.

Mrs. Joyal recommended instead that the board require weight and blood pressure guidelines, if some kind of legislation is proposed.

After the caterpillars are through munching on Newton foliage it will be time for the mosquito season, but Mrs. Joyal said either insect is only a concern to the Health Department in terms of spraying and its effect on humans.

Most sprays used, if they are allowed at all, are not effective, she said' and powerful insect deterrents need sanction from the Center for Disease Control.

Head lice icfestetions among Newton school children has been a problem in recent years and Mrs. Joyal plans to step up educational efforts aimed at parents, particularly the parents of students in the early grades.

The members of the Executive Board will be Eobert Hand, a former president, John Connolly, and Pasquale (PeeWee) Valenzano.

You don't have to be broke to get a student loan from CentralBank.

CentralBank/Chestnut Hill is now offering low-interest, federally guaranteed student loans in conjunction with the Massachusetts Higher Education Loan Plan (HELP).

A HELP Loan has a fixed interest rate of 7%; and the loan is interest-free until after graduation. Loans are available to full-time students in two or four year programs at approved institutions. Undergraduates can receive up to $2500 per year. Graduate students may borrow up to $5000. Your financial position does not determine HELP eligibility.

Applications are now being accepted for HELP Loans beginning September 1980. To receive educational assistance from CentralBank you don't have to be rich or poor... you just have to be a student.

For more information, please call Sheila O'Callaghan at our Chestnut Hill office, 734-7500.

Nonantum Woman's Club awards two scholarships

NONANTUM — The annual presentation of scholarships by the Nonantum Woman's Club was held June 10 at the Nonantum Library.

Jeffrey Sampson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Sampson and a graduate of Newton North, was awarded one of the scholarships. He plans to attend Franklin Institute in Boston to study solar techniques.

Elizabeth (Lisa) Daley, daughter of Joseph Daley and a graduate of Newton Catholic, was the second recipient. She plans to attend Aquinas Junior College and study "early childhood."

Club President Sally Magni made the presentations.

Women's clubs receive award

BOSTON — Members of the Newton Centre and Waban woman's clubs received a CARE International Appreciation Award during the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs annual convention recently in Falmouth.

The awards were given in appreciation for support provided by club members for the federation's CARE project in Peru. More than $9000 was raised during the past two years to build a five-classroom school and a four-classroom addition to an already existing school.

Medical assistants install new officers

CHESTNUT HILL — The Greater Boston Chapter of the American Association of Medical Assistants held a candlelight ceremony at Sidney Hill Country Club for its installation of officers.

Officers for the 1980-81 season are: Alison Curry, president; Leslie Sandra Cohen, vice president; Linda Lincoln, president elect; Annette Edlstein, recording secretary; Christine Howley, corresponding secretary; and Theodora Edson, treasurer.

Members of the executive committee are Agnes Padula and Marie Newman. Members of the Judicial Council are Annette Edlstein, Theodora Edson and Agnes Padula.

June Ferestien running out of opponents

by PETE TAUSSIG
Staff Writer

If you had happened to have been at the Longwood Cricket Club last Thursday morning, you would have witnessed a microcosm of an entire week's proceedings. The New England Lawn Tennis Association Women's Championship was being contested, and that last word is used loosely.

Actually it was more or less a tournament to determine who would be fed to June Ferestien in the finals. Ferestien, a West Newton resident who just completed her junior year at Newton North H.S., was the two-time defending champion. Her third straight title was all but a foregone conclusion, but the show had to go on.

And last Thursday, Lillian Peltz had won the rather dubious honor to play Ferestien in a semi-final match. If you didn't see the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Ferestien's systematic destruction of an overmatched Peltz was a reasonable facsimile. The only difference was the attack was undertaken in a much less noisy manner. Nt that it was a sneak attack, but the match did last just 29 minutes. Only 58 points were played. Peltz won just 10 points. Digest that for a moment. Some of the breaks between the games were almost as long as the games themselves. It was a nice easy day for Ferestien, who happened to be celebrating her 17th birthday.

The present came 24 hours later. Ferestien won her third straight NELTA Women's Championship, dispatching Chris Cunniff with ease, 6-2, 6-1. Ferestien's five straight-set bombardments were accomplished while dropping just 10 games. If that seems ridiculously simple, be advised that — contrary to her humble protestations — it was.

She is the big fish in the small pond of New England women's tennis. She dominates it as few others have, those others of recent vintage being Andrea Voikos and Una Keyes. There are no challenges left for June in this neck of the woods. It is time to move up to the Big Pond.

She is head and shoulders above her age group in New England, and three straight New England titles attest to the fact she is the Queen of the tennis hill in this region. Although she is nationally ranked in her age group, she has not yet become a traveling teanage tennis prodigy. She has not followed in the sneakersteps of successful truants like Tracy Austin, Pam Schriver, and Andrea Jaeger.

"I think Austin is one in a million," Ferestien says. "Andrea's good too, but not overwhelming. I think a lot of junior players could do well if they played full-time."

June belongs to the education-first school of thought. She attends school on a full-time basis although, "I miss a lot of school because of tournaments. Fortunately, the teachers are really good about it, because it eems like I'm always trying to catch up!

"Everybody says 'Why not move to Florida?', but I don't think doing that would improve my game all that much. It's true I don't play the top girls enough, and it is hard for me to improve since I don't play them enough. The girls in Florida and California are strong, but the girls in New England are getting stronger. Right now, I think it has been better for me to stay nere and keep on top. I'm sure I have continued to improve. I've been beating opponents more decisively than in the past and I have set personnel goals like trying to be mentally tougher and consistently better on each point."

On Thursday, for example, she went into her match against Peltz with the attitude that "I wasn't going to lose a game," and proceeded to match her lofty expectations. The 5'7" bomber wears her dark hair in a ponytail and under a white brimmed tennis hat on sunny days. But as tame as that makes her look, she goes after her opponents with all the subtlety of Machine Gun Kelly. Her powerful forehand and two-hand backhand come off her graphite racket with deadly topspin and her deep placements keep opponents routinely pinned well behind the baseline. Even when she is nervous and overhitting, she does not let up. She hits out on virtually every shot, occasionally throwing in a drop shot or a top-spin lob to keep an opponent honest. She has the killer instinct. "That's what they tell me," she smiles. "But you need it to win."

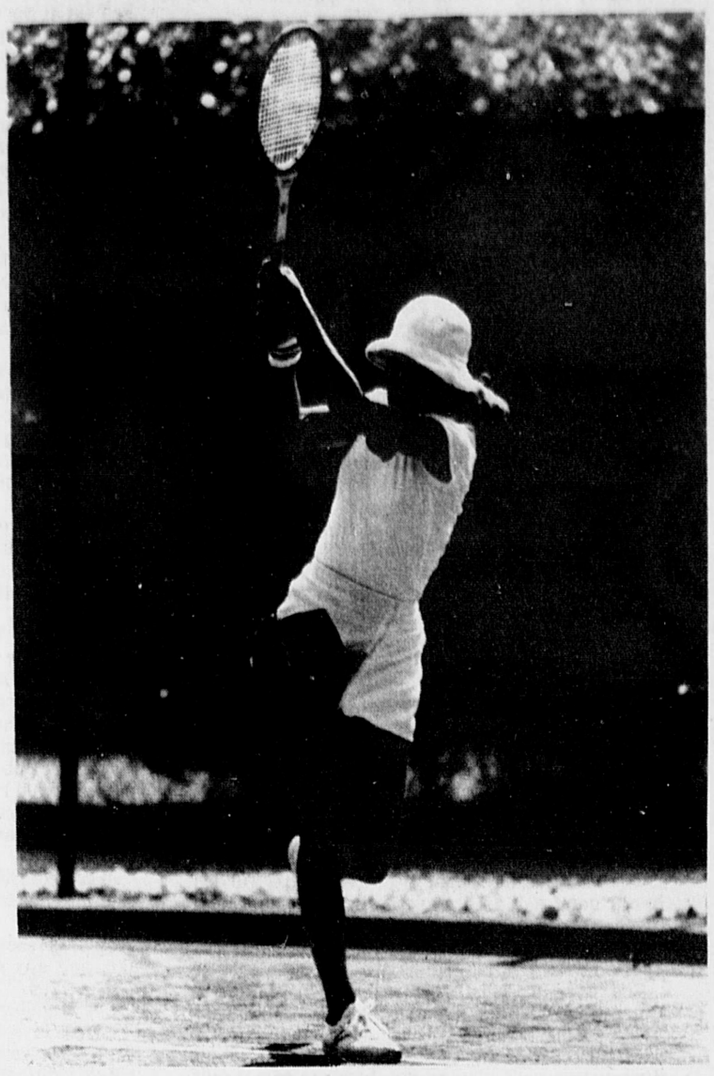

She will get plenty of chances to play the top female teanagers in the United States this summer. On Saturday she will be in San Diego to participate in tryouts for one of a dozen spots on the Junior Wightman Cup Team. If she makes the team — ad she is a good bet to do so — she will travel with other team members to play in a number of national tournaments this summer with all expenses being picked up by the U.S.L.T.A.

Even if she doesn't make the team, she will still undertake her heaviest summer tennis schedule yet on the national level, courtesy of her father. "I've put a lot of time and effort into this and my parents have made a lot of sacrifices."

She hopes to repay them, first by parlaying a successful summer tour into a tennis scholarship at one of the national collegiate powerhouses like Stanford, Trinity-Texas, USC, or UCLA a year from now, and eventually by turning pro.

She has had a taste of both the pro circuit and international competition already, having participated in a pro 'futures' tournament in Atlanta and a junior team match on grass in Australia earlier this year. "It's high up in the future," she says of the possibility of casting her lot with the pros. "I have to gain more experience. I think I'm mentally pretty sound. It helps to stay calm. I've learned that much because I've choked a few matches here and there."

Most likely 'there', wherever and whenever those matches may have been. Because 'here' in New England she is undeniably the best women amateur tennis player. Just as Lillian Peltz. Or Chris Cunniff. Or...

International League

St. Bernard's tops Abruzzi

A four-run fifth inning powered St. Bernard's past Abruzzi Club, 7-2, on Thursday in Newton International League action at Newton Highlands.

Dave Boule led the inning off with a single with on out and the score tied 2-2. Tom Ryan and Mark Romano walked to load the bases and the stage was set. After a strikeout Chris Pachus hit a grounder to first that Ken Small played into a two-run error and the tie was snapped. Mark Hamill then lined a shot to left-center that drove in two more.

Lefthander John Santagati tossed a four-hitter and fanned two to earn the win and St. Bernard's fourth of the season.

Abruzzi scored on an error in the first inning and added another in the fourth when Mark Paglia doubled to right and Chris Pappas singled him in.

Paglia struck out 13 and yielded five hits in his loss for Abruzzi. St. Bernard's is now 4-2.

In a see-saw battle, Albermarle Club scored the diciding run in the fifth inning to down the Elks Red Sox, 8-7, on Thursday at Howard Ferguson Field.

Jim Walker singled and moved to third on John Vitti's single. An error cost the Red Sox the game as Walker trotted home on a passed ball.

Willie Kaplan gave up eight hits and fanned 10 to even his record at 1-1 for Albermarle Club. The 14 year old righty had two rbi's on two squeeze bunts.

Elks catcher Chris Noble collected two doubles, three runs batted in and he scored twice.

Albermarle is now 2-3, while the Red Sox slipped to 1-4.

In an International League contest were neither team would quit Boys' Club and TNT battled to a 12-12 tie at Albermarle Field on Thursday.

Trailing by one-run in the top of the seventh TNT racked up four runs on two singles, a double, a walk, and a sacrifice bunt.

Boys' Club never let up and with two outs in the bottom of the seventh they came up with three runs to tie it up. Jeff Gromada singled to right and the ball took a very strange bounce that caused it to roll all the way to the wall and he was able to come around and score.

Mark Coppola followed with a single and kept the two out rally alive. Matt Ryan walked and on a passed ball both runners advanced. Dino Leone came through with a single that scored both men and the game was tied.

The game remained deadlocked because of league rules that do not allow a new inning to start after 10:30 p.m.

Redlegs sweep Bucs for title

Near no-hit pitching by Jamie Rice in the first game and slick relief flinging by Anthony Whiting in the second contest enabled the Redlegs to sweep the Pirates, 9-0 and 11-10, in the NeWton West Little League best-of-three championship series over the weekend at Lyons Field.

Rice, a righthander, has only one out from a Hall of Fame performance in the Saturday tilt. With two away in the sixth inning, Randy Johnson banged a clean drive up the middle to break the spell. Rice struck out 12 and gave up two passes'

Catcher Ottavio Mariano spearheadeed the winning attack w1th a base-clearing triple and a bases-loaded walk. Rice, who was unbeaten during the regular season with an 8-0 record, helped his own cause with a run-scoring doible.

The Redlegs, first half pennant winners, broke out with eight runs in the fifth inning to win the second game on Sunday.

Trailing 5-3 after four innings, The Reds cashed in on bases on balls and RBI singles by Nick Mariano, Rice, Jeff Guzzix and Darry Newton to turn the game around.

Whiting replaced Jimmy Lyons on the mound in the top of the third stanza and had things in control after that. Greg Burke was tagged with the loss. Ottavio Mariano had three hits for the winners.The summary:

Adult lessons, offered Tuesday mornings at North High and Thursday afternoons at Newton Centre, are for beginners only.

July 14-20 is Longwood week. A special trip to the Longwood Cricket Club to attend will be arranged.

Pappas puzzled by Post 440 loss skein

Manager Jim Pappas has searched long and hard for an explanation, but thus far there's been none forthcoming. Only additional misery.

"I can't understand it," lamented the coach of the Newton Legion Post 440 team Sunday. "When we get good pitching, the hitting doesn't hold up. When we get good hitting, the pitching's not there."

Saturday only added to Pappas's woes as the Post 440 drop two more games when the South County Oxford Orioles swamped them, 13-11 and 18-5, in Stan Musial League play at Lincoln Park, Waban.

Combined with Thursday's 13-8 defeat to Framingham at Bowditch Field, the Post 440's record is now a dismal 1-10.

Starter Tony Santagati lasted only four a one-third innings in the opener Saturday as Oxford exploded for six runs in the fifth. Santagati, out of the University of Rhode Island, was replaced by Bentley College's Brian Quirk, who in turn had to be relieved by Lou Gonzales.

The only bright spots for Newton were catcher Ralph Berry, who continued his orrid hitting with a double, three singles and four RBI's, and rightfielder Gary Sementellis, who had three hits.

The second game was more of the same story as starter Steve Rand didn't last the first inning. His replacement, Bill LeGage, only lasted two-thirds of an inning before Brian Finnell came on to stem the tide somewhat.

Berry and Finnell both had two hits in a losing cause for Post 440.

Thursday's game saw Charles Lynch do the Newton club in with two triples, a double and three RBI's. The Summary:

OXFORD ORIOLES (18)- Czycewski 4-2; Zemsky 2-1; Strzelecki 4-1; Stefanik 3-2; M. Huckerson 4-2; Hetherman 4-1; Brown 3-1; D. Huckerson 5-2; Norton 3-0; Brisbois 1-0; Totals 32-11.

POST 440 (5)—Kasabian 3-2; Sementelli 4-0; Ryan 3-1; Berry 3-2; Gonzales 1-0; Chaloff 0-0; Arena 4-1; Finnell 3-2; Stefaniak 1-0; Santagati 2-0; Rooney 2-2; Ferrier 3-0; Totals 26-10.

Two-base hits—M. Huckerson, Ryan
Three-base hits—Strzelecki, Stefanik, Hetherman, Arena

OXFORD SOUTH COUNTY ORIOLES (13)—Stelmach 5-3; Czycewski 3 2-1; Strzelecki 5-1; Zemsky 4-3; Stefanik 5-1; Hetherman 5-3; M. Huckerson 4-2; D. Huckerson 3-1; Norton 4-2; J. Huckerson 0-0; Venu 0-0; Malkasian 0-0; Totals 37-17.

NEWTON LEGION POST 440 (11)—Kasabian 4-1; Sementelli 4-3; Ryan 4-1; Berry 5-4; Arena 4-1; Pappas 4-1; Stefaniak 1-0; Finnell 4-3; Algeri 3-1; Rooney 3-1; Totals 36-15.

Two-base hits—Berry, Arena 2.
Three-base hits—Stelmack 2, Stefanik, Finnell.

A's top Youth Baseball

The newly formed Newton Youth Baseball league came to a close June 12with the final world series game between the National League Champions, the Padres, and the American League and World Champions, the A's.

It was a close race down to the wire for both leagues.

In the American league, three teams, the A's, the White Sox, were in full contention down UUthe A's, the White Sox, were in full contention down to their final two games.Although the Twins were serious contenders,

The White Sox, behind the brilliant playing of Ricky Hurowitz, had been giving the A's a good shake at the Divisional League, but slowed toward the end of the year.

The Royals started off with a 1-3 record, but battled back with the hard work of coach Al Whyte, key hits by Adam Elan, and the baserunning of speedster Stephen Hoostien, resulting in a playoff game against the A's to decide the division champions. Both teams shared 10-3 records.

The A's won the playoff game, 4-3 in eight innings, behind the pitching of Eric Olson and Donny Natale.

In the National League, it was a race between the Padres and the Pirates.The Cardinals, starting the season off with a 0-6 record, turned around mid-season and finished strongly.

L. Peach bats Zepp's Zeros

Laura Peach connected for a bases-loaded triple and an rbi single to lead Zepp's Zeros to a)3-6 decision over Brandons in Newton Women's Twilight Softball League play Sunday at Albemarle Field.

Righthander Barbara Prifty won her fifth game of the season as she guided the Zeros from the mound.

Recreation Notes

Playgrounds to Open

The Newton Recreation Department's 29 playgrounds will open for the 1980 summer season Monday, June 30.

There will be supervised activities at these areas Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. The department's larger playgrounds, Burr, Cabot, Newton Centre, Albemarle, and Auburndale will also be open evenings from 5 p.m. to dusk and on weekends.

Leader Orientation

Some 80 plus playground leaders will be attending the two-day orientation program being held this year at the Newton Arts Center in Newtonville, Thursday and Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. both days.

The leaders will be welcomed at the opening session by Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran. In addition, Commissioner Halloran will address the leaders on department policy.

Farmers' Market

As the result of a resolution introduced to the Board of Aldermen by Ald. Edward Richmond, the Newton Recreation Department, in cooperation with the Newton Planning Department, Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, Newton Area CETA and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, will be sponsoring a Farmers' Market in the circle in front of the memorial building at City Hall from July 8 to mid-October.

The Farmers' Market will be held each Tuesday from 3:30 to 7:30 p.m. Local growers are invited to bring in their produce between these hours and the residents of Newton are invited to come to the market and buy locally grown fresh fruit and vegetables.

Interested people should call Deputy Commissioner Fran Towle at 552-7120 for additional information.

Lassie League

The 1980 Lassie League title went to the Turtles by virtue of a 12 to 5 playoff win over the second place Corpus Christi Bears. The Turtles were coached by Jon Carey and the Corpus Christi Bears by Elaine Belli.

The Corpus Christi Tigers coached by Sheila Balch were winners of the coveted Sportsmanship Award. This honor is presented annually to the team the officials and teams in the league select by their votes as displaying the best sportsmanship throughout the season.

Swim Registration

There are still a few openings in swim classes to be held at the Gath Pool this summer. Registration for these openings will be held at the Gath Pool Monday through Friday from 4 to 5 p.m. until all vacancies are filled.

Swim Lessons

Those scheduled to take swim lessons on the Fourth of July have the option of taking those lessons or skipping them on the holiday. The lessons will be held, but those who have other activities scheduled need not attend.

Women's Basketball

The Recreation Department's Women's Summer Basketball League opens its tenth season with a record number of nine teams. Games are played Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays, all at Cabot, after June 27.

Teams playing in the league this year are The AC, United Rental, EJ Angels, Hare Sports, Mr. Pups, Newton South, Murphy's Flip Tops, Troubador Tigers, and No Name.

The Women's Summer Basketball League is directed by Shirley Ledger and Sue King.

Minibike Tracks

The Recreation Department's three-track Minibike faciliity in Newton Highlands will close at the end of the day's schedule on Saturday, June 28. It will reopen the Saturday after Labor Daay for the Fall schedule.

Fourth of July Concert

Arts in the Parks of the Newton Recreation Department invites Newton residents to attend a Fourth of July concert and picnic at the Newton Centre playground beginning at 5 p.m. The concert will be presented by the Yankee Rhythm Kings featuring Bob Conners on the trombone, Dave Whitmey and Paul Monat on trumpet, Blair Bettencourt on clarinet, Don Bennet on piano, Cal Owen on banjo, Stu Gunn on tuba, and Ray Smith on the drums.

In case of rain the concert will be held at Newton South High School at 7 p.m.

Yoga Classes

Yoga classes are being offered for anyone, any age, and any condition. The instructor is Shirley Sloane Izen. The place, the Hamilton School on Grove St., Newton Lower Falls. The time for the 10 sessions is 9:30 and 11:30 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays from July 1 to July 31.

Registration fee is $20 and $10 for seniors. Checks should be made payable to the Arts in the Parks on Wheels and sent to 70 Crescent St., Auburndale

The ins and outs of babysitting

BOSTON — Instead of idling away their free time, 10 Junior Cadettes of Newton spent two days of a recent school vacation training in first aid, accident prevention, and child care procedures and entertainment. They were among 50 local youths enrolled in Faulkner Hospital's babysitters' training course.

Under the direction of the hospital's health educator Bettie Hirshom, the course was offered to youngsters during school vacation periods.

According to Hirshom, the workshop is designed to foster a professional outlook on babysitting. "There is a great deal of responsibility involved in caring for someone else's child," said Hirshom. "Our objective then, is to ensure that sitters are qualified for what they do, and that they are prepared for situations they may encounter."

On the first day, she welcomed the class with the remark that they're in training not to be babysitters, but—more correctly—childwatchers. "After all," she said, "you don't sit when you're taking care of little ones."

Students were expected to take notes, ask questions and create dialogues during the class sessions. Handouts were distributed for study at home, and each student received a copy of the federal government's "Pocket Guide to Babysitting." Course topics range from home safety and first aid, to the intricacies . of changing soiled diapers. Resusi baby manikins were used for practice and demonstrations.

Those enrolled have reacted enthusiastically to the course. "I've been babysitting for two years," said one 14-year-old, "but until now, I've always been afraid of caring for infants." Thirteen-year-old Cy Rolbin of Brookline was surprised to learn that not all diapers are plastic-lined and disposable. "We found out that you could wash them," he said wincing. "That's news to me."

Home safety was discussed with help from local police and fire department representatives. Lieutenant Charles Feeley of the Newton Police Department advised the group to plan ahead in case of fire. "Always assess where the exits and phones are, should you have to escape quickly. Remember," he cautioned, "in case of fire or smoke, lie low."

Hirshom, a registered nurse with children of her own, advised that "during emergencies, the calmer you are, the more will get done." She described specific hazards for each age group with an emphasis on prevention. Should problems arise, students were trained in proper responses to burns, cuts, choking, and other mishaps.

Time was also devoted to proper handling of phone calls or visits from strangers. Students listened intently as Hirshom and the officers addressed them. "When a stranger calls, what kind of information should you give?" she asked. The answer evolved through discussion with the class: Don't say you're alone with the children and don't say where the parents or mother has gone. "Likewise, if someone comes to the house and you don't know who they are," she advised, "don't open that door."

In keeping with the professional theme, Hirshom also counseled the youths in ethics and contracts.

Mt. Ida, Emerson combine credit coop programs, courses

NEWTON — Mount Ida Junior College in Newton Centre and Emerson College in Boston have agreed to combine their resources in new joint credit cooperative programs and courses.

Both institutions will continue to operate with separate identities, boards of trustees, faculties, and administrations. The Emerson-Mount Ida Cooperative Committee will serve as liaison in the plan that envisions the ultimate transfer of students, the possibility of sharing academic space and faculty and expanded continuing-education efforts.

The agreement, effective immediately, was signed in ceremonies at the Harvard Club in Boston by Mount Ida President Dr. Bryan E. Carlson and Emerson President Dr. Allen E. Koenig.

Emerson College in Back Bay was incorporated in 1881 as a school of oratory. In expanding to adapt and broaden its curriculum to meet changing needs, the school has continued its commitment to communications arts and sciences.

Its 1500 students major in Communication Disorders, Education, English, History, Mass Communication, Psychology-Education, Speech and Communication Studies, and Theatre Arts.

Emerson has a cross-registration program with Suffolk University and the School of the Museum of Fine Arts. Through affiliation with the Longy School of Music, it offers a bachelor-of-music degree.

Emerson was the first New England college to offer undergraduate programs in broadcast and broadcast journalism, first to have an educational FM radio station, and first to have closed-circuit television with broadcast capability. Its curriculum includes, also, many of the traditional disciplines.

Mount Ida, founded in 1899, was one of the first schools in the country to introduce junior-collegelevel courses for women. It is a fully accredited two-year school offering A.A. and A.S. degrees and preparing students either for employment after graduation or for transfer to four-year colleges.

Mt. Ida's 780 students have chosen their majors from the following fields of study: animal health technology, business administration, child study, commercial art, dental assisting, education, executive secretarial studies, fashion design, fashion illustration, fashion merchandising, qraphic design, human services, individual studies, interior design, legal secretarial studies, liberal arts, medical assisting, paralegal studies, physical education, recreation leadership, and science and allied health fields.

Nation's top bugle corps due at B.C.

NEWTON — The North Star Drum and Bugle Corps will be back to defend its crown at the 17th annual Catholic Youth Organization's invitational Drum and Bugle Corps championship, Aug. 7, at B.C.'s Alumni Stadium.

The North Star group stunned the drum corps world a year ago when it reached the zenith of its short four-year career by capturing the CYO Nationals by one-tenth of a point over perennial powerhouse, the Madison (Wisc.) Scouts.

Comprised of young people from 15 to 21, the North Stars come mainly from Revere, Danvers and Beverly.

At least six former CYO National champions will be ready to march at 7 p.m. including the Boston Crusaders who took top honors in 1964, 1966 and 1967; the Blue Devils of Concord, Calif., 1978; The Blue Stars of LaCrosse, Wisc., 1972; The 27th Lancers of Revere, 1977; and the Casper, Wyo., Troopers, the only corps to win the crown three years running, 1968 through 1970.

Highland glee club awards scholarship

HIGHLANDS — The Highland Glee Club, at its recent annual business meeting, received $100 from the Newton Centre Women's Club.

The meeting marked the end of the Club's 72 concert season. Also noted at the meeting was Highland's 1980 scholarship award, a check for $300 presented earlier to Jean Goffi, soprano and senior at Needham High School. Jean plans to continue her music studies next year at Boston University.

Another feature of the evening was the announcement that Highland Glee Club has been invited to sing at the Cathedral of the Pines in Rindge, New Hampshire on Sunday, August 10 at 3 p.m. This will mark the 34th consecutive year that the Club has performed there. Arrangements have been made by Stewart J. Dewey of Watertown, club member and cathedral trustee.

Elected club officers for 1980-81 were: Merrill Mack, Weston, president; Deke Lewis, Framingham, vice— president; G. Sherwood Norton, Auburndale, secretary; Stewart L. Leach, Weston, treasurer; John Slavin, Wellesley, music committee chairman; Jack Croley, Everett, concert chairman; Ken MacRae, Weston, active membership committee chairman; Herbert Crocker, West Newton, sponsoring membership committee chairman; John S. Wyeth, Needham, publicity chairman; Ralph L. Wheeler, Newton Centre, librarian and Charles Frank, Jr., Waltham, historian.

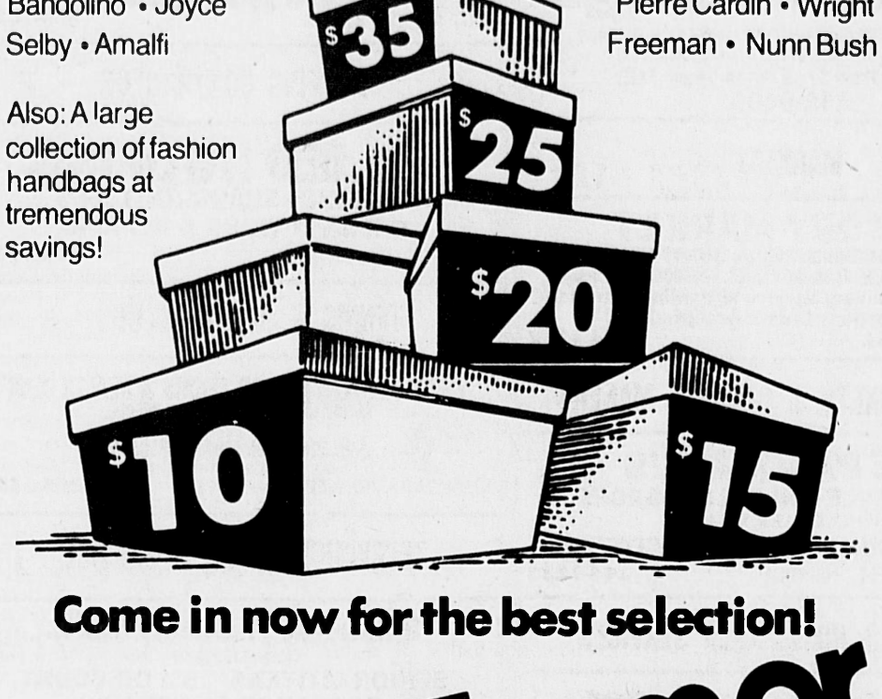

For more information, contact Ken MacRae at 893-8750.

Family welcomed

Temple helps settle Laotian family

NEWTON — With the arrival of a seven-member of volunteers has swung into action at Temple Shalom of Newton. The Temple is sponsoring the Phommabouth family, including paternal grandparents Ki and Cheme, parents Foy and Sika, their daughter Boupha and sons Nga and Chinda, age 7,6, and 4 respectively.

They were settled the first week in May in a Brighton apartment rented for the purpose. The Temple is now in the process of settling and acculturating the family, which has already undergone its initial medical examinations. Foy Phommabouth is also taking English courses.

Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, spiritual leader of the Temple, notes that in addition to the Board and to those who have contributed goods and services for the resettlement, the folowing committee personnel have been active as members of the Temple's Indochinese Relief Committee: Janice Phillips of Wellesley and Lois Morse of Newtonville, cochairpersons; Cynthia Pill of Newton Centre, chairman of acculturation; Joanne Grossman, Waban, co-chairman of acculturation; Lillian and Albert E. Ward, Waban, employment commitee; Marvin Grossman and Dr. Jack an Ansell, chairman and co-chairman; Dr. Eugenia Marcus, Newtonville, chairman of medical sub-committee.

Also, Mariaon Levine and Lois Pill, Newton, chairman and co-chairman of clothing and household goods; Dr. Barry Make, Waban, chairman of furniture and moving committee; Judy Elgart and Joan Schnall, Newton Centre, financial chairman and co-chairman; Temple Liaison and chairman of the Temple Social Action Committee Muriel Yoffa of Lincoln.

Continuing work is being done by transportation and acculturation committee members including the following women; Arlene Bloom, Audrey Cooper, Shirley Dana, Irene Freedman, Linda Fenton, Linda Frieze, Anne Katz, Bebe Resenstein, Flo Schulman, Renate Selig, Helene Sife Siefert (all of Newton and on transportation committee); Ina Forman, Belmont, Linda Frieze, Irene Freedman, Phyllis Glazerman, Suzanne Kaufman, Marion Lipson, Roberta Plotkin and Linda Frieze, Newton, all acculturation committee members.

Pet pig problem mulled in Newton

NEWTON — As Waltham residento will attest, pigs can be a problem, and now Newton is troubled by a pesky porker.

Alderman Robert Tennant has docketed an item to bolster Health Department regulations for the keeping of animals in close proximity to residential property.

Tennant proposed the legislation after complaints of a pet pig in a Waltham Street yard in West Newton.

The Health Department has ordered the offending homeowner to correct the violation by Tuesday.

But city ordinance only require construction of a shed at least 20 feet from the house, and that the pig be given feed, rather than table scraps or garbage.

If those conditions are met, the Health Department must issue a permit.

According to Tennant, the pig "oinks all around the yard" and disturbs neighbors. The pig has a ramp that allows it to run into the cellar, he said.

Health Commissioner Dr. J. Carolyn Zavarine didn't require a public hearing on the permit. "I want to move this out in the open," Tennant said. "You could have 100 pigs in the back yard and get away with it. It could develop into something."

Neighbors are not notified when there is a request to keep livestock, Tennant said, and he would like that changed. The alderman also thinks it might be a good idea to let clerk, rather than the the city Health Department, issue permits.

Go ahead for Cold Spring Park

NEWTON — The Land Use Committee Monday gave tentative approval to plans to develop the 66.8-acre Cold Spring Park as a recreation area.

The only item that remains to be resolved is a last minute change in the width of a jogging path from 4 to 7 feet. The new width allows access by Recreation Department vehicles but some neighbors fell it also allows unauthorized access to the park.

New development proposed includes: six tennis courts, two basketball courts, softball-Little League fields, four soccer fields, roadway and parking for 50 vehicles, nature trails, the two-mile jogging path, and ancillary facilities.

The park will be developed in phases. Stage I construction is expected to begin in the fall of this year and should be completed by the spring of 1981. Stage I work will be concentrated in the northern section of the site.

Cold Spring Park is located in the center of the city between Beacon Street and Boylston Street. An 11-acre playground was constructed in the 1930's as a WPA project. The city subsequently obtained portions of a swamp to the north. In the 1960's there was a plan to develop the land as a golf course. M

The city acquired 10 additional acres of land abutting Beaconwood Road in 1970 with 50 percent state reimbursement. In March 1979 the Board of Aldermen approved a bond issue of $500,000 in anticipation of similar state reimbursement for the development of the park. Cost of the project is estimated at $422,000. Last year the state Executive Office of Environmental Affairs approved the project.

Access to the park will be from Beacon Street with a driveway which will extend for approximately 700 feet. Two circular drives will also be provided.

Some material will have to be removed during development because the northern portion of the site was once used as a leaf dump and composting site by the city's Public Works Department.

Additional landscaping is proposed throughout the park, but no lighting is planned. Dawn to dusk security is proposed at the gate on Beacon Street.

Six condos backed by Committee

NEWTON — The Land Use Committee wants to wrap up in one package the development of a former Bellevue Street estate.

George A. Naddaff sought permission to convert a two-story carriage house to five condominiums on one of four lots that comprise the 193,000-square-foot parcel that was once part of the Riley estate. The carriage house has been used as a residence since before 1922, according to the Planning Department.

Atty. Robert Freeto, representing Naddaff, said he will withdraw the petition and resubmit a plan for six condominiums in the carriage house in accordance with Land Use Committee wishes.

The committee held out the increase in density in exchange for an agreement that would decide the future of the entire parcel.

The plan proposed by the committee would allow the carriage house conversion, an existing single-family house on a second lot, a conservation restriction on a lot near Bennington Street, and would prohibit development of the fourth lot to a single-family house after 10 years.

Atty. Jason Rosenberg, representing neighbors, said six condoniniums in the carriage house "cannot be tolerated" and he wants restrictions imposed now will not on the lot that be developed for 10 years.

Land Use Chairman Terry Morris said that although there will be another public hearing on the proposal, neighbors should not expect the Land Use Committee to change its decision.

Travel Talk

by Josephine Arria

What better time to go to Hawaii then when the cold weather sets in this coming winter. From September to December of this year, a typical charter to Hawaii may include the following. Spend a week in one of Waikiki's first calss hotels, where you will receive coffee each morning. A motorcoach will provide a sightseeing tour of Honolulu. You will receive lessons in Hula dancing, enjoy a Polynesian island lunch or dinner, and much more. Or, for a truly exotic and different vacation, take a charter to West Africa. Consult your travel agent for details and prices of comparable trips.

What better time to travel? Whenever you travel, it is the right time, and the right way to go is the BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., 305 A Washington St., Newton Corner. At BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., we have the staff, experience and personalized attention to handle every aspect of your trip so that you may enjoy every moment without worrying about nagging details. Wherever and whenever you wish to travel, come to BARCLAY INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL SERVICE, INC., where we are always "on the go." Open 9-5:30, Mon.-Fri., 'til 8 Thurs., 9-1 Sat. Tel. 244-8460. All standard credit cards accepted.

TRAVEL TIP: Departure dates for charters vary according to the time of year and the point of departure and equipment availability.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

REALTORS in 17 cities and towns in southwestern Norfolk County have launched an anti-vandalism campaign as this year's "Make America Better" project, enlisting the support of fifth and sixth grade students in their area.

As part of the program, the REALTORS are showing a film on vandalism at the more than 40 schools participating in the project. After viewing the film, distributed by the National Association of Realtors, the fifth and sixth graders are asked to create anti-vandalism posters, expressing their feelings on the subject.

A winning poster will be selected at each school to be displayed in a public place, and the winning students will be presented awards during the REALTORS' "Private Property Week", April 15-21.

The program is being conducted by members of Council I & M, a regional organization of the Brokers Institute, a division of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board.

Edward F. Smith of the Audrey C. Fields office and Karen Glaser of the Florence Kates office in Canton are coordinating the project as co-chairpersons of the council's Make America Better Committee.

Council I & M represents REALTORS in Bellingham, Canton, Dedham, East Milton, Foxboro, Franklin, Mansfield, Medfield, Medway, Millis, Milton, Norfolk, Norwood, Sharon, Walpole, Westwood, and Wrentham.

There's A Lot To Love At LEVITZ!

Part- or full-time, we have positions available for people who enjoy people—and don't enjoy being bored.

Your varied and interesting responsibilities will include a good amount of public contact in our front office and EDP department, telephone communications, some typing, and even the chance to use a 10-key CRT board as you work with our computerized records systems. To join one of the country's most dynamic retail organizations, you'll need accurate typing skill, enthusiasm, and a friendly attitude. For part-time people, hours can be arranged. For everyone, the atmosphere is congenial, the compensation good, and the work involving.

A lot of reasons to love working at Levitz.

Apply in person Monday-Friday.

NAME .....
ADDRESS ..... TOWN..... ZIP.....

Is your home . . .

Police from area towns suggest a number of things residents can do to protect their homes from potential burglars.

Suggested rules on what to do and what not to do include the following:

- Remove your name from your door, mailbox, or from anywhere else on your property. All an experienced burglar has to do is write down your name and street number and then call you later to verify if you are at home.
- Women who do not answer the telephone because "they're tired of talking and want to clean before supper" may give a scouting burglar the impression that no one is home and thereby encourage a surprise unwanted guest.
- Cut down hedges and remove stockade fences that may shield your property from the view of neighbors and passers-by.
- Do not leave shades drawn when you leave the house. If concerned about the sun fading the carpets' colors, you may shield them with contractor paper, which comes in rolls.
- If you are going away on a trip, call the police to let them know, but do not ask them to check your home more than once. Police say criminals quickly learn the check pattern and time their invasions. A watch cruise can spot the entrant better than a uniformed officer rattling the doorknob.
- Set and use an automatic variable light system that has a "dense" pattern. Don't leave a single-patterned light, even if it is automatic.
- Leave a radio talk show on.
- Stop all deliveries.
- Lock all windows. Strike a nail between lower and upper sashes. Place a screw in the track of sliding doors. Place a drop bar across a wide glass window or door or use a metal grill.
- Though it stretches and will eventually become opaque, plexiglass, police advise, is the perfect barrier to prevent window entry. Plexiglass is relatively inexpensive and easy to install.
- Replace locks with dead-bolts. However, if you are at home, leave keys in their locks to facilitate exit in case of fire.
- Leave outside lights burning if you are out for the evening. During an extended vacation, leave them on an automatic circuit.
- Do not allow newspapers to include your name in advance publicity of a club's or organization's event.
- Install a dual alarm that can detect both smoke and forced entry. Post doors and windows with notices that your residence has such alarms.

Burglars use a tablecloth or pillowcase to make transporting the stolen articles easier. It's the only time they're concerned about being neat.

Burglars change as society shifts

Crime carries a big price tag, one that is growing larger as society changes and criminals change with it.

The cost to the criminals when caught is high, but the cost to the community is higher still.

In 1978, the nationwide loss totaled $1.6 billion. The average dollar loss per burglary of a residential home was $526.

Nationally, adults were the offenders in 66 percent of the cleared burglaries, while persons under 18 were responsible for 34 percent.

The number of burglaries in Needham was 159 in 1978, 198 in 1979, and, as of April, 69 in 1980.

Dedham's burglaries numbered 227 in 1978, 292 in 1979, and 69 for 1980 up to the end of April.

Westwood had 160 burglaries in 1978, 170 in 1979, and 33 for 1980 for the same period of time—January to the end of April.

Norwood patrolman Albert Bishop, chief clerk, stated, "We (Norwood Police Department) don't keep track of the number of burglaries, though I used to. It became too much work."

Bishop referred to Sgt. Thomas Michienzi as a possible source for the information; however, Michienzi does not keep records of burglaries either.

According to Needham Police Detective Sgt. Robert Roman, local statistics seem to follow the national.

"Since women have returned to the work force, daytime burglaries have increased by 10 percent," he said.

On some streets, he said, as many as 20 houses are empty during the daytime. Another factor, he said, was that hedges and drawn shades provide privacy not only to homeowners, but also to burglars. The combination of privacy and the assurance that a home will probably be empty all day make the burglar's job much easier, Sgt. Roman stated.

Today's sophisticated criminal is frequently looking for a specific item, for which he has an "order".

According to Needham Police Lt. William Slow, a burglar will break into, enter, and leave empty-handed if, for example, he has an order for a 25-inch color television and finds only a 15-inch model.

The burglar of the 1980s may not exactly fit the image most people might have of him.

"He's usually well-dressed," Sgt. Roman said, "in a sports jacket or three-piece suit, and may carry an attache case, the latest emblem of respectability. And he's practicing his vocation between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"In fact," Sgt. Roman added, "if you go by appearances, you'd be pleased to have today's thief take your daughter to the school dance."

Frequently, the person who decides to make crime his vocation is a school dropout.

> 'Since women have returned to the work force, daytime burglaries have increased by 10 percent.'

Dropping out of school "could well be a signal that he has moved away from society," Sgt. Roman said. He added that this does not mean that all who leave school are going to become repeat offenders, but youths are less likely to find work without at least a high school diploma.

The teenager who commits a crime may have been "turned on" at a party or by peer pressure. He may have begun by pulling a prank or acting on a dare.

Lt. Slow also wondered if there were another factor. "Is there more social tolerance for the culprit" and less concern for the victim, he asked.

About 1963 or 1964, Slow said, housebreaks were so out of the ordinary that a burglary caused a neighborhood, if not town-wide, burst of concern.

In addition, the criminal in the mid-1960s was more narrowly defined and lacked the equipment and organization that marks the 1980 burglar.

The burglar of the 1980s, according to Slow, has more sophistication, is more knowledgeable about his marketplace, and has more mobility, which means that out-of-towners have the ability to move in and out of various communities with ease.

Another new development, Slow said, is that more women are involved in crime than in the past.

Just as criminals have become more knowledgeable, the police have developed scientific skills for more sophisticated investigations.

From the moment a call comes into headquarters, the police begin preparing for a "crime scene search." Footprints, fingerprints, palm prints, matchbook covers, identification of tools have all played a part in apprehending persons responsible for local housebreaks.

After conviction and imprisonment, a common thief, according to Needham Police Chief Louis Roman, may learn from fellow convicts how to become more adept in his "chosen field", but generally will not graduate to more severe crimes such as armed robbery.

"He has chosen his field," the chief said, "and not only will stay within it, but will either keep the habits that helped us apprehend him in the first place, or accrue another simple format."

And, according to Chief Roman, a thief, after release from prison, usually returns to the community with which he is familiar or goes to another similar locality.

All police departments agree that preventive measures are necessary and the best way to prevent an illegal entry is to place as many barriers as possible between the household and the potential invader.

The longer it takes a criminal to gain entry, the less likely he is to complete the crime.

Police also say that the more visible the home is, the greater the chances of apprehension.

Sgt. Roman stressed another prevention factor.

"We think that neighborhood awareness is a big help in apprehending a burglar before he has a chance to leave the scene," Sgt. Roman said.

"If a neighbor sees a stranger at a home, knowing the owners are away, and notifies us at once, there's a good chance we can not only prevent another burglary, but we frequently find that a single arrest will clear (solve) a number of pending similar offenses."

Lt. John Ford of Westwood concurred. "On a personal level," he said, "my neighbor and I watch each other's home during summer vacations which we coordinate as much as possible. However, if I have to be away during his two weeks, a third neighbor watches both houses. Incidentally, that includes physically checking the doors once a day, too."

. . . really a castle?

- Photograph furniture, jewelry, art, and anything else of value. One copy of each photograph should be in a safe deposit box or in an equally safe place outside your home; another should be with your insurance agent.
- Include large items such as oriental rugs in your photographic inventory, since identification is almost impossible without them.
- Put small valuables in a safe deposit box.
- Register all serial numbers with police or your insurance agent.
- Do not give information to strangers over the phone. On wrong number calls, do not tell the caller your number. Ask the caller what number he wants, his name, his number, and tell him that he has misdialed. If wrong number calls persist, notify the telephone company.
- Report broken street lights.
- Report to police strangers who ask questions about your neighbors and their whereabouts.
- Let police know about anything that is not usual in your neighborhood—strange cars, etc. Police would rather respond to many false alarms than miss one burglary.
- Tell a neighbor when you will be away and how to reach you in case of an emergency.
- Do not leave keys under doormats or in mailboxes or milk boxes. If you want, leave a key with a friend or neighbor.
- Make sure all cellar windows and doors have dead-bolt locks.
- Remember to stop all deliveries, including mail. The post office will hold your mail and deliveries for you.
- Neighborhood crime watches are successful deterrents, according to police, who advise residents who see someone committing a crime to report it immediately to police. Do not try to stop the crime yourself or to apprehend the suspect.
- If you are victimized, call the police from a telephone that is in an undisturbed room. Do not touch anything, do not start to clean up the mess; you may destroy valuable clues. If necessary, invite a neighbor to wait with you for police.
- If you are called to court as a witness, police emphasize, do testify. The accused, according to Needham Police Chief Louis Roman, may glower, grimace, or mouth imprecations at witnesses, but will not hurt them in or out of court.

A burglar, Chief Roman said, is basically afraid of the witness or witnesses and will avoid them.

"In all the years I've been with the Needham police force," Roman said, "I have never known a common house thief to even attempt revenge."

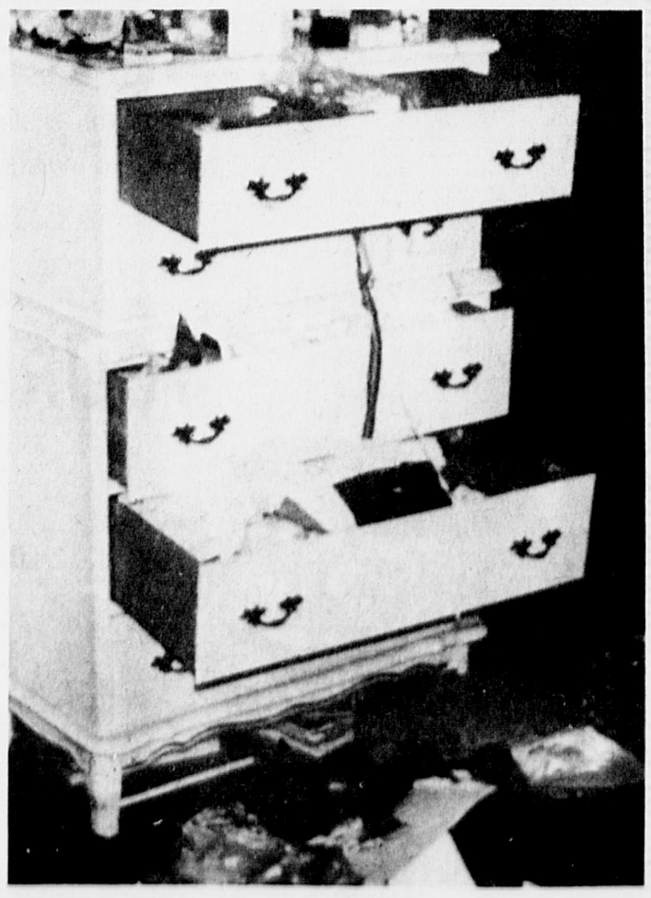

Most metal cabinets require little effort to twist open. A piece of wood can be used as a crowbar to reach valuable papers or money locked in the filing drawers.

Here entry was accomplished by smashing the old wall lathing and separating the doorframe from the wall so that the door could be lifted out of its frame.

The criminal does not usually enter with gentility. A forced entry is just that. In this case, the burglar split the door open where the glassed section meets the wooden half, snapping the chain lock.

The common thief is in too much of a hurry to be neat—nor does he care. Speed is imperative, so he pulls the bottom drawer open first and then those above. It's faster.

Mr. Merchant,

You've been in business for 5, 10, 20, 40 or maybe 100 years

SO WHY ADVERTISE?

Very simply, you should advertise to get business.

But why advertise when business is good? And, how can you afford to advertise when business is slow?

You should advertise when business is good to keep it that way; to keep ahead of the competion; to expand your product lines or sales area; add another location. Remember in business you can't stand still. If you try to stand still your competition is moving ahead and you are then actually slipping behind.

You should advertise when business is slow to attract new customers, to keep your old customers, to maintain your volume and momentum.

Newspaper advertising is a mighty salesman that takes your message right into your customers' homes . . . where buying decisions are made. In a very real sense, advertising helps keep you in business.

YOUR BUSINESS IS OUR BUSINESS . . .

Robert S. Bell

Services were held Wednesday, June 25, in Grace Episcopal Church for Robert S. Bell.

Mr. Bell, 67, who had been in a Newton nursing home for the past 18 years, suffered a heart attack Monday, June 23, and died.

A native of Newton, he was a former resident of Natick and a former salesman for Land O' Lakes. He was also a World War II veteran.

Mr. Bell is survived by his daughter, Roberta L. of Medway; and three sisters, Phoebe A., Martha J. and Elizabeth S. Bell, all of Newton.

Thomas V. Cleveland

Funeral services were held Tuesday, June 24, in Eliot Church for Thomas Vose Cleveland, a real estate agent in the Newton area for more than 50 years.

Mr. Cleveland, 81, of Weston, died Friday, June 20. He was a 1921 graduate of Dartmouth College and the Tuck School of Business, 1922.

He was a director of Newton Cooperative Bank, a corporator of the Mutual Bank for Savings, a trustee of the Cousens Fund, director of the Newton Boys' Club, former president of the Newton Real Estate Board, a member of the Newton Rotary Club, and a member of Brae Burn Country Club.

Active in Dartmouth alumni affairs, he served his class as president and bequest chairman. He was a longtime member of the Eliot Church of Newton, and served as co-chairman of a committee to secure funds for building the church after it was destroyed in a fire in 1956.

In 1975 he was awarded a life membership by the Boston Real Estate Board.

Mr. Cleveland is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bettina Cleveland; and three daughters, Mrs. Joan Taylor of Chagrin Falls, Ohio, Constance Cleveland of Wellesley and Mrs. Bettina Sechrest of Wellesley Hills.

Peter Donavan

Memorial services were held Friday, June 20, in Central Congregational Church, Newtonville, for Peter F. Donavan.

Mr. Donavan, 91, of West Newton, died Tuesday, June 17. A former auditor of the Boston & Albany Railroad, Mr. Donavan had lived in West Newton for 50 years. He retired in 1953.

Mr. Donavan is survived by his wife, Mrs. Anne Donavan; two sons, Dr. Ellis J. of Needham, Peter F. of Bennington, Vt.; two daughters, Janice Neal of West Newton and Polly Hoover of West Newton; 19 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Eugene C. Eppinger

Private funeral services were to be held for Dr. Eugene C. Eppinger, 77, of Chestnut Hill.

Dr. Eppinger, associated for many years with Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, died Monday, June 23.

He was a clinical professor emeritus of Harvard Medical School and was a 1926 graduate of Williams College and 1930 graduate of Harvard Medical School.

Except for four years service in the Pacific with the Army Medical Corps, his associations with Peter Bent Brigham and Harvard continued for nearly 40 years. On retirement in 1965, he gave up teaching, but continued his practice on the staff of Harvard University Health Services until 1977.

He is survived by his wife, Catherine; two daughters, Mrs. Thomas Ball of Gatesmills, Ohio, and Mrs. Phillip Renkes of Morrison, Ill., and four grandchildren.

Flossie Estelle

Funeral services were to be held at 1 p.m. Thursday, June 26, in the Eaton Funeral Home, 1351 Highland Ave., Needham, for Mrs. Flossie (Toone) Estelle.

Mrs. Estelle, 101, died Monday, June 23, in the Newton-Wellesley Nursing Home. Born in Needham on Oct. 18, 1879, she was a resident of Newton for 70 years and a member of Newton Highlands Congregational Church.

Widow of Ephraim Estelle, Mrs. Estelle was the mother of Viola Polanski and James Estelle, both deceased. She is survived by one niece, Florence Moran of West Medford; and a nephew, Clifford Lesley of Springfield.

Burial is in Needham Cemetery.

Guilda Juliano

A funeral mass was celebrated Saturday, June 21, in Our Lady's Church, for Guilda Juliano.

Mrs. Juliano, 86, of Newton, died Wednesday, June 18, in Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Born in Italy, she had come to Newton at an early age.

Mrs. Juliano was the wife of the late Michael A. Juliano. She is survived by three sisters, Adelphi DeFazio and Attilia Benedictis, both of Newton, and Florence Ferrine of Brockton; and a brother, Anthony DeNapoli Jr., of Cohasset.

James E. Kerr

A funeral mass was celebrated Monday, June 23, in St. Bernard's Church for James E. Kerr.

Mr. Kerr, 59, director of engineering and maintenance with the Mass. Department of Public Health, died of a stroke Friday, June 20 in Norwood Hospital. Born in West Newton, he attended local schools and received an engineering degree from Northeastern.

During World War II, he served with the U.S. Army as a private first class and in the coast artillery. He was a former member of the Norwood Planning Board and a resident of Norwood.

Mr. Kerr is survived by his wife Margaret; a son, John D. of East Walpole; a daughter, Rosina P. of Norwood; two sisters, Anne K. of Auburndale and Mary O'Brien of West Newton; and two brothers, Richard of Concord and David of West Newton.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Mary Alice Logan

A memorial service was to be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, June 26, in Trinity Church, Copley Square, for Mrs. Mary Alice (Walker) Logan.

Mrs. Logan, 85, of Waban, died Sunday, June 22, in a Newton nursing home after a long illness.

Born in Keighly, England, Mrs. Logan was a graduate of the Keighly Girls Grammar School and emigrated to this country in the early 1900's.

She was a past president of the Dartmouth Women's Club, and the Daughters of the British Empire. She was a member of the Windsor Club of Waban, the Presidents Club of Massachusetts, the International Institute and the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Washington, D.C.

She is survived by four sons, Alexander of Los Angeles and Donald of Boston, Robert Alexander of Newton and Norman Alexander of Weston; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Elizabeth Murphy

Funeral services were held Saturday, June 21, in Our Lady's Church for Elizabeth (Charlton) Murphy.

Mrs. Murphy, 85, formerly of Newton, died Wednesday, June 18, in Huggins Hospital, Moultonboro, N.H.

Widow of Dennis Murphy, Mrs. Murphy is survived by her daughter, Denise Maguire, a sister, a brother, and three grandchildren. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Dr. Langdon Parsons

He was a 1921 graduate of Yale and a 1927 graduate of the Harvard Medical School. He served his internship and residency at Massachusetts General Hospital, where he was responsible for one of the first successful operations for cancer of the pancreas.

A memorial service was held Wednesday, June 25 in Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill, for Dr. Langdon Parsons, a surgeon and gynecologist.

Dr. Parsons, 80, of Chestnut Hill, died unexpectedly Saturday, June 21, at home.

A World War II Army veteran, Dr. Parsons received the Legion of Merit as a lieutenant colonel for his work in maxillo-facial reconstruction.

He was the coauthor of "The Atlas on Pelvic Operations" and a textbook on gynecology, both of which were translated into several languages.

He was a member of numerous professional organizations and societies and also the Country Club, the Tavern Club and the Harvard Club of Boston.

Dr. Parsons is survived by his wife, Elizabeth Parsons; a son, Jeffrey of Wilmette, Ill.; a daughter, Clare P. Weaver of Wayzata, Minn.; and several grandchildren.

Parents' talking helps youngsters learn to read

By ALICE NOBLE

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A national reading specialist says parents can help their children learn to read by constantly talking and reading to them.

"Reading is all around us," said Carole Riggs, a consultant from Dekalb County in Georgia and author of a new textbook series on the subject.

"You can read the labels in the grocery store or stop signs on the ride home.

"You should spend a lot of time talking to children and listening. Sometimes we just talk to the child rather than listening to him."

Mrs. Riggs said parents should start educating their children from infancy, surrounding them with things that challenge the mind and cause them to think.

"In the beginning it may just be things that make the child's eyes move or a game for the child to find a hidden toy," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Riggs said the ability to read is essential because "if you are unable to read, you are unable to function in today's society.

"Reading means getting meaning from a page, not just getting words," she said. "Children can decode words but often cannot comprehend. We need to recognize our ultimate goal is to get meaning."

Mrs. Riggs, who did her doctoral thesis at the University of Georgia on parental involvement in reading, has developed a five-part program called CHILD.

"'C' stands for communicate," she said. "You should communicate acceptance and positive things like: 'I like you. You may not be all I want you to be, but I like you.'"

Mrs. Riggs said "H" means the parent should help his child understand word relationships such as on-off and oral language development.

"I" stands for interest.

"You should interest your child in reading by reading to him," she said. "Help him to learn what language is and that what is said can be read."

"L" is for library. Mrs. Riggs said children should be surrounded by books. She recommends letting children have their own personal libraries.

"D" is for developing a sense of responsibility. Mrs. Riggs said parents should "help the child recognize he is responsible for himself and his actions."

She stresses the importance of parents as role models. Parents' attitudes toward reading — especially if parents dislike reading — will be picked up by the child, she added.

Timing is also important, she said.

"There is a teachable moment, when the child shows inquisitiveness and wants to learn. Rather than stopping children in the middle of play to teach them something, you should answer questions and respond to their interests."

She said involvement also helps parents recognize the child as a person.

"They're sometimes seen as a thing or an object, not as a person with feelings and personality," she said. "Educational games help parents become aware of the uniqueness of the individual."

Solar house has 3 sides nestled into side of hill

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — The home where Jill and Tom Newhouse live is bright, sunny and airy. It also is three-quarters underground.

Newhouse, an industrial designer, quit his job and spent five months building the earth-sheltered home west of Grand Rapids.

The solar house has three sides nestled into the side of a hill. It is covered with a thin layer of sod. It won a federal Housing and Urban Development design award.

"Underground homes — so many of them are miserable looking," Newhouse said. "People don't live well in caves.

"Natural light is required by people. Truly underground homes are not pleasant but earth-sheltered homes make sense.

"This type of structure is very site-oriented and site-conscious because you need hills," said Newhouse, 30. "We've done minimal environmental change and our energy comes from all free, renewable sources."

The poured concrete home has a wall of large windows and is solar heated. Newhouse said he uses a wood-burning stove on cold winter days and on occasion turns on his electric heat backup system.

Newhouse said it cost him $35 to heat the entire home during the coldest month of the winter. His stove consumed a cord and a half of wood all winter.

"The electric backup heat comes on when the temperature goes down to 60 degrees," Newhouse said. "Usually we don't need it with the cast iron stove, though.

"This house uses wood, solar and electric energy but we use electricity discriminately," Newhouse said. "It's appropriate in Michigan to burn wood because it's a resource we have a lot of."

The home has a large room with areas used as a kitchen and dining room, a living room and a bedroom for the couple's infant daughter.

At night the window wall is covered with styrofoam-type boards that prevent heat from escaping after sunset.

Newhouse said the large windows also provide natural illumination so electric lights need not burn constantly.

Off the large main room is the master bedroom, a bathroom with a compost toilet and an area the couple wants to turn into a sauna.

The lower level of the house has been divided into a large area Newhouse uses for finishing work.

Newton Centre women give glee club $100

NEWTON — The Highland Glee Club, at its recent annual business meeting, was delighted to receive a gift of $100 from the Newton Centre Women's Club, Mrs. William Lane Bruce, President.

The announcement was a focal point of this meeting marking the end of the Club's 72nd concert season. Also noted at the meeting was Highland's 1980 scholarship award, a check for $300 presented earlier to Jean Goffi, soprano and senior at Needham High School. Jean plans to by Stewart J. Dewey of Watertown, club member and Cathedral trustee.

Elected Club officers for 1980-81 were: Merrill Mack, Weston, President; Deke Lewis, Framingham, vicepresident; G. Sherwood Norton, Auburndale, secretary; Stewart L. Leach, Weston, treasurer; John Slavin, Wellesley, music committee chairman; Jack Croley, Everett, concert committee chairman; Ken MacRae, Weston, active membership committee chairman; Herbert Crocker, West Newton, sponsorin9 membership committee chairman; John S. Wyeth, Needham, publicity chairman; Ralph L. Wheeler, Newton Centre, librarian and Charles Frank, Jr., Waltham, historian.

New singers are always welcome. Anyone wishing information on joining Highland Glee Cub Club should contact Ken MacRae at 893-8750 or John Wyeth at 444-2663.

Life in river mill towns told by senior citizens

NEWTON — Just before Louis Belval of Northbridge passed away last year, he was interviewed at length for the first issue of Spun Yarns, a journal devoted to preserving the memories of senior citizens living in the 15 mill towns along the Blackstone River in Massachusetts.

A history text might list the fact that the Blackstone Valley was bustling with mill activity around the turn of the century. Spun Yarns is much more personal.

When he was 12, Louis Belval helped his sisters work at the Linwood Mill. "I had four of my sisters weaving at the Linwood Mill. My sisters used to sit on the end, and all the machines were driven by belts, and on the end of the loom was this huge pulley, with a big belt that went around. It circulated air. Course it was hotter than blue blazes because, in order for cotton to be able to stay together and be able to work it, you had to have a high humidity and a high heat. In other words, most of them mills ran on 80-80: 80 degrees and 80 percent humidity," he said.

"This is not so today," Belval's story continues, "because when you see a piece of fabric for a shirt, or anything else, it'll say '60 percent cotton and 40 percent polyester.' But they don't put that polyester in for your benefit. You know what they put the polyester in for? The polyester fibers are so much stronger than the cotton fibers, they can double-speed the looms, double-speed the spinning frames, and get twice as much fabric out."

From age 16 to 19, Louis Belval worked at the Whitin Machine Works as an apprentice toolmaker. "And for this, I was paid the princely sum, the first year, of 24 cents an hour for a forty-hour week; the second year 26 cents an hour; and the third year, 28 cents an hour. Then you had big ceremony, and they gave you a big diploma. I was a first-class toolmaker and got the princely sum of 50 cents an hour! This was in 1924...I was hoping that maybe soneday I would make a penny a minute." Belval worked for the Whitin Machine Works for "50 years, 6 months, and 5 days," retiring in 1970.

All the other stories of everyday life and work are told in the same personal way, creating a vivid picture turn-of-the-century life in the Blackstone Valley. Pat Fleming and Jim Gorman of Grafton remember the touring baseball teams. Marguerite Weber Yankee talks about having her children at home. Betty Victor of Upton describes leaving Maine and coming to work for the Knowlton Hat Factory: "We took the train to Portland, we took the boat to Boston and then somebody met us in Boston, and then we had to take the train to North Grafton, and they came up in a big truck and picked us up—like animals!"
